BOMBAY.

Between the first and second proviso to sub-Rule (1) of Rule 9 of Order 13, the following proviso shall be inserted, namely:—

"Provided also that a copy of the decree and of the judgment filed with memorandum of appeal under Order 41, Rule 1, may be returned after the appeal has been disposed of by the Court."

PATNA.

Add the following as sub-Rule 1 (a) in Rule 9:—

"(1-A) Where a document is produced by a person who is not a party in the proceeding, the Court may require the party on whose behalf the document is produced, to substitute a certified copy for the original as hereinbefore provided."

MADRAS.

Add the following as sub-Rule (3):—

"(3) Every application under the first proviso to sub-Rule (1) above shall be made by a verified petition setting forth facts justifying the immediate return of the original and the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for costs of any or all the parties to the application, including any costs "incidental to the preparation of the certified copy to be substituted for the original" and may further direct that any party against whom any order for costs is made shall have such costs, if paid, "included as costs in the cause".

LAHORE.

To sub-Rule (1), the following further proviso was added:—

"Provided further that the cost of such certified copy shall be recoverable as a fine from the party at whose instance the original document has been produced."

NAGPUR.

Order 13, Rule 9.

Insert the following as sub-Rule (2) of Rule 9 and re-number the present sub-Rule (2) as sub-Rule (3):—

"Where the document has been produced by a person who is not a party to the suit, the Court may, and, at the request of the person applying for the return of the document, shall order the party at whose instance the document was produced to pay the costs of preparing certified copy." O. 13, R. 9, Notes 1—3.

Synopsis.

1. Legislative changes.
2. Scope of the rule.
3. Stamp duty on copies furnished under this rule.

Petition for return, forged—Action under S. 476, Cr. P. C. See Note 2, F.-N. (1).

1. Legislative changes.—

The effect of the principal changes in the rule is:—

(1) In appealable cases the Court under the present Code should not only see that the time for preferring an appeal has expired but also be satisfied that no appeal has been preferred.

(2) In the case of return of documents before the time fixed by this rule, the Court under the present Code must also take an undertaking for the production of the original if and when required. The words "And undertakes to produce the original if required to do so" are new.

2. Scope of the rule.—This rule provides for the return of documents placed on the record, whereas R. 7 provides for return of documents not placed on the record. The return under this rule is made subject to conditions intended to secure the preservation of records for use by appellate Court if necessary.

The act of returning documents under this rule is merely ministerial and no evidence on oath is required, if there is a proper application for return.[1] Under the second proviso for sub-R. 1 no document shall be returned which, by force of the decree, has become wholly void or useless. But where a suit has been allowed to be withdrawn, the document on which the plaintiff sued does not become void or useless and must be returned.[2]

3. Stamp duty on copies furnished under this rule.—There is a distinction between a copy substituted under R. 5 and that substituted under this rule. The latter is liable to stamp duty if required by law.[1]

10. R. [S. 137.] (1) The Court may of its own motion, and may in its discretion upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either form its own records or from any other Court, the record of any other suit or proceeding, and inspect the same. O. 13, R. 10.

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts.

Local Amendment.

RANGOON.

In Order 13, Rule 10, sub-Rule (3) shall be re-numbered as (5) and the following shall be inserted as sub-Rules (3) and (4):—

(3) If the Court thinks fit to send for the record, it shall do so by sending a formal proceeding to the Court whose record is required. No summons to produce any record shall be issued to any Record-keeper, Chief Clerk, or official of any Court.

(4) Whenever a Judge sends for the record of another suit or case, or other official papers, and uses any part of such record or papers as evidence in a trial before him, he shall direct that an authenticated copy of the part so used shall be put up with the trial record, and shall further direct at the expense of which party such copy shall be made.

In Order 13, the following shall be inserted as Rules 10-A and 10-B:—

10-A. Exhibits, with their accompanying lists, shall not be filed with the record until after the termination of the trial.

10-B. If any exhibit included in the index of contents of the trial record is withdrawn after judgment, the fact should be noted in the column of remarks of the index, and it should be stated whether a copy has been substituted or not.

Synopsis

1 Scope and object of the rule.
2. Discretion of Court.
3. "From any other Court."
4. Affidavit in support of the application.

Criminal case record. See Note 3, F.-N. (1).
Records from Collector's office. See Note 2, F.-N. (3).
Revision. See Note 2, Pt. (6).

1. Scope and object of the rule.—The power given under this rule may be exercised also by an appellate Court.[1] A Court is not bound to send for the whole of the records but only such documents will be sent for as are specifically mentioned in the application.[2]

Order 13, Rule 10—Note 1.

(1) Juggernath Sahoo v. Mahomed Hossein, (1871) 15 Suth W R 173 (174) [But not where party omitted to use document sent for in the Lower Court]; Hira Singh v. Ram Lal, 1894 All W N 3 (3).

(2) Jaookee Beebee v. Habeebul Hossein, 1864 Suth W R 272 (273).

Documents do not become evidence in the case by the mere fact of being received into the Court under this rule. They must be admitted in evidence by the Court like any other document.[3] See sub-R. 3. O.13, R.10, Notes 1—4.

2. Discretion of Court.—The Court has a discretion to grant or refuse an application under this rule.[1] It should not, however, refuse to send for necessary documents on a proper application,[2] nor, having ordered them to be sent for, omit to actually send for them to be used by the party as evidence.[3] But a Court is not bound to send for a document when the party neglects or fails to make an application[4] or where he could, but would not employ other means of production of the documents under the Code.[5]

An omission to exercise the discretion in favour of a party in a proper case is a good ground in an appeal or revision provided the party has been prejudiced thereby.[6]

3. "From any other Court."—The Court from which a document is sent for need not necessarily be a Civil Court.[1] But it must be a Court.[2] A Court from which records are sent for under this rule has no discretion to refuse to send them.[3]

4. Affidavit in support of the application.—The rule as to the contents of an affidavit under this rule must be strictly complied with. An application without setting forth the necessary grounds satisfactorily in the affidavit will be rejected.[1]

Provisions as to documents applied to material objects.

Add the following to the end of Order 13:—

12. Every document not written in the Court vernacular or in English, which is produced (a) with a plaint or (b) at the first hearing or (c) at any other time tendered in evidence in any suit, appeal, or proceeding, shall be accompanied by a correct translation of the document into the Court vernacular. If any such document is written in the Court vernacular but in characters other than the ordinary Persian or Nagri characters in use, it shall be accompanied by a correct transliteration of its contents into the Persian or Nagri character.

13. When a document included in the list, prescribed by Rule 1, has been admitted in evidence, the Court shall, in addition to making the endorsement prescribed in Rule 4 (1), mark such document with serial figures in the case of documents admitted as evidence for a plaintiff, and with serial letters in the case of documents admitted as evidence for a defendant, and shall initial every such serial number or letter. When there are two or more parties defendants, the documents of the first party defendant may be marked A1, B1, C1, etc., AA1, BB1, etc., and those of the second A2, B2, C2, etc., AA2, BB2, etc. When a number of documents of the same nature is admitted, as for example a series of receipts for rent, the whole series shall bear one figure or capital letter or letters and a small figure or small letter shall be added to distinguish each paper of the series.

ORDER XIV.

SETTLEMENT OF ISSUES AND DETERMINATION OF SUIT ON ISSUES OF LAW OR ON ISSUES AGREED UPON.

Framing of issues.

R. 1. [S. 146.] (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence.

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue.

(4) Issues are of two kinds: (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

(5) At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend.

(6) Nothing in this rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence. O. 14, R 1. Notes 1—2.

1. Legislative changes.—

In sub-Rule (2), the words "or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence" are new.

2. Scope and object of the rule.—The plaint and the written statement constitute the pleadings in a case and mark the first stage at which the differences between the parties are placed before the Court. The Court itself may also at the first hearing examine the parties in order to ascertain with precision, the propositions of law or fact on which the parties are at variance;[1] and on such questions issues have to be framed and recorded.[2]

The framing of issues has a very important bearing on the trial and decision of a case. In the first place it is the issues fixed and not the pleadings that guide the parties in the matter of adducing evidence.[3] Thus when a point has been the subject of an issue, the parties will not be heard to say that the point was not disputed and so required no proof.[4] Secondly, the Court cannot refuse to decide a point on which an issue has been framed and evidence given by the parties,[5] even if the point involved is not mentioned in the pleadings.[6] Conversely the Court should not decide a suit on a matter on which no issue has been raised.[7] Finally, if the case goes in appeal it must be dealt with by the appellate Court on the issues settled for trial[8] and not on a point on which there is no issue.[9] It is therefore essential to the right decision of a case that appropriate issues should be framed and tried.[10]

Sub-R. (1) declares that an issue arises when a material proposition of law or fact is affirmed by one party and denied by the other,[11] and Sub-R. (2) defines what material propositions are.

The issues should be confined to points necessary for the proper trial and disposal of the case and should not be framed with respect to points not so necessary.[11-a] No issue need be framed on a point of law which is perfectly clear;[12] nor is the Court bound to grant an issue on a point not arising on the pleadings.[13] But when the pleadings raise points with sufficient clearness, issues should be framed on them though they may not have been put in the pleadings in any particular form.[14] Sub-R. (3) declares what each issue should contain. The issues should be so framed as to embrace the whole dispute in the suit[15] but only to cover the points in dispute and to cover each point once only.[16]

It is primarily the duty of the judge to frame the proper issues in a case[17] and the judge must apply his mind and understand the facts before framing them.[18] Where issues have already been framed in a suit, the fact that the judge who framed the issues has been transferred will not make it obligatory on the incoming judge to frame issues again.[10]

Sub-R. (6) relates to cases where the defendant makes no defence. The Court is not bound to frame and record issues when the defendant is ex parte and no written statement has been put in.[20] But even in ex parte cases, if there is any room for doubt about any matter, the Court has been held, under certain circumstances, to be bound to inform the plaintiff specifically what points he has to prove.[21]

As to particular issues arising in certain kinds of suits, see the undermentioned cases.[22]

A point alleged by the plaintiff and admitted by the defendant cannot be said to be in issue and a decision can be given on the basis of such admission without an issue.[23] Averments contained in the plaint which are not traversed in the written statement and as to which no issue has been asked for will be deemed to be admitted.[24]

3. Issues between co-defendants.—It is contrary to practice to frame and try issues between co-defendants.[1] Where, however, such an issue is necessary for giving appropriate relief to the plaintiff, it should be framed and tried.[2]

4. Omission to frame issues.—A Court commits a grave irregularity in proceeding to the final hearing of a case without settling issues therein.[1] But the mere omission to frame issues is not necessarily fatal to the trial of the suit.[2] It is an irregularity which may or may not be a material one. If such omission has affected the disposal of the case on the merits it will be a ground for remanding the case for a new trial. But if on the other hand parties have not been prejudiced by the omission[3] and substantial justice has been done in the case notwithstanding the omission to frame issues,[4] the decision will not be set aside or remanded for a new trial. Thus a decision will not be interfered with in the following cases on the ground of issue not having been framed:—

(1) Where the issue omitted relates to a point not necessary for the right determination of the case.[5]

(2) Where, in spite of the omission of an issue, the parties are alive to the point, have adduced evidence on it, and have discussed it in the trial Court.[6] Thus in a case where no specific issue was raised on a point but it was treated as if it arose in the suit and it had been put in issue in another suit between the same parties, it was held that evidence in that suit could be considered to determine the question where no surprise was caused thereby.[7]

(3) Where, in spite of the omission, the party affected had notice of the point and had opportunity to adduce evidence to meet it.[8] or

(4) Where the omission was due to the deliberate conduct of the party affected.[9]

On the other hand where there has been no trial at all or only an imperfect trial on the point as a consequence of the omission of an issue on it, the decision will be set aside.[10] In such cases the appellate Court should frame the proper issues and remand the case for re-trial on them.[11] Where an issue already framed, though in terms covering the main question in the case, does not sufficiently direct the attention of the parties to it, and may thereby have prevented a party from adducing evidence on it, the proper course is to frame fresh issues and to remand the case for re-trial on them.[12] O. 14, R 1, Notes 4—7.

5. Wrong issues.—Where wrong issues have been framed in a suit and the suit has been disposed of on the findings on those issues, the decision will be set aside in appeal and the suit remanded for re-trial after framing proper issues.[1] This, however, will not be done where, in spite of the wrong issues, the points have been correctly understood by all the parties[2] or where all the available evidence has been adduced on the necessary points and duly discussed.[3]

6. Issues by consent.—Where the issues raised in a suit have been consented to by a party, then the decision cannot be objected to by him on the ground that the issues are wrong or defective or unnecessary.[1] Similarly where the parties affected by the wrong issue have waived their objections thereto, the decision will not be interfered with.[2]

7. Abandonment of issue.—It is open to the parties to abandon issues, thereby waiving the points raised therein. Such abandonment may be express or implied. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that Courts are not bound to raise issues suo motu on questions of fact where parties do not ask for them, that the omission to raise such issues implies an abandonment of such questions by the party interested, but that, where the question is one of law, it is incumbent on the Court to frame proper issues on such questions.[1] The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, broadly held that it would be unsafe to presume, from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues an intention on the part of the party to admit the fact which the other party was bound to prove.[2]

Even on points raised in the pleadings, the conduct of a party may, in certain circumstances, amount to abandonment.[3] A pleader duly appointed to conduct a case on behalf of his client has full authority to abandon an issue raised on behalf of his client and the latter will be bound by such abandonment.[4]

8. Delay in raising issue.—R. 5 gives the Court power to raise issues or amend or strike out issues at any time. The mere fact that a particular issue was raised at a late stage of the suit will be immaterial if the parties had sufficient opportunity to adduce evidence and the Court was in a position to pronounce judgment on it.[1]

9. Issue not raised in the pleadings but in evidence.—A relief not founded on the pleadings should not ordinarily be granted. But as has already been pointed out, there is nothing irregular in a Court granting relief on matters not set forth in the pleadings where they are comprised in the issues and have been put into evidence.[1]

Where a material point has not been raised in the pleadings and is not comprised in the issues originally framed, but appears for the first time in evidence, the Court may frame an issue on it and decide it[2] after giving the party affected an opportunity to meet it.[3]

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "or any part thereof" are new.

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.—Ordinarily a Court is not under any obligation as to the order in which it is to try the issues raised before it, and has the right to dispose of the issues in any way which it considers most likely to be conducive to the ascertainment of truth.[1] There are however, two reservations. The first is that in appealable cases, the Court should as far as possible decide on all the issues joined, inasmuch as a piecemeal trial might lead to protracted litigation and repeated appeals in the same suit.[2] The second is that contained in this rule, which prescribes that where issues of law going to the root of the case and capable of being decided without evidence, arise, the Court is bound to try those issues first and may in its discretion postpone the settlement of the issues of the fact until after the issues of law have been determined.[3] The rule casts on the Court the duty of determining whether circumstances exist in each particular case, for the exercise of the power conferred therein.[4] Where a party suggests that the suit can be disposed of on the hearing of a preliminary issue, the proper procedure is to set down the case for settlement of issues and on that day decide which, if any, of the issues can be decided in the above manner.[5]

The present rule, no doubt, contemplates the procedure to be followed at the issue stage: But O. 15, R. 3 empowers the judge to proceed to determine issues of law at any subsequent stage also,[6] so that even if issues of fact have been settled, a judge commits no irregularity if he proceeds to determine issues of law postponing the trial of the issues of fact.[7]

At the hearing of a case on a preliminary issue, the party by whom it is raised has the right to begin.[8]

The trial of issues of fact will not be stayed pending appeal on the decision on law except upon very strong grounds.[9]

An issue requiring evidence is not a preliminary issue which can be dealt with under this rule.[10] Where all the issues are issues of fact, the Court has

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.
3. Issue not to be inconsistent with the pleadings.

Allegation on oath. See Note 2, Pt. (4).

1. Legislative changes.—

The word "pleadings" in clause (b) has been substituted for the words "in the plaint or in the written statement (if any) tendered in the suit" which occurred in the corresponding portion of the old section.

2 Scope and applicability of the rule.—In Eshenchunder v. Shamcharan,[1] their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that "the determinations in a cause should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in, or consistent with, the case thereby made." In order to provide against failure of justice upon technical rules of pleadings and to enable the Court to frame issues on correct points of dispute, this rule prescribes that the Courts are to base the issues not only on the pleadings only but on the other materials referred to in the rule as well.[2] Owing to the infelicitous mode of drawing up pleadings prevalent in this country, the real points in dispute are often missed or obscured and therefore even if the pleadings are bad it is the duty of the judge to ascertain these points clearly and frame issues accordingly.[3] The proper "materials" that may be taken into consideration under this rule are:—

Charan, (1915) 26 Ind Cas 954 (957): 20 Cal L Jour 426. See Katuru Seshagiri Rao v. Katuru Venkatakrishna Rao, 1932 Mad W N 331 (332) [Such an issue not to be tried before framing all necessary issues]; Sowkabai v. Tukoji Rao Holkar, 1932 Bom 128 (129): 34 Bom L R 6: 56 Bom 224: 137 Ind Cas 362 [There is no power to frame a preliminary issue of fact].

(1) Allegations made on oath by the parties or any persons present on their behalf and statements made by pleaders appearing for the parties[4] [Cl. (a)]; O. 14, R. 3, Note 2.

(2) Allegations in answers to interrogatories[4-a] [Cl. (b)]; and

(3) Documents filed by parties [Cl. (c)].

Under R. 4 the judge can summon witnesses and documents and examine them before framing issues. In R. 5 provision is made for amendment, addition and striking out of issues in the course of the trial.

These "materials" mentioned in the rule are only intended to enable the Court to ascertain the contentions of the parties with precision,[5] i.e., to elucidate points which are ambiguous or obscure.[6] They cannot enlarge the scope of the pleadings so as to enable the Court to raise an issue on a point not at all raised in the pleadings.[7] Issues may, however, be based on such materials, as for instance the oral examination of the parties or their pleaders, notwithstanding the fact that the allegation of fact contained in such examination differs from that contained in the pleadings.[8] Further, the Court cannot refuse to enquire into a plea raised by plaintiff's vakil in reply to a question put to him by the Court even though such a plea has not been advanced in the original plaint.[9] Also where a plaint has not set out the true facts, a plea raised by the defendant in his examination cannot be refused on the ground that it is not found in the written statement.[10]

The result of the exhaustive provisions contained in this rule is that if in spite of all these a point or plea has not been raised or agitated in the trial Court, it will not ordinarily be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal.[11]

The provisions of this rule do not apply where the defendant is ex-parte.[12]

3. Issue not to be inconsistent with the pleadings.—The issue raised by the Court should not be inconsistent with the allegations contained in the pleadings.[1] Thus on a plea of forgery of a document, no issue can be raised as to whether it was executed under coercion or undue influence.[2] But an issue as to undue influence is not inconsistent with a plea of fraud.[3]

4. Appeal.—An order refusing to frame an issue asked for by a party is not appealable either under the Code[1] or under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent as a "Judgment."[2]

Synopsis.

1 Legislative changes. 2. Scope and applicability of the rule.

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "to be fixed by the Court" which occurred in the old section have been omitted.
2. The words "subject to the rules contained in the Indian Evidence Act "which occurred in the old section have been substituted by the words "subject to any law for the time being in force".
3. The words "in whose hands it may be" which occurred in the old section have been changed into "in whose possession or power it is".

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.—S. 163 of the Indian Evidence Act does not apply to a document produced under this rule by one party at the instance of the other party.[1]

Power to amend, and strike out, issues.

R. 5. [S. 149.] (1) The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the matters in controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed.

(2) The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree, strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced.

Variance in proof, pleadings and issues. See Order 6.

1. Legislative changes.—

The word "controversy" which occurred in the old section has been changed into "matters in controversy".

2. Scope and object of the rule.—This rule provides for amending issues, framing additional issues and striking out issues in the course of the trial of a suit. A Court trying a civil action has inherent jurisdiction to take cognisance of questions going to the root of the subject-matter in controversy between the parties at any stage of the trial.[1] But before doing so, the Court should, frame and record issues on such questions.[2]

This rule does not enable the re-opening of issues already closed; in other words, a permission to raise an additional issue would not empower the party to let in additional evidence on issues already closed.[3]

3. Where an amendment of issues and the framing of new issues is obligatory.—Where an amendment of an issue or an additional issue is necessary for determining the matter in controversy between the parties, it is obligatory on the Court under the latter portion of sub-R. (1) to make such amendments of issues or to frame such additional issues. The principle underlying this provision is that Courts are bound to take into consideration all the rights of parties whether legal or equitable.[1] Thus where the pleadings and proof necessarily lead to one or more particular issues, it is the duty of the Court, if they do not come by surprise to the other side, to raise such issues and give relief thereon.[2] Similarly, where a matter is fairly within the scope of the pleadings and important for the decision of the substantial dispute between the parties, it is equally the duty of the Court to frame issue on it and decide it.[3] For illustrations of this principle, see the cases noted below.[4] If the issue already framed do not clearly bring out the points in controversy between the parties[5] or if by inadvertance or other causes, the recorded issues do not enable the Court to try the whole case on the merits,[6] the issues should be amended or new issues framed in order to be able to give a decision on the real points in dispute.

4. Where amendments of issues and the framing of additional issues is discretionary.—The first portion of sub-R. 1 leaves it to the discretion of the Court to amend issues or frame additional issues in certain cases not falling within the obligatory provision. Where no injustice would be done to either party, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, under special circumstances, may allow issues to be raised upon matters which do not come within the proper scope of the pleadings.[1] The same discretion applies in the matter of amendment of issues also.[2] This discretion is, however, subject to several restrictions. Thus a party, having set up one case and failed in it, will not be allowed to ask for issues to be raised to suit the proof.[3] Nor should a judge take the case altogether out of the hands of the parties and make for them a case which they had no intention of making for themselves.[4] Similarly no amendment should be made and no new issues raised on points which are inconsistent with the original pleas[5] or are wholly different from them[6] or which will change the nature of the suit[7] nor should a new issue be framed which would re-open the whole case.[8]

Where a judge at the settlement of issues had decided not to raise a certain issue, the question could not be re-opened at the trial.[9]

The exercise of the power under this part of the sub-rule being discretionary it is doubtful whether a revision would lie from an order declining to amend issues or frame additional issues.[10] In any view, the exercise of the discretion will not be interfered with unless the discretion is shown to have been abused or perversely exercised.[11]

5. "At any time before passing the decree."—The Court may amend issues or frame additional issues at any time before passing the decree.[1] Thus the power can be exercised even after the close of the arguments[2] unless the exercise of the power at such a late stage is likely to prejudice the fair trial of the case.[3]

A Court acts irregularly in simply recording a proceeding declaring its intention to frame additional issues and postponing the actual framing of such issue till judgment.[4]

6. Power of the appellate Court to amend the issues or frame additional issues.—Where by inadvertance or other causes, the issues recorded do not enable the appellate Court to try the whole case on the merits, it should make the necessary amendments or frame additional issues.[1] But a point not suggested in the pleadings and not raised in the first Court should not be put in issue for the first time by the appellate Court.[2] Where new issues are raised by the appellate Court the parties should have an opportunity of producing evidence on them[3] and the proper course in such cases is to frame the issues and refer them for trial by the Court of the first instance.[4]

7. Sub-Rule 2.—Sub-Rule 2, empowers the Court at any time before passing the decree, to strike out any issue that appears to have been wrongly framed or introduced. But if the issues have been framed by consent of both the parties, they should not be struck out without the consent of both.[1] Where the lower appellate Court framed a wrong issue but it appeared from its judgment that there was a finding on the point which would have been raised if the correct issue had been framed, the High Court refused to remand the case for a new finding on the point.[2]

Synopsis.

1. Scope and applicability of the rule. 2. Appeal.

Form of agreement. See Note 1.

1. Scope and applicability of the rule.—This rule may be compared with O. 36 which deals with the statement of a special case for the opinion of the Court, without bringing a suit. This rule and R. 7 deal with stating by consent, of special issues in a suit, and provide for what may be called an adjustment or compromise of a suit, not absolutely as under O. 23, R. 3, but contingently on the opinion of the Court on certain issues of fact or law submitted to it. Upon the finding of those issues being given the adjustment or compromise becomes absolute.[1] The finding on the issues so submitted must be confined to matters raised in issue.[2] As to the form of agreement for issues to be tried, see Appendix II, Form No. 1.

2. Appeal.—A decree passed under the terms of Rr. 6 and 7 is appealable.[1] But where the parties agreed to refer issues of fact to a commissioner and to abide by his findings, it was held that no appeal would lie against a decree passed on the report of the commissioner.[2]

Court, if satisfied that agreement was executed in good faith, may pronounce judgment.

R. 7. [S. 151.] Where the Court is satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper,— O. 14, R. 7.

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,

(b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and

(c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it shall proceed to record and try the issue and state its finding or decision thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and shall, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and, upon the judgment so pronounced, a decree shall follow.

Synopsis.

1. Legislative changes. 2. Scope of the rule.

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The word "may" which occurred in the two paragraphs of clause (c) of the old section has been substituted by the word "shall" in the present rule.

2. Scope of the rule.—As has been seen in Note 1 to Rule 6 ante that rule provides for the adjustment of a suit contingent upon the opinion of the Court on certain issues of fact or law, submitted to it by the parties. Upon the findings on issues so submitted being given the adjustment becomes absolute and the Court is bound to pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement.[1]

As to appeals under this rule, vide Notes under R. 6, supra.

DISPOSAL OF THE SUIT AT THE FIRST HEARING.

O.15, R.1, Notes 1—2.

Parties not at issue.

R. 1. [S. 152.] Where at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment.

[1877—S. 152; 1859—S. 144.]

Synopsis.

1. First hearing—Meaning of. See O. 8, R. 1. 2. Disposal at first hearing.

1. First hearing—Meaning of.—See O. 8, R. 1.

2. Disposal at first hearing.—Where the parties are not at issue upon any point of fact or law, the Court may, under this rule, at once pronounce judgment. It has been seen in O. 5, R. 1, that no summons need be sent to a defendant who has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim. In such a case and in cases where the defendant appears after summons at the first hearing and confesses judgment, the Court may proceed to give judgment.[1] But the Court must be satisfied that the proper persons are before the Court and that the confession of judgment is unconditional. Where the confession is conditional the Court must dispose of the suit on the merits.[2]

A Court is not justified in disposing of a case two days before the date fixed for hearing and the decree so passed will be set aside.[3]

Synopsis.

1. Application of the rule.
2. Summons for settlement of issues only —Effect of.
3. "And shall fix a day", sub-Cl. (2).

1. Application of the rule.—This rule and O. 14, R. 2. give power to the Court to try issues of law first. The power under O. 14, R. 2 can be exercised at the issue stage.[1] As to whether this rule gives power to the Courts to proceed to determine issues of law at a stage subsequent to the issue stage, there is a difference of opinion. The High Courts of Madras[2] and Patna[3] have held that it does while the High Court of Calcutta[4] has held that it does not.

But though this rule empowers a Court to dispose of a suit on preliminary issues, it should not ordinarily do so but should pronounce its opinion on all important issues.[5] The reason is that piecemeal trial of a case leads to serious inconvenience and protracts litigation. In Tara Kant Banerjee v. Puddo Mohini Dassa and others.[6] Lord Justice Turner, in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council observed as follows:—"The Courts below, in appealable cases, by forbearing from deciding on all the issues joined, not infrequently oblige this committee to recommend that a cause be remanded which might otherwise be finally decided on appeal. This is certainly a serious evil to the parties litigant, as it may involve the expense of a second appeal as well as that of another hearing below. It is much to be desired, therefore, that in appealable cases the Courts below should, as far as may be practicable, pronounce their opinion on all the important points."

Where the suit is sought to be disposed of on a preliminary point of law, it must be done only on the assumption that the facts pleaded can be and are proved.[7]

2. Summons for settlement of issues only—Effect of.—Where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the Court may proceed to hear and dispose of the case if the parties are ready and willing to proceed.[1] If, however, one of the parties objects to the adoption of such a procedure, the Court has no jurisdiction to proceed to dispose of the case.[2]

3 "And shall fix a day"—Sub-Cl. (2).—The great object of the Code in requiring a day to be fixed for the hearing of the case and all the evidence to be adduced on that day is that parties may thus be confronted with each

Synopsis.

1 "The Court may pronounce judgment." 3. Appeal.
2 "Sufficient cause."

Court can determine preliminary issues first. See Note 1, Pts. (1) and (2). Proviso to the rule. See Note 2, Pt. (2).

1. "The Court may pronounce judgment."—Even in a case in which the summons may have been issued for final disposal the Court has a discretion to adjourn the case for the production of such evidence as may be necessary. Thus if, after the written statement is filed the suit is found to involve issues of a less simple character than might have been anticipated at the outset it is desirable, in the interests of justice, that the discretion given to the Court by this rule should be so exercised as to ensure a fair trial and not to deny, in effect the trial to the parties.[1]

Where a party fails, without sufficient cause, to produce his evidence on the date fixed for final disposal, and an adjournment is refused, the Court can at once pronounce judgment. But it cannot dismiss the suit for non-prosecution.[2]

2. "Sufficient cause."—Where the plaintiff and the defendants were endeavouring to settle their differences by arbitration, and the plaintiff was told by one of the defendants that he would inform the Court of what was going on, in consequence of which plaintiff did not appear with his evidence on the day fixed, it was held that there was sufficient cause for the plaintiff not to be ready with his evidence.[1]

3. Appeal.—A pronouncement of judgment under this rule is a decree and is appealable, as such.[1]

ORDER XVI.

SUMMONING AND ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

R. 1. [S. 159.] At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents.

Summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents.

[1877—S. 159; 1859—S. 149.]

Local Amendments.

BOMBAY.

The following shall be added as Rule 1-A:—

1-A.—(1) The Court may on the application of any party for a summons for the attendance of any person, permit that service of such summons shall be effected by such party.

(2) When the Court has directed service of the summons by the party applying for the same and such service is not effected, the Court may, if it is satisfied that reasonable diligence has been used by such party to effect such service, permit service to be effected by an officer of the Court.

ALLAHABAD.

The following proviso shall be added:—

Provided that no party who has begun to call his witnesses shall be entitled to obtain process to enforce the attendance of any witness against whom process has not previously issued, or to call any witness not named in a list, which must be filed in Court before the hearing of evidence on his behalf has commenced, without an order of the Judge made in writing and stating the reasons therefor.

OUDH.

Substitute for Rule 1, the following:—

1. (1) The Court may, in any suit or class of suits, require any party to file by a date to be fixed by the Court, a list of witnesses whom he proposes to produce; and may, if necessary, direct that such list be kept in a sealed envelope for such time as the Court considers desirable.

Where such a list has been called for from any party, the latter shall not, except for special reasons, be permitted to summon or produce as witness, any person whose name has not been entered in the list.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-Rule (1) the parties may, after the suit is instituted, obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents.

SINDH.

Add the following as Rule 1-A, after Rule 1:—

1-A.—The Court may, on the application of any party for a summons for the attendance of any person as a witness, permit that service of such summons shall be effected by such party.

N.-W. F. P.

Substitute the following for Rule 1:—

1. (1) On such date as the Court may appoint and not later than 30 days after the settlement of issues, the parties shall present in Court a list of witnesses whom they propose to call either to give evidence or to produce documents.

2. They shall not be permitted to call witnesses other than those contained in the said list, except with the permission of the Court and after showing good cause for the omission of the said witnesses from the list; the Court granting such permission shall record reasons for so doing.

3. On application to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, the parties may obtain summonses for persons whose attendance is required in Court."

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "at any time after the suit is instituted" have been substituted for the words "after the summons has been delivered or sent for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit . . . . before the day fixed for such settlement or disposal".

For the effect of the change, see Note 3.

2. Scope of the rule.—This order contains the necessary rules in the matter of enforcing the attendance of persons either to give evidence or to produce documents provided for in Ss. 30 and 32, ante. Though the Court is bound to help the parties in this behalf,[1] it is ordinarily, for the parties to move the Court to take the necessary steps,[2] unless the Court choses to act of its own motion under R. 14, infra.

The powers exercisable by Civil Courts under this order have been conferred on the tribunals appointed under the undermentioned Acts.[3]

3. When witness summons may be applied for.—Section 159 of the Code of 1882 was differently worded as is shown in Note 1, supra. It was, however, held under that Code that an application under that section could be made at any time before the party closed his case and not necessarily before the date of the first hearing.[1] The present Code has clearly provided that an application under this rule can be made at any time after the institution of the suit.

4. Summoning of a party as a witness.—The Code of 1859, had a special provision (S. 162) for summoning the opposite party as a witness in the case. The Court had a discretion in the matter of such summons and had to be satisfied that such evidence was material.[1] There is nothing in this rule to prevent a party from examining his opponent as his witness in the case.[2] See also R. 21, infra.

5. Refusal of summons.—The Court is bound to issue summons where application is made at any time after the institution of the suit and before its final disposal[1] provided the application made therefor is a proper one.[2] It cannot be refused on the ground that such an application is too late, though it is within the discretion of the Court to refuse an adjournment of the hearing on the ground of want of diligence of the party.[3] The reason is that it is possible that the hearing may for some reason, be adjourned or the party may have his own facilities for the expeditious service of summons.[4] R. 9 infra which provides that summons must be served on the witness in sufficient time, is only a rule in favour of the witness and intended to induce due diligence in the party; but it does not empower the Court to refuse to issue a witness summons on the ground of late application.[4-a] Nor can summons be refused on the ground

ALLAHABAD.

To Rule 2, add:—

(4) This rule shall not apply, in cases to which Government is a party, in the case of witnesses who are Government servants whose salary exceeds Rs. 10 per mensem and who are summoned to give evidence in their public capacity at a Court situated more than five miles from their head-quarters.

BOMBAY.

Insert as proviso to sub-Rule (1) of Rule 2:—

Provided that where Government or a public officer being a party to a suit or proceeding as such public officer supported by Government in the litigation, applies for a summons to any public officer to whom the Civil Service Regulations apply to give evidence of facts which have come to his knowledge, or of matters with which he has had to deal, as a public officer, or to produce any document from public records, the Government or the aforesaid officer shall not be required to pay any sum of money on account of the travelling and other expenses of such witness.

LAHORE.

Add the following proviso to Rule 2 (1):—

Exception.—When applying for a summons for any of its own officers, Government will be exempt from the operation of clause (1).

PATNA.

Add the following proviso to Rule 2 (1):—

Provided that the Secretary of State shall not be required to pay any expenses into Court under this rule when he is the party applying for the summons, and the person to be summoned is an officer serving under Government, who is summoned to give evidence of facts which have come to his knowledge, or of matters with which he has had to deal, in his public capacity.

BENGAL.

Cancel clauses (1) and (2) and substitute therefor the following:—

"(1) The Court shall fix in respect of each summons such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the persons summoned in passing to and from the Court in which he is required to attend, and for one day's attendance.

(2) In fixing such an amount the Court may, in the case of any person summoned to give evidence as an expert, allow reasonable remuneration for the time occupied both in giving evidence and in performing any work of an expert character necessary for the case."

NAGPUR.

Add the following as an exception to Rule 2 (1):—

RANGOON.

O. 16, R. 2.

Add the following to Rule 2 (1):—

"Provided that in cases to which Government is a party:—

(a) No payment into Court will be required for the travelling and other expenses, of a Government servant who may be required to be summoned at the instance of Government to give evidence in his official capacity;

(b) The amount to be paid into Court for the travelling and other expenses of a Government servant whose salary exceeds Rs. 10 and who may be required to be summoned at the instance of a party other than the Government to give evidence in his official capacity in a Court situate at a distance of more than five miles from his head-quarters shall be equivalent to the travelling and halting allowances admissible under the Civil Service Regulations."

In Rule 2, the following shall be substituted for sub-Rule (3):—

"(3) Subject to the provisions of sub-Rule (2), travelling and other expenses of witnesses, in Courts subordinate to the High Court other than the Court of Small Causes of Rangoon, shall be payable on the following scale:—

(1) Ordinary labouring classes.—The actual Railway or Steam-boat fare to and from the Court by the lowest class; or where the journey could not have been performed by rail or steam-boat, actual travelling expenses upto a limit of Rs. 2 a day by boat and of 4 annas a mile by road; and an allowance for each day's absence from home of ten annas to those who are residents of places other than the place where the Court is held and of eight annas to those who are residents of the place where the Court is held.

(2) Petty village officers.—The same rates as above for railway or steam-boat fare, or actual travelling expenses by boat or road upto the limit of Rs. 2 a day by boat and of four annas a mile by road; and an allowance for each day's absence from home of fourteen annas to those who are residents of places other than the place where the Court is held, and of twelve annas to those who are residents of the place where the Court is held.

(3) Persons of higher ranks of life such as clerks, tradespeople, village headmen and headmen of circles.—Second class railway or steam-boat fare to and from the Court; or where the journey could not have been performed by rail or steam-boat, actual travelling expenses upto a limit of Rs. 4 a day by boat and annas six a mile by road; and an allowance not to exceed except in special cases Rs. 1-8-0 per each day's absence from home.

(4) Persons of superior rank.—The actual sum spent in travelling to and from the Court with an allowance according to circumstances, not to exceed except in special cases Rs. 5 for each day's absence from home.

(5) Witnesses following any profession, such as medicine or law.—A special allowance according to circumstances.

(6) Lodging allowance.—In addition to the above, a lodging allowance not exceeding except in special cases rupee one for persons in class (3) and rupees two for persons in classes (4) and (5) may be allowed for each night necessarily spent away from home if the Court is satisfied that the witness has to pay for his night's lodging. When an amount exceeding this scale is sanctioned as a special case, it shall not exceed the actual amount spent.

Provided that—

(1) A Government servant whose salary exceeds Rs. 10 per mensem giving evidence in his official capacity in a suit to which Government is a party—

(a) When giving evidence at a place more than five miles from his head-quarters, shall not receive anything under these rules, but shall be given a certificate of attendance;

O. 16, R. 2, Notes 1—4.

(b) when giving evidence at a place not more than five miles from his head-quarters, shall, in cases where the Court consider it necessary, receive under these rules actual travelling expenses, but shall not receive subsistence, special or expert allowances.

(2) A Government servant whose salary does not exceed Rs. 10 per mensem, giving evidence in his official capacity, shall receive his expenses from the Court.

Note.—When the journey has to be performed partly by rail or steam-boat and partly by road or boat, the fare shall be paid in respect of the former and the mileage or boat allowance in respect of the later part of the journey.

Railway servants summoned by a Civil Court as witnesses, and travelling by rail to attend the Court, should be paid the railway fare to which they are entitled under the rules for the payment of witnesses without regard to the fact that they may have travelled under a pass and not on actual payment of the fares."

shall be included in the costs of the suit unless the witness verifies such payment before an officer of the Court: O. 16, R. 8.

Provided also that the special procedure for the service of summons upon defendant under Order 5, Rule 20-A (1), shall not apply to service of summons under this order.

BENGAL.

Cancel Rule 8 and substitute therefor the following:—

"8. (1) Every summons under this order not being a summons made over to a party for service under Rule 7-A (i) of this order, shall be served as nearly as may be in the same manner as a summons to a defendant, and the rules in Order 5 as to proof of service shall apply thereto.

(2) The party applying for a summons to be served under this rule shall, before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed, pay into Court the sum fixed by the Court under Rule 2 of this order."

PATNA.

Add the following to Rule 8:—

"Provided that a summons under this order may by leave of the Court be served by the party or his agent, applying for the same, by personal service. If such service is not effected and the Court is satisfied that reasonable diligence has been used by the party or his agent to effect such service, then the summons shall be served by the Court in the usual manner."

RANGOON.

To Rule 8, the following proviso shall be added, namely:—

"Provided that, at the request of a party or his pleader, summons for service on a witness or witnesses, whose attendance is required by such party, may be delivered to such party or his pleader for service by a person employed by such party or his pleader, and the rules in Order 5 as to service and proof of service shall apply in such case as if the person employed by such party or his pleader to effect service were the officer of the Court whose duty it is to effect service of summons."

N. W. F. P.

Add to R. 8:—

"Provided that such summons shall ordinarily be made over for service to the party calling the witnesses, and his affidavit shall be considered sufficient proof of service; provided further that he shall, for sufficient reason, be entitled to apply to the Court to have the summonses served through its agency."

R. 9. [S. 167.] Service shall in all cases be made a sufficient time before the time specified in the summons for the attendance of the person summoned, to allow him a reasonable time for preparation and for travelling to the place at which his attendance is required. O. 16, R. 9.

Time for serving summons.

Local Amendment.

RANGOON.

To Rule 9, the following shall be added:—

Where the person summoned is a public officer or servant of a Railway Company, sufficient time shall also be allowed in order to give the witness an opportunity of communicating with his departmental superior, so as to arrange for the discharge of his duties during his temporary absence from his post.

O.16, R.10, Note 1.

R. 10. [S. 168.] (1) Where a person to whom a summons has been issued either to attend to give evidence or to produce a document fails to attend or to produce the document in compliance with such summons, the Court shall, if the certificate of the serving officer has not been verified by affidavit, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching the service or non-service of the summons.

Procedure where witness fails to comply with summons.

(2) Where the Court sees reason to believe that such evidence or production is material, and that such person has, without lawful excuse, failed to attend or to produce the document in compliance with such summons or has intentionally avoided service, it may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence or to produce the document at a time and place to be named therein; and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door or other conspicuous part of the house in which he ordinarily resides.

(3) In lieu of or at the time of issuing such proclamation, or at any time afterwards, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant, either with or without bail, for the arrest of such person, and may make an order for the attachment of his property to such amount as it thinks fit, not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of any fine which may be imposed under Rule 12:

Provided that no Court of Small Causes shall make an order for the attachment of immoveable property.

have been duly served[1] as is indicated in sub-R. (1). It has no application where there has been no summons[2] or where the summons has not been returned[3] or where the witness attends or produces the document on the required date though he had refused the summons.[3-a] The rule being of a highly penal nature, the procedure laid down in sub-R. (1) must be strictly followed before a Court finds whether the summons was served or not.[4] The Nazir's report is not legal evidence on this point.[5]

As a general rule, it is for the party to move the Court to issue one or more of the coercive processes under this rule[6] though the Court is not precluded from taking action suo motu.[7] In either case, both the conditions precedent laid down in sub-R. (2) must be satisfied before any coercive action is taken.[8] If not, the party is entitled only to a fresh summons.[9] Even where both the conditions are satisfied, it is left to the discretion of the Court to take coercive measures or not;[10] but the discretion must not be arbitrarily exercised.[11]

2. "Without lawful excuse."—The question of lawful excuse depends on the circumstances of each case.[1-a] It is not necessary for the Courts to institute a formal investigation and come to a decision on the evidence adduced in order to believe in the want of lawful excuse. If the Court believes that the witness has knowledge of the summons and thinks that his evidence is material and if there is no one in Court to account for the witness's absence, there is sufficient reason to act under this rule.[1] Non-payment or non-tender of expenses to the witness is a lawful excuse for non-attendance.[2] Where the summons is returned unserved, the party must be given reasonable time to make out the grounds for the coercive process.[3]

3. Issue of proclamation—Sub-R. 2.—Delay caused by the office owing to the late payment of process fees for proclamation cannot be set up by the party as a ground for non-production of witnesses.[1]

4. Issue of warrant of arrest—Sub-R. 3.—In requiring parties to take out warrants of arrest against recalcitrant witnesses, the Court must have due regard to the practical difficulties felt by litigants in procuring the evidence of an important witness by means of his arrest.[1] The issue of a proclamation subsequent to the issue of a warrant of arrest is a contravention of the terms of Sub-R. 3. [1-a]

A panchayatdar is not exempt from the coercive provisions of this rule.[2]

Synopsis.

1. Scope.—This rule provides for a case where the person in default satisfies the Court that he had not intentionally failed to carry out the order of the Court.[1] O.16, R.11, Note 1.

R. 12. [S. 170.] The Court may, where such person does not appear, or appears but fails so to satisfy the Court, impose upon him such fine not exceeding five hundred rupees as it thinks fit, having regard to his condition in life and all the circumstances of the case, and may order his property, or any part thereof, to be attached and sold or, if already attached under rule 10, to be sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs of such attachment, together with the amount of the said fine, if any: O.16, R.12, Notes 1—2.

Procedure if witness fails to appear.

Provided that, if the person whose attendance is required pays into Court the costs and fine aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment.

1. Scope of the rule.—R. 11 deals with the case when the person served appears and shows proper cause for his failure to appear; the present rule applies to a witness, who does not appear or on appearance, fails to show proper cause.[1]

This rule does not affect the special jurisdiction of a Chartered High Court, to proceed for contempt against a defaulting witness.[2]

2. When fine can be imposed.—There is a conflict of opinion on the point and three different views have been expressed:—

(1) The first view is that no fine could be imposed under this rule until the procedure laid down in R. 10, sub-R. (2) or (3) has been followed, i.e., either a proclamation or a warrant of arrest or an attachment has been issued.[1] A person to whom a summons has been issued and who fails to obey it cannot straight away be fined under this rule.

(2) The second view is that the words "such person" in this rule refers to the "person to whom a summons has been issued" in sub-R. 1 of R. 10 and that the issue of a proclamation or an order for arrest or attachment are not conditions precedent to the imposition of fine, and that this rule deals with all cases of disobedience not covered by R. 11.[2]

(3) Where a party is present in Court and is directed to produce a document, the Court can, on his failure comply with the order, impose a fine upon him without going through the procedure in sub-Rr. 2 and 3.[3]

It is submitted that the second of the above views is correct. This R. 11, and sub-Rr. 2 and 3 of R. 10 all refer to "such person" and must therefore necessarily refer to some person referred to before, i.e., "a person to whom a summons has been issued" in sub-R. 1.

What is lawful excuse depends upon the circumstances of each case.[4]

3. Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order imposing a fine under this rule. Vide S. 104 (1) (h) of this Code. But there is no Second Appeal, see S. 104 (2).

As regards orders of attachment and sale under this rule, no appeal lay under the Code of 1882.[1] R. 13 of the present Code makes applicable to such attachment and sale all the provisions in the Code regarding attachment and sale in execution of a decree.

O 16, R.13. R. 13. [New.] The provisions with regard to the attachment and sale of property in the execution of a decree shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to any attachment and sale under this Order as if the person whose property is so attached were a judgment-debtor.

[S. 171.] Subject to the provisions of this Code as to attendance and appearance and to any law for the time being in force, where the Court at any time thinks it necessary to examine any person other than a party to the suit and not called as a witness by a party to the suit, the Court may, of its own motion, cause such person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence, or to produce any document in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine him as a witness or require him to produce such document.

Court may of its own accord summon as witnesses strangers to suit.

[1877—S. 171.]

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.
2. Cross-examination of a witness summoned by Court of its own accord.

1. Scope of the rule.—Ordinarily, it is for the party to summon the witnesses necessary for his case. This rule is only intended to enable the Court to secure suo motu the attendance of a witness whose evidence appears to the Court to be necessary.[1] But the Court cannot compel a party to summon such a witness or penalise him for his refusal to summon him.[2]

The general powers under this rule are, in the case of appellate Courts, circumscribed by the specific provisions of O. 41, R. 27.[3]

2. Cross-examination of a witness summoned by Court of its own accord.—The parties cannot be refused the right to cross-examine a witness examined by the Court under this rule.[1]

Synopsis.

1. Non-attendance when an offence.

1. Non-attendance when an offence.—S. 174 of the Indian Penal Code deals with the offence of non-attendance in obedience to an order passed by a public servant. No such offence is committed unless:—

(a) there is summons to attend[1]

Synopsis.

1. Scope and applicability.
2. May pronounce.
3. Appeal.

Without lawful excuse. See Rule 10, Note 2.

1. Scope and applicability.—This rule applies to miscellaneous proceedings also.[1] The provisions of this rule being highly penal in character, it must be strictly construed.[2] Thus a party is bound only to produce the document required and is not bound to exhibit it as evidence in the case.[3] Again, the rule applies only when the party is present in Court and refuses to comply with the order.[4] The failure to obey a requisition in one suit to produce or give evidence will not entitle the Court to give a judgment against the defaulter, under this rule in any other suit.[5] Nor can the rule be applied when the default has been once condoned[6] nor against all parties when only one of them was affected by an obligation under this rule.[7]

A party who is not guilty of wilful default, is not liable to be visited with the consequences of this rule.[8]

2. "May pronounce."—The rule is permissive and not mandatory and it is, therefore, within the discretion of the Court to pronounce judgment against the defaulter,[1] though such discretion must be exercised with caution and forbearance.[2] It would be a wrong exercise of discretion if the Court penalises the party and prevents him from proving his case[3] merely by reason of the default. Where, for example, there is sufficient evidence on his side[4] or where the opposite party has failed to give any evidence in support of his

(c) in the case of witnesses of superior rank, including officers of Government in receipt of a salary of not less than Rs. 200 a month, from three to five rupees a day.

(2) If a witness demands any sum in excess of what has been paid to him, such sum shall be allowed if he satisfy the Court that he has actually and necessarily incurred the additional expense.

Illustration.

A post office employee summoned to give evidence is entitled to demand from the party, on whose behalf or at whose instance he is summoned, the travelling and other expenses allowed to witnesses of the class or rank to which he belongs and in addition the sum for which he is liable as payment to the substitute officiating during his absence from duty. The sum so payable in respect of the substitute will be certified by the official superior of the witness on a slip, which the witness will present to the Court from which the summons issued.

(3) If a witness be detained for a longer period than one day the expense of his detention shall be allowed at such rate, not usually exceeding that payable under clause (1) of this rule as may seem to the Court to be reasonable and proper:

Provided that the Court may, for reasons stated in writing, allow expenses on a higher scale than that hereinbefore prescribed.

23. In cases to which Government is a party, Government servants whose salary exceeds Rs. 10 per mensem and all police constables whatever their salary may be who are summoned to give evidence in their official capacity at a Court situated more than five miles from their head-quarters, shall be given a certificate of attendance by the Court in lieu of travelling and other expenses.

Synopsis.

1. Opposite party as a witness.

Parties to give evidence on their own side. See Note 1, Pt. (1).

1. Opposite party as a witness.—The practice of a party not examining himself as his witness and forcing the opposite party to summon him, thereby hoping to obtain an opportunity of being cross-examined by his own counsel[1] has been severely condemned by their Lordships of the Privy Council. The High Courts of Bombay and Lahore have also held that the practice of summoning the opposite party as a witness is equally objectionable.[2]

As regards the weight of the evidence of the opposite party summoned as a witness, see the undermentioned case.[3]

ORDER XVII.

O. 17, R. 1, Note 1.

ADJOURNMENTS.

Court may grant time and adjourn hearing.

R. 1. [S. 156.] (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Costs of adjournment.

(2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded.

The following proviso is added:—

"Provided further that no such adjournment shall be granted for the purpose of calling a witness not previously summoned or named, nor shall any adjournment be utilised by any party for such purpose, unless the Judge has made an order in writing under the proviso to Order 16, Rule 1."

limited to adjournments granted at the instance of parties and does not extend to those necessitated by rules of the Court.[2] Thus an order made on the settlement of issues fixing a day for the final hearing is not an order under this rule.[3] Similarly orders for adjournment necessitated by delay on the part of Court's officers in the performance of Court's duty are not governed by this rule.[4]

The rule speaks of the "hearing of the suit." There is a distinction between the hearing of the suit and the hearing of evidence. Thus the Court may adjourn the hearing of the suit and yet may, under O. 13, R. 2, refuse to accept documentary evidence which ought to have been, but was not produced, at the first hearing of the suit, though such hearing resulted only in an adjournment.[5]

Neither this rule nor any other rule of this order, applies to execution proceedings.[6] (Vide also notes under Rr. 2 and 3).

2. "May adjourn"—Discretion of Court.—The granting of an adjournment to a party to a suit is, under this rule, left to the discretion of the Court.[1] The discretion is not subject to any definite rules, but should be exercised in a judicial and reasonable manner,[2] and upon proper materials.[3] It should be exercised after considering the party's conduct in the case,[4] and the opportunity he has had of getting ready, and the truth and sufficiency of the reason alleged by him for not being ready.[5] Where the adjournment is refused, reasons should be given for such refusal.[6]

The main object of vesting the discretion in the Court, is to enable it to prevent a party from improperly delaying proceedings and abusing the process of the Court.[7] The Court should not, therefore, be too technical in such matters,[8] and unless there is a pressing necessity for proceeding with the case, or the application for adjournment is obviously frivolous, the adjournment asked for should not be refused.[9]

O. 17, R. 1, Notes 2—3.

3. Sufficient cause must be shown.—On the one hand an adjournment should not be refused where sufficient cause for the adjournment is shown;[1] and on the other, it should not be granted even on condition of payment of costs, where no sufficient cause exists.[2]

What is sufficient cause will depend upon the circumstances of each case.[3] Speaking generally, where the necessity for the adjournment is not due to anything for which the party applying for it is responsible,[4] or where there has been little or no negligence on his part,[5] an adjournment should not be refused. But where the party has been wanting in due diligence,[6] or is guilty of negligence,[7] an adjournment can be refused.

The following are some of the circumstances which have been held to constitute sufficient cause for adjournment:—

(1) Where a party is not ready for the hearing by reason of his having been taken by surprise.[8]

(2) Where he could not reasonably know of the date of hearing in sufficient time to get ready for the same.[9]

(3) Where his witnesses fail to appear for the hearing owing to non-service of summonses on them when such non-service is not due to the fault of the party.[10] In such cases an adjournment should be granted to enable the party to take steps again for their attendance.[11] The mere fact that the process fees were paid late, is no ground for refusing adjournment if the witnesses are absent though served in sufficient time to attend.[12] Where the absence of witnesses is due to a bona fide mistake on the part of the party, there is sufficient cause for adjournment.[13]

"The Court shall fix a day"—Sub-R. 2.—Where a suit is adjourned the date to which it is adjourned should be fixed by order of Court.[1] The date so fixed should be communicated to the parties or their pleaders or to such of them as are present or represented in Court when the adjournment takes place.[2] It is not, however, necessary to communicate it to an absent party,[3] for it is the duty of the pleaders to get acquainted with the date of adjournment.[4]

journment to pay costs to the other party.[1] The sum so awarded should not, however, be in the nature of a penalty or punishment but should be commensurate with the costs which, in the opinion of the Court, the party who is ready will have to incur;[2] and sufficient opportunity should be given to the party to obey the order.[3]

O. 17, R. 1, Notes 5—7.

An order directing payment of costs can be executed under S. 36.

The payment of costs may be made a condition precedent to the adjournment.[4] Such a condition need not however be express if it is sufficiently obvious from the context.[5] If the costs are not so paid a further adjournment may be refused.[6] If a suit or appeal is adjourned on condition that it will stand dismissed if the costs of the adjournment are not paid within a certain date, then on failure of payment of costs within such a date, the suit or appeal will stand dismissed.[7] Similarly if the suit is adjourned on condition that if the defendant does not pay the costs ordered before the adjourned date, the defence will be struck off and the suit proceeded with ex parte, the Court can in case of default strike off the defence.[8] But the Court has no jurisdiction to pass such a conditional order of adjournment as to enable it, on default, to pass a decree without evidence, when such evidence is necessary.[9]

No costs can be awarded against a party not at fault, in the matter of the adjournment.[10]

6. Costs in pauper suits.—The High Court of Rangoon has held that even a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis may be ordered to pay costs as a condition precedent to his being granted an adjournment.[1]

7. Proviso.—Where the trial of the suit has once begun, it should ordinarily go on from day to day. The Court has, however, discretion to adjourn the trial of a part-heard case to a day beyond the following day, but in such a case the Court should record its reasons therefor.[1] In exercising such a discretion the Court should act of itself and not ask for orders of the superior Court in the matter.[2]

8. Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order refusing adjournment under this rule;[1] but such a refusal is liable to correction by an appellate Court in an appeal from the decree in the suit.[2] The refusal may be made a ground of attack in appeal at whatever stage of the hearing of the suit, the order of refusal may have been made.[3] The exercise of discretion under this rule is not liable to be interfered with in second appeal.[4] (Vide also notes under S. 100 and 101).

9. Review.—An order of adjournment once made cannot be rescinded in review unless for good and sufficient reasons and in the presence of the other side.[1]

10. Revision.—An order of adjournment is not liable to revision.[1] But where an adjournment is refused and the suit is either dismissed for default or decreed ex parte, a revision will lie from an order passed in appeal against an order refusing to set aside the dismissal for default or the ex parte decree as the case may be.[2] Even in such a case the matter will not be interfered with except for strong reasons.[3]

1. Scope and applicability of the rule.—This rule should be read along with the provisions of O. 9. That order deals with the failure of parties to appear at the first hearing of the suit, while this rule deals with their failure to appear at the adjourned hearing of the suit.

If, at the hearing of a suit after settlement of issues, the parties or either of them fail to appear, the suit need not be decided on the merits. Nor need it necessarily be dismissed under O. 9; the Court has a discretion either to proceed under O. 9 or pass such other orders as the Court thinks fit.[1] Where a suit has been disposed of under circumstances which make this rule applicable, such disposal will be referred to the provisions of this rule.[2]

This rule will not, however, apply if the parties are present though they may have defaulted in respect of some other act.[3] Nor will it apply if the person absent is not validly a party in the suit as where a minor party has no guardian ad-litem appointed for him.[4]

The rule does not apply to proceedings after decree.[5]

2. Execution proceedings.— This rule does not apply to execution proceedings.[1] (Vide also notes under R. 1, supra and R. 3, infra.)

3. Distinction between this Rule and R. 3.—See R. 3.

4. "Any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned."—This rule does not apply unless the day to which a suit has been adjourned is a day fixed for the hearing or trial of the case.[1] Thus it has been held not to apply in the following cases:—

(1) Where the day was fixed for consideration of an application for amendment of issues.[2]

(2) Where it was fixed for the hearing of an application for the appointment of a guardian ad litem of a minor defendant.[3]

(3) Where on the defendant asking for a stay of the suit, it was adjourned to another date for the production of the copy of a certain order.[4]

Where a suit was postponed to a fixed day for finding out the whereabouts of an unserved defendant and no other separate day was specifically fixed for hearing it was held that the date fixed was the date of the hearing of the suit.[5]

5. Appearance.—By virtue of an explanation added to this rule by the High Court of Allahabad[1] and the Chief Court of Oudh, no party shall be deemed to have failed to appear if he is represented by an agent or a pleader though engaged only for making an application. See also O. 3, R. 1.

able the Judge to finally come to an adjudication upon it; and not the consideration of merely interlocutory matters.[1] It refers so far as this rule is concerned to the commencement of the hearing on each day of the hearing, and cannot be considered to mean that the suit is in a continuous state of being called on for hearing so long as it is being heard.[2]

7. "One of the modes directed by Order 9."—As has been seen in Note 1, ante, O. 9 refers to cases of default of appearance of parties at the first hearing of a case. This rule makes the provisions of O. 9 applicable to cases of such default at adjourned hearings.

In an old Calcutta case[1] it was held that there was a distinction between O. 9 and this rule and that the provisions of O. 9 relating to the restoration of suits and the setting aside of ex parte decrees did not apply to orders passed under this rule. This view has, however, been overruled and it has been repeatedly held that the said provisions of O. 9 will apply to orders passed under this rule on default of appearance of parties at adjourned hearings.

Thus:—

(i) if the plaintiff fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the Court may make an order dismissing the suit for default under this rule and R. 8 of O. 9: and the plaintiff may thereupon apply for restoration of the suit under O. 9, R. 9.[2]

(ii) if the defendant fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the Court may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and R. 6 of O. 9: and the defendant may thereupon apply under O. 9. R. 13 to set aside the ex parte decree.[3]

(iii) if neither party appears at such hearing, the Court may dismiss the suit under this rule and R. 3 of O. 9; and the plaintiff may thereupon either file a fresh suit or apply to have the dismissal set aside;[4]

But the provisions of this rule will not apply to proceedings after decree.[5]

O. 17, R. 2, Notes 8—9.

8. "Or make such other order as it thinks fit."—In the interpretation of the above words, three questions arise for consideration, viz.:—

(i) What is the meaning of the expression "such other order as it thinks fit?"

(ii) Whether the expression includes the power to decide the case on the merits. And if so,

(iii) When is the Court to proceed under O. 9 and when to proceed to decide the case on the merits?

On the first two questions, the High Court of Allahabad had held that the expression "such other order as it thinks fit" only empowers the Court to grant an adjournment and not to decide the case on the merits.[1] An earlier decision of the High Court of Madras was also to the same effect.[2] But in a later decision of the same High Court, the power of the Court to give a decision on the merits in certain circumstances has been recognised.[3] The High Court of Calcutta also recognises the power of the Court to give a decision on the merits.[4] The Allahabad High Court has recognised this power by adding a new clause to this rule. So also the Chief Court of Oudh.

On the third question, where the evidence has not yet begun, it has been held, that the Court should either proceed under O. 9 or adjourn the case. Where, however, the case is part heard, it would seem that the rule vests in the Court a discretion either to proceed under O. 9 or to give a decision on the merits.[5] In cases where the plaintiff has adduced all his evidence or has made out a prima facie case, but is absent at the adjourned hearing, the Court should proceed to give a decision on the merits and not dismiss the suit for default.[6] Where the case has been closed but has been adjourned for the Court to refer to a document[7] or to pronounce judgment,[8] and either of the parties fails to appear at the adjourned hearing, the Court should not proceed under O. 9 but give a decision on the merits.

9. Appeal and Revision.—No appeal lies from an order dismissing a suit[1] or appeal[2] for default under this rule. It may, however, be open to revi-

O. 17, R. 2, Note 9.

No appeal lies from an order restoring a suit dismissed for default under this rule.[4] Where a Court wrongly held that no application under O. 9, R. 13 lay against an order under this rule, it amounted to a refusal of exercise of jurisdiction vested in it and was held liable to revision.[5]

O. 17, R. 3.

R. 3. [S. 158.] Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, etc.

[1877—S. 158; 1859—S. 148.]

ALLAHABAD.

Amend R. 3:—

3. Where any party to a suit, to whom time has been granted fails, without reasonable excuse, to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to comply with any previous order, or to perform any other act, necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, whether such party is present or not, proceed to decide the suit on the merits.

OUDH.

Substitute the following for R. 3:—

3. Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails, without reasonable excuse, to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to comply with any previous order or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, and whether such party is present or not, proceed to decide the suit on the merits.

1. Scope and applicability of the rule.—This rule does not apply unless time had been granted to a party at his instance,[1] to do one or other of the three things mentioned in the section, viz., to produce evidence, or to cause the attendance of witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary for the progress of the suit,[2] and unless default had been committed by such party in doing the act for which the time was granted.[3]

The rule is permissive and not mandatory as is shown by the words the Court "may" proceed to decide the suit forthwith.[4] The stringent provisions thereof should not be applied unless the facts do not admit of the application of any other provision of the Code.[5] Where, for instance, there are no sufficient materials on record to give a proper decision, it should grant a further adjournment of the case.[6] Similarly if the facts of the case make the provisions of R. 2 applicable the Court should act under that rule even though such facts come within the operation of this rule as well.[7]

A decision "forthwith" should nevertheless be a decision on the merits i.e., on a consideration of such materials as may be necessary and available,[8] and does not mean a summary decision.[9] If, in the case of the plaintiff, such materials fail to substantiate the claim, the suit will be dismissed on that ground and not for the default committed by him.[10] O. 17, R. 3, Notes 1—3.

In a case where the defendant's prayer for adjournment was refused but some time was nevertheless given to him for his evidence and after plaintiff's evidence was over, the Court passed a decree without waiting for the time fixed for the defendant's evidence, the decree was held to be illegal.[11]

O. 17. R. 3, Note 3.

(2) R. 2 does not apply unless the party has failed to appear at the hearing. R. 3 will apply where the party is present and has committed the default referred to in the rule.[2] A party appearing by pleader and asking for adjournment must, in the absence of an effective withdrawal of appearance by the pleader, be deemed to have appeared.[3] And even if the Pleader reports "no instructions" after refusal of the adjournment, it may not, under certain circumstances, constitute a failure to appear.[4]

There might be cases where a default under this rule is coupled with a default under R. 2 as well. Thus a party to whom time has been granted at his instance, for doing one or other of the acts mentioned in this rule, may not only commit default in the doing of the act but may not appear in person or by pleader. In such a case, what is the Court to do? On this question the authorities are not uniform.

It was held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned case[5] that in such cases, the procedure to be followed is under R. 2. The rule has since been amended by that Court giving a discretion to that Court to proceed to decide the suit on the merits. The Bombay[6] and the Madras[7] High Courts are agreed that in such cases the Court should proceed only under R. 2. On the other hand, the Calcutta,[8] Lahore,[9] and Patna,[10] High Courts take the

Even according to the Patna High Court, this rule will apply only after the hearing of the case has commenced.[11] For other Courts, see.[12]

Where the entire evidence is over and the case is posted to a day for the clearing up of a point or for the Court satisfying itself on a particular point before delivering judgment and the parties defaulted on that day and failed to appear, even, the Bombay and Madras High Courts have held that the Court should proceed under R. 3 and not under R. 2.[13]

O.17, R. 3, Notes 4—6.

Where a party applied for adjournment of the case for getting a transfer thereof and the application was refused but the case was fixed for further evidence, it was held that this rule did not apply as no time can be said to have been granted to the party within the meaning of this rule.[5]

When a case comes within the meaning of the language of this rule, the mere fact that the date fixed is a holiday (when the date has been expressly agreed upon) will not prevent the Court from proceeding under this rule.[6]

5. When is party deemed to fail to do the act for which time has been granted.—At the adjourned hearing of a case, the witnesses on behalf of a party were absent though served and the party applied for warrants of arrest against them. The application was refused. Thereupon the pleader reported "no instructions" and the suit was dismissed. It was held that the dismissal was not one under this rule.[1] Where a party takes steps in time but the witnesses are not served owing to delay on the part of the Court's officers, to serve them, the party cannot be said to have committed default.[2] Even if the steps are taken late but there is sufficient time to get the witnesses served the party cannot be said to be in default.[3] He will be held to have committed a default if the steps are taken too late to get the witnesses served.[4]

When a commission has been issued, the non-return of the commission is no failure on the part of a party.[5]

When time is to be regarded as the essence of the default the party should have distinct notice of the time within which the act should be done.[6]

6. "Any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit."—The act contemplated by this rule is one which must be necessary to the further progress of the suit.[1] An act which brings about a stay and thus arrests the further progress of the suit cannot be interpreted to be an act necessary to the further progress of the suit; a Court cannot therefore dismiss a suit for non-prosecution because the party failed to produce a stay order within the period allowed.[2] As to what are such acts, see,[3] as to what are not such acts, see.[4] When the act is one ordered without jurisdiction, a default in doing it will not attract the provisions of this rule.[5]

7. Remedy of a person aggrieved by an order under this rule.—A decision under this rule is a decree. It will operate as res judicata and bar a second suit for the same relief.[1] But if the decision is not one properly within the rule, there is no bar against a second suit.[2]

The remedy of a party aggrieved by an order under this rule is by way of appeal[3] or review[4] and not revision.[5] It has, however, been held in a case before the Lahore High Court that a decree passed under this rule may nevertheless be an ex parte decree to which the provisions of O. 9 will apply.[6]

Where the order has been expressly passed under this rule, the remedy is by way of appeal only even though the Court had no power to proceed thereunder and acted erroneously in doing so,[7] and even though R. 2 may have been mentioned by mistake instead of R. 3.[8]

But, where the rule under which the order is passed is not stated, then the Court must go into the matter and decide whether the order is really one under R. 2 or 3.[8-a] The substance of the order will be examined for determining under which rule it falls. In such a case, the guiding principle has been laid

ORDER XVIII.

HEARING OF THE SUIT AND EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

O.18, R.1.

R.. 1. [S. 179 Expln.] The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

(13) Kusher v. Jugrag Singh, (1907) 10 Oudh Cas 245 (246).

1. Right to begin.—The right to begin follows the onus probandi as provided by Ss. 101 to 114 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872). As a general rule, the plaintiff has to prove his claim by positive proof, for the Court has to see whether there is proof of claim before it need enquire as to the truth or otherwise of the defence.[1] It is the duty of the parties to prove their case and the Judge "has nothing to do with the getting up of a case",[2] but the Court has jurisdiction on a proper occasion, in the interest of justice to examine de bene esse, witnesses upon an ex parte application.[3] It must be pointed out that evidence need not always be led by the party who has the right to begin and has the burden; it is open to him to sustain the onus by facts which he may elicit in cross-examination of the other party's witnesses.[4] The onus is not in all cases, and necessarily a question of law. How much or what evidence will discharge the onus is a question which depends upon the weight attached to the evidence.[5] In the case of two sets of defendants whose interests are the same, both should address the Court before any evidence is taken,[6] but the defendant supporting the plaintiff must begin before the other defendants.[7]

2. Allegations.—Under S. 102 of the Evidence Act, the burden of proof rests on the party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side.[1] Thus in all claim petitions it is the claimant to the attached property that must begin.[2] Similarly it is the defeated attaching creditor who challenges the order in the claim petition that must begin.[3] For other instances, see cases under Ss. 101, 102 and 103 of the Indian Evidence Act and the undermentioned cases.[4]

O.18, R.1, Notes 3—6.

3. Admissions.—Where the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff but contends that he is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, the defendant gets the right to begin. Thus in suits on a settled account, signed by the defendant[1] or on a bond, the execution of which is admitted[2] or in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights by the husband where the marriage is admitted by the wife,[3] the defendant has the right to begin. But he will not get this right to begin unless all the material facts are admitted and not only some of them.[4]

In a suit to recover possession of land from the tenant by the landlord, it is not for the plaintiff to explain the possession of the defendant tenant but for such defendant to show that it necessarily leads to an inference of perpetual tenancy.[5] Again where the defendant held certain lands, admittedly some at least of which were rent paying, the defendant ought to lead some prima facie evidence of the fact that the lands were rent-fee if he wants to plead such a fact.[6]

4. Preliminary issue raised by the defendant that the suit does not lie.—Where the defendant raises a preliminary objection that the suit does not lie as, for instance, where he pleads that the suit is barred by res judicata, he has the right to begin.[1] It must be remembered that for the purposes of the preliminary issue, the pleadings are taken as true.[2]

5. Preliminary issue that the appeal does not lie.—Where the respondent in an appeal objects that the appeal does not lie, the appellant must show that he has a right of appeal and has therefore the right to begin.[1]

6. Applicability.—The procedure in regard to trial of suits as laid down in this order is to be followed in proceedings under the undermentioned Local and Special Acts.[1]

1. Scope of the rule.—On the day fixed for hearing the party having the right to begin must state his case, but this does not give him the right to introduce new pleas without the leave of Court. He has only the right to state his case, as has already been put forward.[1] It follows, as a consequence,

Order 18, Rule 2—Note 1.

(1) Mahomed Ali v. Gulab, 1927 Lah 615 (615): 103 Ind Cas 501.

O. 18, R. 2, Note 1.

that the Courts ought not to allow evidence to be given in regard to contentions not raised in the pleadings.[2]

It is not the duty of the Court to determine what witnesses shall be examined.[3] The parties must select their own witnesses and ask the Court to examine such of them as they tender.[4] It is, however, in the discretion of the Court to allow further evidence after the case has been closed.[5] But in such cases it behoves the Court of first instance to take care that a party whose case has been finished is not permitted, without good reason to mend that case by fresh evidence after his adversary has succeeded in impeaching it.[6] But a document filed with the plaint when tendered after the close of the case, but before the other party began, could be admitted.[7]

Where the onus is on the plaintiff and he has failed to sustain it, successfully, the Court will act rightly in dismissing the suit without insisting on the defendant to go into the witness box;[8] but where the burden of proving some issues lies on the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to reserve his case, and produce rebutting evidence after the defendant's evidence on those issues has been recorded.[9] Where a witness has been summoned and does not appear, the party calling him is entitled to call upon the Court to compel his attendance;[10] but it is not only illegal but improper and unfair to permit the defendant, at the very outset, of the case to be put into the witness-box nominally as a plaintiff's witness. It is certainly in accord with justice that a party who has to defend a suit should hear what his opponent has to say before he himself is called upon to answer.[11]

Reasonable time must be given for either party to produce his evidence and the Court would exercise sound discretion, if it allowed the party to produce his evidence at any time before it proceeds to judgment.[12] Thus when the defendant's request for time to produce his witnesses was refused but the defendant produced them on the day the case was posted for judgment it was held that it was a wrong exercise of discretion not to examine the witnesses before proceeding to judgment.[12-a]

A pleader is bound to call the witnesses his party wishes to examine and any threat on the part of the Court to report to the High Court the conduct of the pleader in examining such witnesses is highly improper.[13]

O.18, R.2, Notes 2—4.

3. "The other party."—The other party means the party other than the one who has the right to begin and has begun. Where there are two sets of defendants and their interests are practically the same, the rule is that after the plaintiff's case has been closed, both the defendants should address the Court before any evidence is given by either set of defendants.[1]

But where a defendant or a set of defendants support the plaintiff's case, wholly or in part, the former must immediately follow the plaintiff and call their witnesses, and then only can the other set of defendants who differ from the plaintiff be called upon to address the Court and produce their evidence.[2]

4. Arguments.—It is in the option of the parties to argue their case when the evidence has been closed and it is for them to decide whether they will exercise that privilege or not[1] and a Court delivering judgment without hearing arguments is not acting irregularly where the parties having had the opportunity did not choose to make use of it.[2] Where new cases are quoted in reply, the other party will be allowed to address the Court on such new cases and on the points not argued before the Court previously.[3]

A Judge, who has not heard any part of the evidence and before whom no part of the proceedings has taken place, is not justified in proceeding to judgment until he has given the parties an opportunity of appearing before him and stating their case; a judgment so pronounced is bad in law and must be set aside.[4]

The practice of submitting written arguments by pleaders is not proper and in any case, must first be submitted to the other side and then to the Court.[5]

A party must be represented by one pleader or set of pleaders and cannot be represented severally by different pleaders.[6]

R. 3. [S. 180.] Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party; and, in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence, and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.

1. Scope of the rule.—Where there are several issues the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may at his option—

(1) produce his evidence on those issues or;

(2) Reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party.

In the "latter" case, the party beginning may, after the other party has produced his evidence, produce his rebutting evidence.[1] It is in the discretion of the Court to give adjournments for the purpose.[2] A party trying to prove a point not raised in his pleadings cannot object to the opposite party tendering rebutting evidence as to that point.[3] a place in the witness list,[2] or on the ground that they were not present at the previous hearing.[3] But if it clearly appears that the object of summoning them is merely to obstruct or delay justice, the Court can refuse to examine them[4] and whenever it so refuses, it must record its reasons for such refusal.[5]

Where the witness to be examined is an infant or a person of advanced age, the Court may hold an examination on the voir dire as to his competency to give evidence.[6] But this examination must be held before the actual examination commences.[7] Courts, of course, have always the power to examine any of the parties to the suit and compel their attendance.[8] It is also in the discretion of the Court to allow a party to call further evidence after he has closed his case.[9]

The examination of a witness is not complete without any opportunity being allowed for his cross-examination by the other side.[10] A Court cannot fix any time limit for cross-examination[11] though it has full power to prevent any abuse of the rights of cross-examination.[12] A co-defendant who is represented by a separate vakil may cross-examine another defendant, in order to discredit the evidence given by him in plaintiff's favour.[13] Refusal by the trial Court to examine the witnesses tendered by a party before delivery of judgment may amount to a substantial error or defect of procedure which may have affected the decision of the case on the merits and is a ground for second appeal under S. 100, Cl. (c).[14]

2. Open Court.—The parties have a right to have the evidence of witnesses taken in open Court, i.e., publicly.[1] All witnesses should, without distinction give their evidence from the witness-box; it is not desirable that any one should give his evidence on the dais by the side of the Judge.[2] The following may be deemed to be exceptions to the rule that the examination of witnesses should be in open Court:—

North-West Frontier Province.[2-b] In the exercise of their original jurisdiction and to Courts constituted under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.[3]

An objection that the depositions of witnesses were not taken in the manner prescribed must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and not in second appeal.[4]

The Notes by a Munsif as to the age or description of the witness in the heading of the deposition do not form part of the evidence.[5]

2. Effect of evidence taken in the absence of parties.—The examination of a material witness in the absence of the other party is a material irregularity which will vitiate the procedure if objection to the same is taken at the proper time.[1] Where no opportunity was given to a party to examine his witness, or to rebut the evidence or cross-examine the witness of the opposite party, then that evidence is not admissible for or against him unless consented to.[2] Where the defendant fails to appear without lawful excuse, the Judge may at once enter judgment against the defendant but where the Court takes the evidence of the plaintiff, the defendant who has appeared is entitled to cross-examine him.[3] The admission of a fact dispenses with the proof thereof and such portion of the statement as is an admission can always be treated as evidence without the whole statement being treated as such.[4]

3. "Shall be read over."—There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a deposition not read over to the witness is admissible in evidence against him in a subsequent trial for perjury or forgery. The High Courts of Calcutta,[1] Lahore[2] and Madras[3] have held that it is not, while the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has held that it is admissible.[4] But the fact that the deposition was read over by the witness himself[5] or that the reading over of the deposition was not in the presence of the Judge[6] or that a certificate as to the read-

Synopsis.

1. Applicability.
2. Memorandum of evidence.
3. Effect of non-compliance.

1. Applicability.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts, see O. 49, R. 3, nor to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province, see S. 46 (2) of Law and Justice Regulation thereof (VII of 1901). For a local repeal of this rule and Rr. 9 and 13 of this order, see the undermentioned Act.[1]

2. Memorandum of evidence.—Where a Judge does not take down the whole of the evidence himself, he is bound to make a memorandum of evidence and record every material answer made by the witness in the examination-in-chief, in the cross-examination and in reply to questions by the Court. It should be written down in consecutive sentences.[1] Where there is a conflict between the Judge's memorandum and the recorded deposition of a witness, the Court must be guided by the latter and not the former.[2] In cases governed by this rule, there must be either one or two records of evidence. If it is one record it must be in Judge's own handwriting; if otherwise, there must be a memorandum of evidence.[3]

3. Effect of non-compliance.—Failure to make a memorandum of evidence does not vitiate the proceedings if evidence is taken down in the language in which it is given.[1]

Synopsis.

1. Remarks on demeanour.

Plaintiff examining defendant as his wit- ness. See Note 1, Pt. (4).

1. Remarks on demeanour.—Under this rule, the Court may record such remarks about the demeanour of a witness as it thinks fit and the same cannot be expunged under the cloak of an amendment.[1] But where a witness stated his age to be 24 but the Judge made a note in his deposition that his age "appeared to be 18 or 19" it was held that the note cannot be considered to be evidence in the case.[2] The Court's belief that the evidence is biassed, is not a valid ground for refusing to record it.[3] The evidence of a defendant called to give evidence on the plaintiff's side, cannot be judged under different principles, merely because he is a defendant.[4]

2. Scope of the rule.—Under S. 191 of the Code of 1882, as it stood before 1888, it was held that the successor of the Judge who was removed was bound to fix a date for the entire hearing and trial of the case before himself and that such trial should proceed in the ordinary way except that the parties would be allowed to use the evidence already taken as evidence in the case.[1] This view, however, was dissented from by a Full Bench in Jadu Rai v. Kanizak Hussain[2] and held that the rule empowers the Judge to make use of the materials collected by the predecessor as evidence in the case without being bound to fix a day for commencing the trial de novo. In order to give effect to this latter view, the old S. 191 was substituted by a new section by Act VII of 1888 empowering the Judge to proceed with the suit from the stage at which the predecessor left it. That section has been substantially re-enacted in this rule.

It is not competent for any co-ordinate Court to hear the case under this rule.[3] Thus an additional Munsif has no jurisdiction to deliver

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule enables the Judge to inspect any property or thing though it may issue a commission also for that purpose.[1] The object of this provision is to enable the tribunal to understand questions that are being raised and to follow and apply the evidence.[2] But a judgment should not be based solely on the basis of such personal local inspection.[3] Though the Code nowhere lays down that it is obligatory on the Judge to record the result of the local enquiry[4] yet it is desirable that the result of such inspection should be recorded in the proceedings and not left for notice till judgment.[5] O. 18, R. 18, Note 1.

A Munsif is not bound to get the sanction of the District Judge before he makes an inspection. Sanction is however necessary for the levy of money for the expenses of such inspection.[6]

Where, at the instance of the plaintiff, a Munsif held a local inspection and, in the course thereof, at the instance of both the parties, he examined a person whose statements he used as confirming his impression formed independently of them, it was held that the parties could not turn round and say that the Munsif ought not to have used those statements.[7]

O. 19, R. 1, Note 1.

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit.

Affidavit when evidence. See Note 6, see also O. 11, R. 22, Note 1.

Application for declaration as touts. See R. 2, Note 4.

1. Affidavits—Essentials of.—An affidavit is a declaration in writing sworn before a person having authority to administer an oath.[1] The officer authorised, must be on duty at the time when the oath is administered.[2] But the want of the seal of the Magistrate before whom it is sworn does not make it bad.[3] The deponent may, instead of signing his name, affix a mark or a stamp bearing his name.[4]

Under the rules of the Supreme Court in England as also under the Rules of Practice framed by the High Courts in India, every affidavit should be drawn up in the first person and divided into paragraphs consecutively numbered, each paragraph dealing with a specific portion of the subject as nearly as may be.[5] It should also state correctly the description, and true place of abode of the deponent.[6] Any person acquainted with the facts of the case may give the affidavit.[7] An affidavit should not contain any inferences but only facts.[8] The contents must be read over to the deponent in a language which he understands and vouched by him to be correct.[9]

2. Stamp duty, if necessary.—An affidavit for the immediate purpose of being used or filed in any Court or before the officer of any Court, is exempt from stamp duty.[1] O. 19, R. 1, Notes 2—7.

3. Court fee, if necessary.—No Court-fee is payable on an affidavit filed in Court. See also Court Fees Act, S. 19 (XIV).

4. Cross-examination of deponent of affidavit.—Where the adverse party bona fide desires the production of the deponent for cross-examination, the Court has no power, under this rule, to order that the affidavit may be read at the hearing on proof of certain facts.[1] The Court will refuse to act on an affidavit, when the deponent cannot be cross-examined.[2]

On principle no cross-examination is allowed on affidavits in support of a petition for sanction under S. 195, Cr. P. C. and sanction should be given when the affidavit discloses materials for a prima facie case.[3]

5. Agreement to take evidence by affidavit.—When parties agree to take evidence by affidavit, it does not preclude them from taking oral evidence for supplementing the same except where the agreement specifies that the evidence is upon affidavits alone.[1]

6. Necessity for affidavits on matters of record or questions of law.—An affidavit is of no weight when it is simply a party's "opinion" on a question of law.[1] It is superfluous when the facts deposed to therein are already a matter of record.[2]

7. Applicability.—The power to take affidavits in proof of facts is extended to enquiries under the undermentioned Local or Special Acts.[1]

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross-examination.

1. "May be given on affidavit."—When evidence by affidavits is given, great care should be taken to see that they represent the real facts.[1] Thus when contributories of a company in liquidation complain of mis-application of the funds by the liquidators, and apply to make an officer of the company liable for such misappropriation they must definitely set out the sum misapplied and the grounds of the charge in the affidavit.[2] In motions to vary a commissioner's report affidavits should be filed, only when the Court orders it or for advancing a special fact with the permission of the Court.[3] A party in a suit for dissolution of marriage is not entitled to give evidence by affidavit.[4]

Legal Practitioners are officers of the Court and, when called upon to speak to facts relating to the case in which they are engaged, should not be asked to file affidavits. Their statements should be accepted.[5]

2. Stay of execution.—An application for stay of execution should be supported by an affidavit.[1]

3. Rule to show cause.—An application for a rule to show cause must be supported by an affidavit.[1]

4. Application to declare a person a tout.—Though it is open to a Court in an application under the Legal Practitioners' Act to act on an affidavit, to declare a person a tout, it is desirable that Courts should hear oral evidence.[1]

5. Affidavit of documents.—The production of documents can be resisted by a party by claiming privilege and the grounds of privilege must be sufficiently disclosed in the affidavit of documents. If the affidavit of docu-

If there be no such case, it shall be entitled In the matter of the petition of.

5. Affidavits shall be divided into paragraphs, and every paragraph shall be numbered consecutively and, as nearly as may be, shall be confined to a distinct portion of the subject.

6. Every person making any affidavit shall be described therein in such manner as shall serve to identify him clearly; and where necessary for this purpose, it shall contain the full name, the name of his father, of his caste or religious persuasion, his rank or degree in life, his profession, calling, occupation or trade, and the true place of his residence.

7. Unless it be otherwise provided, an affidavit may be made by any person having cognizance of the facts deposed to. Two or more persons may join in an affidavit; each shall depose separately to those facts which are within his own knowledge, and such facts shall be stated in separate paragraphs.

8. When the declarant in any affidavit speaks to any fact within his own knowledge, he must do so directly and positively, using the words "I affirm" or "I make oath and say".

9. Except in interlocutory proceedings, affidavit shall strictly be confined to such fact as the declarant is able of his own knowledge to prove. In interlocutory proceedings, when the particular fact is not within the declarant's own knowledge, but is stated from information obtained from others, the declarant shall use the expression "I am informed", and, if such be the case, "and verily believe it to be true", and shall state the name and address of, and sufficiently describe for the purposes of identification, the person or persons from whom he received such information. When the application or the opposition thereto rests on facts disclosed in documents or copies of documents produced from any Court of justice or other source, the declarant shall state what is the source from which they were produced, and his information and belief as to the truth of the facts disclosed in such documents.

10. When any place is referred to in an affidavit, it shall be correctly described. When in an affidavit any person is referred to, such person, the correct name and address of such person, and such further description as may be sufficient for the purpose of the identification of such person, shall be given in the affidavit.

11. Every person making an affidavit for use in a Civil Court shall, if not personally known to the person before whom the affidavit is made, be identified to that person by some one known to him, and the person before whom the affidavit is made shall state at the foot of the affidavit the name, address, and description of him by whom the identification was made as well as the time and place of such identification.

11-A. Such identification may be made by a person:—

(a) personally acquainted with the person to be identified, or

(b) satisfied, from papers in that person's possession or otherwise, of his identity:

Provided that in case (b) the person so identifying shall sign on the petition or affidavit a declaration in the following form, after there has been affixed to such declaration in his presence the thumb impression of the person so identified:—

FORM.

I, (name, address and description), declare that the person verifying this petition (or making this affidavit) and alleging himself to be A. B. has satisfied me (here state by what means, e.g., from papers in his possession or otherwise) that he is A. B.

12. No verification of a petition and no affidavit purporting to have been made by a Pardanashin woman who has not appeared unveiled before the person before whom the verification or affidavit was made, shall be used unless she has been identified in manner already specified and unless such petition, or affidavit be accompanied by an affidavit of identification of such woman made at the time by the person who identified her.

13. The person before whom any affidavit is about to be made shall, before the same is made, ask the person proposing to make such affidavit if he has read the affidavit and understands the contents thereof, and if the person proposing to make such affidavit state that he has not read the affidavit or appears not to understand the contents thereof, or appears to be illiterate, the person before whom the affidavit is about to be made shall read and explain, or cause some other competent person to read and explain in his presence, the affidavit to the person proposing to make the same, and when the person before whom the affidavit is about to be made is thus satisfied that the person proposing to make such affidavit understands the contents thereof, the affidavit may be made.

14. The person before whom an affidavit is made, shall certify at the foot of the affidavit the fact of the making of the affidavit before him and the time and place when and where it was made, and shall for the purpose of identification mark and initial any exhibits referred to in the affidavit.

15. If it be found necessary to correct any clerical error in any affidavit, such correction may be made in the presence of the person before whom the affidavit is about to be made, and before, but not after, the affidavit is made. Every correction so made shall be initialled by the person before whom the affidavit is made, and shall be made in such manner as not to render it impossible or difficult to read the original word or words, figure or figures, in respect of which the correction may have been made. O. 19, R. 3.

RANGOON.

To Order 19, the following shall be added as Rules 4 to 12:—

Mode of taking oath or affirmation by declarant of affidavit.

4 The officer administering the oath to the declarant of an affidavit should first make the declarant take the oath or affirmation. Then he should make the declarant repeat the whole of the statement written in the affidavit as coming from him. Then the declarant should sign the affidavit. Lastly the officer administering the oath should sign and date it.

Form of affidavit.

5. Every affidavit to be used in a Court of Justice should be entitled "In the———Court of———at———", naming the Court. If there is a case in Court, the affidavit in support of or in opposition to an application respecting it, must also be entitled. In the case of———. 'If there is no case in Court, the affidavit should be entitled', 'in the matter of the petition of'.

Mode of writing affidavits.

6. Every affidavit containing any statement of facts shall be divided into paragraphs, and every paragraph shall be numbered consecutively and, as nearly as may be, shall be confined to a distinct portion of the subject.

Address of person making affidavit.

7. Every person, other than a plaintiff or defendant in a suit in which the application is made, making an affidavit, shall be described in such a manner as will serve to identify him clearly that is to say, by the statement of his full name, the name of his father, his profession or trade, and the place of his residence.

Mode of speaking by declarant to fact within his own knowledge.

8. When the declarant in any affidavit speaks to any fact within his own knowledge, he must do so directly and positively, using the words 'I affirm' (or 'make oath') 'and say'.

Mode of speaking by declarant to fact not within his own knowledge.

9 When the particular fact is not within the declarant's own knowledge, but is stated from information obtained from others, the declarant must use the expression 'I am informed' (and, if such be the case, should add 'and verily believe it to be true)' or he may state the source from which he received such information. When the statement rests on facts disclosed in documents or copies of documents procured from any Court of Justice or other source, the deponent shall state what is the source from which they were procured and his information or belief as to the truth of the facts disclosed in such documents.

Identification of person making affidavit not personally known to commissioner.

10. Every person making an affidavit, if not personally known to the commissioner, shall be identified to the commissioner by some person known to him, and the commissioner shall specify at the foot of the petition, or of the affidavit (as the case may be), the name and description of him by whom the identification is made, as well as the time and place of the identification and of the making of the affidavit.

O. 19, R. 3, Notes 1—2.

11. If any person making an affidavit is ignorant of the language in which it is written, or appears to the commissioner to be illiterate or not fully to understand the contents of the affidavit, the commissioner shall cause the affidavit to be read and explained to him in a language which he understands. If it is necessary to employ an interpreter for this purpose, the interpreter shall be sworn to interpret truly. When an affidavit is read and explained as herein provided, the commissioner shall certify in writing at the foot of the affidavit that it has been so read and explained, and that the declarant seemed perfectly to understand the same at the time of making the affidavit. When an interpreter is employed the commissioner shall state in his certificate, the name of the interpreter, and the fact that he was sworn to interpret truly.

Interpretation of affidavit when person making it is ignorant of the language in which it is written.

12. In administering oaths and affirmations to declarants the commissioner shall be guided by the provisions of the Indian Oaths Act, 1873.

Administration of oath or affirmation.

Worthless affidavits. See R. 1, Note 1, F.-N. (7); Note 4, F.-N. (2) and Note 6.

1. Statements as to belief must contain grounds thereof.—The grounds of belief must first be stated with sufficient clearness to enable a Court to judge whether it would be safe to act on the deponent's belief.[1] Thus, where, in an interlocutory application for injunction to restrain the publication of a libel, the affidavit in support of the application stated that the documents complained of were "to the best of his knowledge, information and belief, utterly untrue," but no grounds for his belief were shown, it was held insufficient.[2] Though ordinarily, evidence on information and belief is admissible in interlocutory applications intended to maintain things in status quo till the rights of the parties are decided, yet, in England, if the application is only interlocutory in form, but really aiming at finally disposing of the rights of the parties, it will be inadmissible.[3]

2. Scandalous and irrelevant matter.—If an affidavit contains scandalous and irrelevant allegations, it may be ordered to be taken off the file, or, the particular passage may be expunged.[1]

JUDGMENT AND DECREE.

O. 20, R. 1, Notes 1—3.

R. 1. [S. 198.] The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Judgment when pronounced.

The existing Rule 1 is re-numbered as sub-Rule (1) and the following is added as sub-Rule (2):—

(2) The judgment may be pronounced by dictation to a shorthand writer in open Court, where the presiding Judge has been specially empowered in that behalf by the High Court.

"Pronounce"—Meaning. See Note 4, Pt. (4).

1. Scope of the order.—Rules 1 to 5 of this order deal with judgments and Rr. 6 to 19 with decrees. Rule 20 enacts that the parties shall be entitled to obtain certified copies of the judgment and decree on application made by them and at their expense. Rules 12 to 18 in particular deal with the classes of cases in which preliminary decrees may be passed. As to whether the list is exhaustive of the cases in which preliminary decrees can be passed, see Note 10 to S. 2, sub-S. 2, ante.[1]

2. Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts[1] or the Chief Court of Oudh[2] in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction.

3. "After the case has been heard."—See also S. 33 ante. A judgment given without the Judge having heard the case fully, is a nullity. that the judgment was a nullity as the case had not been fully heard.[1] It is not legal for the Judge to appoint assessors to appraise the value of the evidence in the case and base his judgment on that opinion[2] or to base the judgment upon the unrecorded statements made at the Bar.[3]

As a general rule it is the Judge that heard the evidence that should give the judgment.[4] The following cases are however the exceptions to the general rule:—

(1) Where the Judge is prevented by death, transfer, or other like cause from concluding the trial of the suit. In such cases the successor may deal with the evidence taken by the predecessor and proceed with the suit. See O. 18, R. 15.

(2) Under Rule 2 infra a Judge may pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor.

(3) Where the evidence has been taken by a Commissioner under the provisions of O. 26, Rr. 1 and 4.

4. "Shall pronounce judgment in open Court."—Judgments should be pronounced in open Court.[1] The expression "open Court" refers to the place and manner of the pronouncement of the judgment.[2] The mere posting of a notice on the notice-board announcing the result of an appeal is not a sufficient compliance with the rule.[3] But it is not necessary that the whole of the judgment should be read out by the Judge in open Court.[4] Nor is a judgment of the Full Bench rendered invalid by its pronouncement at a time when one of the Judges of the Bench was absent on other duty.[5] Where a judgment was written and signed by the Judge who heard the case but, at his request, was read out by his colleague, a Judge presiding in another Court, it was held that such a procedure is not invalid and will, in any case, be only an irregularity which is cured by S. 99 of the Code.[6]

5. "Judgment," meaning of.—See S. 2, Sub-S. (9) and the case noted below.[1] As to what judgments should contain, see R. 4 infra.

6. When judgment may be pronounced.—A judgment can be pronounced only after the case has been heard. Where a date has been fixed for the hearing of the suit or appeal, the Court cannot pronounce its judgment before such date.[1] The Court, has, however, ample authority to direct successive trials of different issues, and to record interlocutory judgments thereon, to be made the basis of the final judgment at the conclusion of the trial of the whole case.[2] There is no objection to a Judge at the close of the hearing of a suit or appeal stating at once orally the judgment which he intends to record and deliver, and afterwards to pronounce in open Court his written judgment.[3] O. 20, R. 1, Notes 6—9.

See also Notes 7, 8 and 9 infra.

7. Holiday.—The delivery of a judgment or the doing of any judicial act on a holiday is not illegal,[1] though if a party is injuriously affected by such act he will be entitled to have the proceedings set aside on that ground.[2]

8. "Or on some future day."—The law pre-supposes a prompt and continous trial and a judgment must be pronounced as quickly as possible.[1] A judgment delivered after an interval of seven months on an incomplete and imperfect record of evidence was held not to be a legal decision.[2]

9. Notice to parties.—Where a judgment is to be passed on a future day after the case has been heard, it is necessary that due notice thereof should be given to the parties or their pleaders.[1] It is not the duty of the parties to make enquiries as to when the judgment will be delivered; they are entitled to rely on the Court obeying the express provisions of law and giving notice to them or their pleaders of the date fixed for the delivery of judgment.[2] A judgment delivered without due notice to the parties or their pleaders cannot be said to have been validly pronounced within the meaning of this rule.[3] The posting of a notice on the notice-board[4] or the sending of a notice to the pleader of a party[5] announcing the result of a case, is not a compliance with the rule. that the parties should be present at the time of the delivery of the judgment and a suit cannot be dismissed on the ground that the parties were not present at the time of the delivery of the judgment.[6]

Where there is nothing on the record to show, that the notice was not given to the parties or their pleaders, it must be presumed that they did receive such notice.[7]

The provisions of the rule apply also to cases where a judgment is pronounced by a successor under the next rule.[8]

10. Non-compliance with Rules 1, 2 and 3.—A judgment not pronounced at all is not a valid judgment,[1] but the non-compliance with this rule and with Rr. 2 and 3 as to the manner in which it is to be pronounced, dated and signed is only an irregularity within the meaning of S. 99 of the Code and does not afford a ground for the reversal in appeal of the decree based on the judgment in the absence of the prejudice.[2] A decree that follows such a judgment is nevertheless valid until set aside on appeal.[3] order, therefore, that this rule may apply it is necessary that the predecessor must have written the judgment.[1] There is difference of opinion, however, as to whether it should be also signed by the predecessor. According to the High Court of Calcutta the judgment is, under the provisions of R. 3 infra, to be signed at the time of pronouncing it by the successor and that therefore it is not necessary that the predecessor should have signed it.[2] The High Court of Patna, has, on the other hand, expressed the view that R. 3 applies only to cases where the judgment is delivered by the very Judge who wrote it and not to cases coming under R. 2, where the judgment is written by one officer and is pronounced by another.[3] It seems to follow from this that the predecessor must have written and also signed the judgment.[4] O. 20, R. 2, Note 2.

There is also a difference of opinion on the question whether it is necessary for the predecessor to have written the judgment at a time when he had still jurisdiction over the suit. The general consensus of opinion is that it is not.[5] Thus when a District Judge retired from office on October 4, 1927, and the judgment was signed by him on October 9, 1927, and the same was pronounced in Court by his successor on October 17, 1927, it was held that the judgment was valid in law.[6] A contrary view has, however, been expressed in the undermentioned cases.[7]

Can a judgment be pronounced by the predecessor after his transfer or after he has left his judicial post? According to the Chief Court of Punjab, there is no illegality in adopting such a course.[8] According to the High Court of Rangoon, the pronouncement of the judgment is a material part of the trial and cannot be performed by any other person than a Judge of the Court in which the suit was tried.[9] It would seem to follow from this that a Judge who has ceased to be the Judge of the Court in which the suit was tried cannot pronounce a judgment therein though it had been written by himself.

1. Rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts[1] or to the Chief Court of Oudh[2] or to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province[3] in the exercise of the ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

2. Applicability of the rule.—There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this rule, in so far as it requires the Judge to sign and date the judgment at the time of pronouncing it, applies to cases where the successor pronounces the judgment of the predecessor under the provisions of this rule. See Note 2 to R. 2 above.

3. "Shall not afterwards be altered or added to."—The jurisdiction of the Court to reconsider its order continues so long as the order has not been perfected under this rule,[1] but ceases once the judgment is signed, except as provided by S. 152 or on review.[2] The Court cannot therefore, after the judgment is signed, alter it, or add to it, in any manner, except as provided by this rule, and this even with the consent of the parties.[3] Thus it cannot alter the grounds on which the judgment proceeded,[4] or add findings on issues omitted to be decided by the judgment.[5] Nor can a successor alter the judgment which had been pronounced by the predecessor on any point.[6] Where a Judge pronounces a judgment but suspends the drawing up of the decree till a succession certificate is produced by the plaintiff, he cannot, on the plaintiff's failure to produce the certificate, cancel the judgment and deliver a different one inconsistent with the former.[7]

The words "after such revision as may be deemed necessary" in the rule as substituted by the High Court of Madras, do not authorise the Judge to revise the transcript and to substitute fresh words for the words originally dictated; they do not contemplate a revision of the effective part of the judgment but should be of the nature referred to in S. 152, and one relating to clerical and arithmetical mistakes arising from any accidental slip or omission.[8]

4. "Save as provided by S. 152 or on review."—This rule recognises two exceptions to the general rule that a Judge cannot, after he has once signed the judgment, reconsider the matter over again:—

(1) Under S. 152 of the Code clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments, decrees or orders or errors due to accidental slips or omissions can be corrected by the Court.[1] See also Note 2 to S. 152.

(2) Under O. 47, R. 1 the Court may grant a review of the judgment where the conditions of that rule are satisfied. See O. 47, R. 1.[2]

1. Rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction. (See O. 49, R. 3.) It has accordingly been held by the High Court of Bombay that though in an ordinary case, a judge in the exercise of such jurisdiction, should give his reasons for his decision, the absence of reasons would not detract from the legal validity of the decision.[1] The rule would, of course, apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction.[2] The rule does not apply to the Chief Court of Oudh in the exercise of its ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction[3] nor to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province.[4] O. 20, R. 4, Notes 1—5.

2. "Judgment"—Meaning of.—See S. 2, sub-S. (9), ante.

3. Object of judgments.—The object of insisting upon a judgment in respect of a decision of the Court, is to enable an appellate or revisional Court to find out whether the Judge has applied his mind to the case, and whether the decree or order is according to law.

4. Personal knowledge.—A Judge cannot import his own private knowledge or opinion into a case but must decide it on the evidence before him.[1] If he intends to use his personal knowledge, he is bound to give evidence like any other witness.[2] A judgment based upon such knowledge without any reference to the evidence in the case is not one in accordance with law and is liable to be set aside.[3]

5. Appreciation of evidence.—It is a fundamental principle that the decision of a Court rests, not upon mere suspicion, or surmises or conjectures but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony.[1] A judgment therefore, based on the evidence of witnesses whom the opposite party had no opportunity to cross-examine,[2] or based on evidence recorded in a different suit,[3] is not a judgment that can be maintained.

An omission to make special mention of the oral evidence,[4] or to refer to every detail in the evidence[5] does not warrant a presumption that the evidence has not been adequately or reasonably considered; but where a Judge makes only a colourable pretence of considering the evidence without really having done so the judgment cannot be accepted as a proper one.[6]

On questions of fact, a judgment of the Court of the first instance, must, except as provided by O. 18, R. 15, be based upon an examination of the evidence taken before the Judge himself, who delivers the judgment.[7] It must be based upon a consideration of the whole evidence on both sides and not merely upon some isolated piece of evidence.[8] In considering the evidence, the following points may be usefully mentioned:—

(1) It is not the proper way of appreciating the evidence to approach it with prejudice and suspect everything and everybody.[9]

(2) The mere fact that a witness is related to a party or supports the party does not necessarily make his evidence interested or unreliable: nor does the rejection of a portion of his testimony vitiate the whole testimony on that ground alone.[10]

(3) The fact that a witness had given evidence in other cases is not always a legitimate objection to his credibility though it may be a legitimate objection to a man's credit that he is a professional witness.[11]

(4) The testimony of a person who testifies that a certain conversation took place is of more value than that of one who says that it did not.[12]

(5) When the oral testimony adduced in an action is directly conflicting and irreconcilable, the only safe guide for the Judge is that afforded by the conduct of the parties, and the contents of the documents produced.[13]

6. Contents of judgments.—It is the duty of the Court to adjudicate on a claim as brought.[1] A judgment is bad if it is based on a question neither raised in the written statement nor included in any issue,[2] though it is open to a Court to find that the case of a party lies somewhere between the cases of both the parties.[3]

It is the duty of the Courts to write their judgments without unnecessary prolixity and repetition of pleadings.[4] A judgment is unsatisfactory if it is a mere catalogue of documents without any consideration of their probative value,[5] or if it simply repeats the arguments of the counsel on both sides,[6] or if it is unintelligible.[7] It is not desirable that Judges should make remarks against the character of a person who is neither a party nor a witness in the proceedings before them,[8] nor should they give findings on matters which are unnecessary for the disposal of the suit.[9] The statements of their findings must be specific and precise.[10] O. 20, R. 4, Notes 6—8.

7. Construction of judgments.—As a general rule, where the language of a judgment is doubtful, the benefit of the doubt ought to go to the judgment-debtor.[1] All parts of the judgment should be read together and construed as a whole[2] but where the previous part of the judgment cannot be reconciled with the conclusion ultimately drawn, the former should be rejected.[3]

8. Judgments of Small Cause Courts.—A judgment of a Small Cause Court need not set out the reasons for the decision,[1] though as a matter of practice it is usual to give reasons except in unimportant cases.[2] But the judgment must set out the points for determination and the decision on each of those points.[2-a] A mere statement such as "issue not proved, suit dismissed,"[3] or "the plaintiff fails, suit dismissed,"[4] or "claim decreed with costs,"[4-a] or a general statement after setting out the points "I find all the issues for the plaintiff" without dealing with each point separately,[5] is not a valid judgment.

The judgment must also be sufficiently intelligible,[6] and must indicate clearly that the Judge has applied his mind to the case and that the decree or order is according to law.[7] The test whether this rule has been used or abused lies, in fact, in the answer to the question whether the judgment has been made intelligible. When the Judge has to deal with a question of fact he need not give anything more than his actual decision on the question, namely his answer to it. But in cases involving difficult questions of law or mixed questions of fact and law the Judge should set out so much of his reasoning as will make clear the road by which he has reached the conclusion.[8]

The mere fact that the judgment of a Small Cause Court does not set out the points for determination is, however, no ground for setting it aside if otherwise the judgment is intelligible and the Judge has applied his mind to the case.[9]

9. Other judgments.—Clause 2 of this rule requires that a judgment of a Court other than a Small Cause Court, should contain

(1) a concise statement of the case,

(2) the points for determination,

(3) the decision thereon, and,

(4) the reasons for such decision.[1]

In writing judgment in appealable cases, the provisions of this rule should be strictly followed.[1-a]

The judgment should state not merely the finding on the point raised, but must also state what the evidence consists of, and how it proves the plaintiff's or defendant's case.[2] A judgment unsupported by reasons cannot be accepted as legally binding on the parties.[3] But a judgment is not defective merely because specific issues were not framed, if all the points

1. Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts[1] or to the Chief Court of Oudh[2] or to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province[3] in the exercise of the ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

2. Decision on each issue necessary.—It is imperative upon the Court to pronounce its findings upon all issues as may be necessary for the disposal of the suit.[1] There should be a finding on each issue separately and not on all issues together.[2] In appealable cases, it is always desirable that the Court should, as far as may be practicable pronounce its opinion on all the important points which have been raised in the case (whether such findings are necessary or unnecessary for the decision of the case),[3] and this is ordinarily expected in cases where evidence has been allowed to be given on all the issues.[4] The concluding words of the rule do not preclude the Judge from giving his findings on all the issues, though some of them may be unnecessary for the decision of the case,[5] though such findings should not form part of the Court's decree.[6]

1. Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.[1] See O. 49, R. 3.

As to the applicability of this rule to proceedings under certain Tenancy Acts, see the undermentioned Acts.[2]

2. Scope of the Rule.—It is imperative that the decree should agree with the judgment.[1] As has been seen in Note 6 to S. 152 ante where the decree does not agree with the judgment, the Court has an inherent power to amend it so as to bring it into confirmity with the judgment.[2] Where, however, the decree does agree with the judgment, it cannot subsequently be altered or added to by the Court passing it, except under S. 152 or under R. 11, infra.[3]

Where a decree or any part of a decree is passed by consent of parties, it should always so appear on the face of the decree when drawn up.[4]

Where a judgment is pronounced, the decree must automatically follow it and the Court has no power to direct that the preparation of the decree be stopped until the payment of deficit Court-fees.[5]

3. Form and contents of decree.—Decrees drawn up in suits should contain all the particulars required by this rule[1] and should use the forms prescribed in Appendix D to this schedule, with such variations as the circumstances of each case may require.[2] A decree properly prepared should indicate against whom, and in favour of which of the parties, it has been made and should state the names of all the persons against whom it has been passed and who will be affected thereby; where a defendant is not one of the persons against whom the decree is made there is no decree against him.[3] If, during the pendency of the suit, the plaintiff dies and his

The decree must be quite distinct from the judgment[7] and must be self-contained and capable of execution without reference to any other documents.[8] A copy of the judgment with the schedule of costs appended thereto does not constitute a proper decree.[9]

O. 20, R. 6, Notes 3—4.

In preparing a decree, Courts ought to clearly define and specify what their intentions are.[10] The parties and their pleaders should also see that the decrees are properly drawn up.[11]

Courts in India cannot make a decree of non-suit.[12] No decree need be drawn up in matters which are not civil suits,[13] or in cases of orders passed under S. 47 of the Code.[14] But the Court will not be deterred from making a decree by the mere fact that there may be difficulties in carrying it out[15] or because there is no specific provision for passing a decree in the particular case.[16]

In the case of appellate decrees it will be always expedient expressly to embody in a decree of affirmance so much of the decree below as it is intended to affirm, and thus avoid the necessity of reference to the superseded decree.[17]

5. Construction of decree.—See Notes 76 and 77 to S. 47 and the cases noted below.[1]

6. Provision for costs—Sub-Rule 2.—Ordinarily the judgment does not set forth the actual amount of the costs awarded in the suit.[1] The decree must, however, state specifically the actual amount of costs, and by whom and in what proportions they are to be paid; and no costs can be recovered unless they are so mentioned.[2] A mere specification of the costs alone without any allotment of responsibility is not a sufficient compliance with the rule.[3]

But it is not necessary in an appellate decree to state specifically the sums which go to make up the costs of the first Court.[4]

Where, in a suit against a minor, the Court considers that the guardian should be personally ordered to pay the costs, it should be so stated in the decree or order.[5] O. 20, R. 6. Notes 6—9.

See also S. 35 ante.

7. Decree not in accordance with the judgment.—Where the judgment awards costs without specifying the actual amount, the costs must be calculated according to law.[1] Where therefore, the assessment of costs is not according to law,[2] or where the decree awards costs in a case in which the judgment is silent,[3] or where the decree awards costs at a higher rate than that specified in the judgment,[4] the decree to that extent, is at variance with the judgment and can be amended under the provisions of S. 152 of the Code or under the Court's inherent powers. See S. 152, Note 6.

As to whether interest which is inadvertently omitted in the decree, though mentioned in the judgment, can be awarded in execution. See the cases noted below.[5]

8. Set-off of costs towards sums admitted or found due.—Where in suit by A against B, a decree is passed against B for payment of a certain sum of money to A, but A is ordered to pay the costs of B, B can set-off the amount of costs against the amount payable by him to A.[1] It has been held that costs made payable under different orders in the same suit, may be set-off against each other.[2]

A set-off cannot be allowed for costs not actually awarded[3] nor for sums of money which one party might get from the other on the latter's applying for delivery of possession.[4]

1. Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction[1] but it has been held by the High Court of Madras that even in cases of decrees passed on the original side of the High Court, the practice is to make the decree bear the same date as that of the judgment.[2]

2. Date of the decree.—The date of the decree and the date of the signing of the decree are two different things. The date of the decree must correspond to the date on which the judgment is pronounced, no matter what the date of the signing of the decree may happen to be.[1] The reason is, that, it is on the date of the judgment that the Court must be deemed to have expressed what the decree is.[2] The decree, therefore, though drawn up afterwards, relates back to[3] and operates from[4] the date of the judgment. Thus where one of the plaintiffs dies subsequent to the date of delivery of judgment but before the decree is actually drawn up, the fact does not affect the validity of the decree.[5] Where, however, a Court gives a judgment but refuses or is unable to give a decree, till a condition is performed and draws up a decree after the performance of the condition, it must be held that the judgment given is only a provisional one which does not become operative until the decree is prepared, and that the latter date is the date of the judgment as well as of the decree.[6]

3. Limitation.—S. 12 of the Limitation Act provides that, in computing the period of limitation for appeal or for review, there shall be excluded the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree. Suppose now that the decree is actually signed on a date subsequent to that on which the judgment is pronounced, and a party applies for copies of the decree and judgment after the date of the signing of the decree. Can the period between the pronouncing of the judgment and the signing of the decree, be excluded in computing the period of limitation, in addition to the period actually taken in obtaining the copies? On this point there has been a conflict of opinion. According to the practice of the Calcutta High Court, such period should be excluded as being part of the time requisite for obtaining the copy.[1] This practice has been followed by the High Court of Patna.[2] All the other High Courts have on the other hand held that such period cannot be excluded in computing the period of limitation.[3] In Pramathanath Roy v. William Arthur Lee,[4] it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that no period can be regarded as requisite under the Limitation Act, which need not have elapsed if the appellant had taken reasonable and proper steps to obtain an order, and that there is no warrant for the proposition that the time actually consumed in obtaining the decree must be deducted. Their Lordships referred to the Calcutta view but did not decide as to the correctness or otherwise thereof.

Section 12, sub-S. 2 of the Limitation Act does not apply to applications for execution of a decree, and even according to the Calcutta[5] and Patna[6]

High Courts, the period of limitation for an application for execution of a decree runs from the date of the judgment and not from the date on which the decree is drawn up and signed.

4. Registration Act, S. 77.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that for the purposes of S. 77 of the Registration Act the period of 30 days is to be reckoned not from the time when the judgment is pronounced, but from the time when the decree is actually drawn up and signed.[1]

1. Chartered High Courts.—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction (O. 49, R. 3, Cl. 5).

Where the decree was imperfect, and the judge who pronounced it had left the district and it was impossible to draw up a decree from the judgment, it was held in the undermentioned case[1] that there is no alternative but to order a new trial.

decree should specify such boundaries or numbers. The reason is that, otherwise, the decree may in many cases become impossible of execution by reason of the indefiniteness of the property dealt with by it.[1] O. 20, R. 9, Notes 1—2.

But the omission to comply with the strict letter of the rule does not render the decree invalid.[2] The Court can ascertain the subject upon which the decree operates, from the acts and conduct of the parties.[3]

The rule contemplates cases where the plaintiff is able to indicate and describe the property in suit. It does not apply to cases in which this cannot be done, e.g., in suits between proprietors of contiguous lands for the ascertainment and fixing of boundaries, on the ground of confusion of boundaries.[4]

2. Decree for possession of land.—A decree for possession of a village passes with it the village account books and other documents relating to the management of the village.[1] Similarly it will pass with it any buildings or other constructions erected thereon[2] except where the defendant is not a trespasser and is entitled under law to remove the building.[3] of the property, the decree need not always be for the delivery of the property in the first instance; the Court may, in proper cases, decree only the value of the property as damages.[2] Thus where the defendant is not in possession of the property claimed, the Court need not decree delivery thereof but may pass a decree for the value of such property.[3] But where the Court considers it proper to direct a restoration of the property, the decree should also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.[4]

The giving of the alternative remedy does not, however, give the decree-holder any option of refusing to take delivery of the property and of insisting upon the money portion of the decree; he cannot execute his decree without having recourse to the procedure prescribed by O. 21, R. 31.[5] Nor can the judgment-debtor claim any option of either surrendering the property or paying the money decreed.[6]

The words "moveable property" in the rule, mean, specific moveable property such as is referred to in Arts. 48 and 49 of the Limitation Act.[7] A suit for the recovery of a certain quantity of grain payable under a Karar for maintenance, is not one for specific moveable property within the meaning of this rule.[8]

No decree can be passed under this rule for delivery of property against several defendants jointly unless there is a combination among them; if it is found that anyone of them took possession of the property, the decree should be made against him only, and to the extent of the property taken by him.[9]

2. "Amount of money to be paid".—The money to be paid as an alternative is the value of the property together with damages for the time the plaintiff has been kept out of it.[1] Where the plaintiff valued the property claimed at Rs. 1,360-0-0 and produced evidence to show that this was the value, but the defendant simply refused to accept the valuation and would not produce the articles, which, he did not deny were in his possession, it was held that, under the circumstances, the valuation made by the plaintiff ought to be accepted by the Court.[2]

Where a decree is passed in terms of an award ordering delivery of moveable property, and a part of such property is lost subsequently before delivery, the decree cannot be modified by the Court by inserting in it an order to pay the value of the property so lost.[3]

Local Amendments.

MADRAS.

Substitute the following for Rule 11:—

"11. (1) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason at the time of passing the decree order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments, with or without interest, notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which money is payable.

(2) After the passing of any such decree, the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor and after notice to the decree-holder, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit."

NAGPUR.

In sub-Rule (2) of Rule 11 in Order 20 for the words "and with the consent of the decree-holder", the words "and after notice to the decree-holder" shall be substituted.

RANGOON.

The following amendment shall be made to the second sub-section of R. 11:—

For the words "and with the consent of the decree-holder", substitute the words "and after notice to the decree-holder."

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "shall be postponed" in sub-Rules (1) and (2) are new. Owing to the absence of these words in the old Code, the Court could not order that the decree amount shall not be paid until the expiration of a fixed time.[1]
2. The words "notwithstanding anything contained . . . . payable" are also new. See Note 7, infra.
3. For the words "in all decrees" the words "where and in so far as a decree" have been substituted.
4. The proviso in the old section has been omitted.

2. Scope of the rule.—Where a decree in a suit is for the payment of money, the Court may, under this rule, order the payment of the decree amount to be postponed or to be made in instalments.[1] If it decides to pass such order at the time of passing the decree, it may do so if there are sufficient grounds therefor [sub-R. (1)[1-a]]. After the passing of the decree, it can pass such an order, only if the decree-holder gives his consent thereto [sub-Rule (2)].[1-b]

The rule applies to decrees for the payment of money. It does not apply to decrees for recovery of money by sale of property, as in the case of mortgage-decrees.[2] But independently of this rule, a decree may, in a suit on a mortgage or for partition, be passed on a compromise between the parties, providing for payment by instalments and for sale of the mortgaged property in default.[3] O.20, R.11, Notes 2—6

This rule does not apply to cases coming under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act[4] or rent decrees under the Bengal Tenancy Act.[5] In a suit for arrears of rent under the Agra Tenancy Act against a person other than a permanent tenure-holder or a fixed rate tenant, the Revenue Court cannot make a decree payable by instalments under this rule.[6]

3. Decree must be for the payment of money.—A decree for deficiency passed under O. 34, R. 6 of the Code is only a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule.[1]

4. "The Court."—It is the Court which passed the decree that can act under this rule.[1] In cases coming under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, however, it is provided by S. 15-B of that Act that the Court which carries out the decree can order the payment by instalments or extend the time for payment.[2]

5. Postponement of payment.—Under S. 210 of the old Code, there was a conflict of opinion as to whether the Court could make an order postponing the payment under a decree.[1] The introduction of the words "shall be postponed" in this rule makes it clear, that such an order can be passed.

A judgment-debtor who has enjoyed the benefit of the arrangement for delay in execution by virtue of an order passed under this rule, cannot subsequently resile from such arrangement.[2]

6. Order for payment by instalments.—See Note 2 above.

A decree payable in instalments on a certain condition (e.g., that the defendant should mortgage certain property by way of security) is not illegal on that ground.[1] As to the construction of decrees for payment of money in instalments, see the undermentioned cases.[2]

O.20, R.11, Notes 7—8.

7. Sufficient reason.—The Court has a discretion, under this rule, to order payment of the decree amount in instalments. But such discretion should, as in the case of the exercise of all discretion under the Code, be exercised in a judicial and not in an arbitrary manner.[1] The onus is on the defendant to show that he is entitled to the indulgence under this rule: where he has opposed the claim on frivolous grounds and effected a fraudulent conveyance of his property, subsequent to the institution of the suit, he deserves no consideration at the hands of the Court especially where the interest agreed upon between the parties is moderate.[2] Nor should a decree be passed the effect of which is to stay execution unconditionally,[3] or to make the instalments extend over a long period without guaranteeing satisfaction or making any provision for the payment of interest.[4] Again, the mere fact that the defendant is unable to pay or is hard pressed or embarrassed,[5] or that his estate is under the management of Court of Wards,[6] or that he is expecting to get a cross decree against the plaintiff in a pending litigation which would enable him to claim a set-off,[7] is not a sufficient reason to enable the Court to order payment by instalments or to postpone payment.

Where, however, the rate of interest is exhorbitant or unconscionable,[8] or where the decree for immediate payment will deprive the defendant of his means of livelihood,[9] or where the defendant has made payments towards principal and interest, which exceed the principal sum,[10] a decree for instalments can be properly passed. Again a lender who abandons his proper remedy in order to avoid the consequence of the original contract is not entitled to the relief prayed for under this rule, if it would be a hardship to the judgment-debtor.[11]

8. "Notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which money is payable".—Where an instalment bond provided for payment by instalments, with a default clause to the effect that the whole sum would be due immediately on default, and a suit was brought for the whole amount on default, it was held by the Bombay High Court under S. 210 of the old Code, that the Court had no jurisdiction to ignore the express contract of the parties as to the consequences of such default and pass a decree for instalments.[1] The introduction of the words "notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which money is payable" in the present rule now makes it clear that the Court has a discretion to pass a decree for instalments notwithstanding the contract between the parties. In their Statements of Objects and Reasons, the Special Committee observe as follows:— O.20, R.11. Notes 8—10.

> "The Committee have added words to sub-Rule (1) of this rule in order to override the ruling of the Bombay High Court in the case of Raghu Govind Paranjpe v. Dipchand (I. L. R. 4 Bom. 96), as the practice inculcated by that ruling seems to prevail only in the Presidency of Bombay and not in the rest of India."

9. "With or without interest".—The granting or refusal of interest, and the rate at which it is to be granted on the instalments ordered to be paid, are in the discretion of the Court.[1] Where no interest is provided for in an instalment decree, it must, under the provisions of S. 34 of the Code be deemed to have been refused, and cannot be granted by the executing Court.[2] Where however, interest is provided for in the decree, but the rate is not mentioned, the Court can, in execution grant the usual Court rate of interest.[3]

10. Order for instalments after decree—Sub-R. 2.—As has been seen in Note 2 ante, no order for instalments can be made after the passing of the decree under this sub-rule unless the decree-holder gives his consent thereto. But the consent need not be an express one. It was held in the undermentioned case that the non-opposition by the decree-holder after notice to him may amount to consent within this rule.[1]

An order for postponement or for instalments this sub-rule does not amount to a variation of the decree itself[2] and can be made in execution proceedings[3] or even when an appeal is pending from the decree.[4] Nor does the rule direct the decree to be amended by virtue of such order.[5] Where default is committed in the payment of instalments ordered to be paid, the Court can grant relief against forfeiture,[6] though it cannot alter the terms of the decree either with regard to the decretal amount or the rate of interest which is to be paid thereon.[7]

Where parties agree after decree that the decretal amount should be paid by instalments and the Court accepting the compromise, passes an order striking off the execution proceedings, the Court must be deemed to have passed an order under the provisions of this sub-rule.[8] But unless recognised by the Court in some form, the arrangement between the parties will not, by itself, amount to a direction by the Court under this rule[9] and cannot be enforced in execution.[10]

11. Taking of security.—The security that may be taken under sub-R. 2 for the due performance of the decree can be enforced in execution and O. 34, R. 14 is no bar thereto.[1]

Where by an order under the sub-R. 2 the judgment-debtor was to execute a mortgage to the decree-holder the subsequent adjudication of the judgment-debtor as an insolvent could not affect the rights of the decree-holder to have the mortgage executed in his favour.[2]

12. Limitation for application under sub-R. 2.—An application under this sub-rule for postponement or for payment in instalments of the decree amount should be made within six months of the decree, under Article 175, Schedule I of the Limitation Act.[1] But if an order for instalments is actually passed on a time-barred application, it is not a nullity. It must be assumed that the Court, by oversight decided the question of limitation wrongly.[2] Where there has been an appeal from a decree the time for the application for an order for instalments runs only from the date of the decree of the appellate Court even though the latter confirmed the judgment of the lower Court and dismissed the appeal.[3] is to happen on default of payment of such instaiments regularly, the period of limitation for enforcing the payment of each instalment runs from the date on which it falls due and the period of limitation is three years from such date under Article 182, Cl. 7 of the Limitation Act.[1] O.20, R.11, Note 13.

Where, however, a default clause is inserted in the decree to the effect that on failure to pay one instalment, the whole of the decretal amount shall become due or that the decree-holder shall be entitled to execute the decree for the whole amount, the following questions arise for consideration:—

(1) Whether time for the execution of the decree for the whole amount runs from the date of the first default,

(2) Whether such default can be waived by the decree-holder,

(3) What constitutes waiver.

On the first point, it has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Patna that where an instalment decree provides that on default of payment of one instalment the whole shall be recoverable, time for the recovery of the whole amount runs from the date of the first default, but that where the decree provides that on such default the decree-holder might or is at liberty to execute the decree for the whole amount, the decree-holder has an option to execute the decree or not for the whole amount and limitation does not run from the date of the first default if he does not exercise his option.[2] This distinction between decrees providing that on default the decree-holder shall execute and decrees providing that the decree-holder may execute for the whole amount has not been accepted by other High Courts and according to them, time runs from the date of the first default whether the provision in the decree is that the decree-holder shall execute or whether it is that the decree-holder may execute for the whole amount on default of payment of instalments.[3] In any view, if the decree-holder has elected to exercise the option, time, for the whole amount, will run from the date of the default.[4]

On the second point, it was held in the undermentioned cases[5] that where the decree provides that the decree-holder shall execute his decree on default, the default cannot be waived so as to affect limitation. The general view, however, is that the default can be waived by the decree-holder, and that on such waiver, time will run only from the date of the next default which is not waived.[6] According to the Calcutta High Court the principle of waiver by acceptance of subsequent payments has been engrafted upon the general rule as an exception in certain cases and that, if the right to enforce payment of the whole sum due upon default has been waived, "then the penalty having been waived the parties are remitted to the same position as they would have been in, if no default had occurred".[7] According to the Bombay High Court, the operation of subsequent payment and acceptance should not be treated as an exception to the general rule, but as analogous to the doctrine of estoppel under which "if each of the parties, has by his acts intentionally caused the other to believe that the payment was a regular satisfaction of the obligation and the parties acted on that belief, neither can afterwards deny the regularity".[8] This view has been adopted in the cases cited below.[9]

On the third point the following views have been expressed:—

(1) There can be no waiver save by payment and acceptance of overdue instalments.[10]

(2) The acceptance of a portion of an overdue instalment is not sufficient to constitute waiver.[11]

(3) The acceptance of an overdue instalment does not necessarily amount to a waiver in all cases. It depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case[12] though payments accepted will be evidence of waiver.[13]

(4) Mere abstinence from suing cannot amount to waiver of the default.[14]

14. Appeal.—An order passed under this rule refusing to allow the payment of the decretal amount in instalments is not appealable under O. 43, R. 1. It must be regarded as a matter separate from, and not forming part of the decree.[1] An order granting a decree for instalments or postponing the time for payment of the decretal amount under sub-R. 1 will of course be incorporated in the decree itself and can therefore be attacked in an appeal against the decree.[2] If, however, it is not so incorporated it will not be appealable.[2-4] An order for instalments made under sub-R. (2) must necessarily be one made after the decree and on the consent of the decree-holder. No appeal can lie against such consent order.[3] In Rangoon, however, by virtue of the amendment of sub-R. (2), an order can be passed after decree for payment in instalments, after notice to the decree-holder and without his consent. The order not being a consent order, and being one in execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of S. 47 is appealable as a decree.[4]

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The provisions of Section 244, Cls. (a) and (b) of the Code of 1882, which enacted that any question relating to the ascertainment of mesne profits as to which the decree directed an enquiry, were to be determined by the executing Court, have been omitted under the present Code. The result is that such an enquiry is no longer a proceeding in execution but is one in suit.[1] The substantial change under the new Code is, as pointed out by Sir John Wallis, C.J., "that the award of mesne profits in all cases, is to be by a preliminary decree and that when ascertained, they are to be embodied in a final decree, whereas under Sections 211 and 212 (of the old Code) they were to be ascertained in execution."[2] In other respects this rule corresponds to Sections 211 and 212 of the old Code, except that sub-Clause (ii) in Clause (c) has been newly added for the benefit of the judgment-debtor. O.20, R.12, Notes 1—2.

2. The explanation to Section 211 of the old Code which contained the definition of mesne profits has been re-enacted in Section 2, Cl. (12) of the present Code.

2. Scope of the rule.—This rule deals with the decree to be passed in a suit for possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits, past and future, against a person in wrongful possession of such property. It does not apply to suits for mesne profits alone[1] or for damages which are not mesne profits.[2] But a suit for a declaration of title and in the alternative for possession and mesne profits is within this rule.[3]

In so far as this rule enables the Court to pass a decree for future mesne profits (i.e., profits accruing subsequent to the institution of the suit) it is an exception to the general rule that a Court has no jurisdiction to give the plaintiff a decree on a cause of action that had not accrued to him at the date of the suit.[4] The object of enabling the Court to pass such a decree is to avoid multiplicity of suits.[5] But the rule is only a directory and not a mandatory one. It does not compel the plaintiff to claim future mesne profits. Nor is the Court bound to pass a decree for such mesne profits.[6] (See Note 13 infra). In cases falling within this rule, the Court may pass

(1) a decree for possession of the immovable property. (This is a final decree, and subject to just objections, is capable of being executed),

(2) either a final decree for past mesne profits, or a preliminary decree for such profits, directing an enquiry as to the amount thereof, and

(3) a preliminary decree, directing an enquiry as to the amount of future mesne profits.

Where an enquiry is directed as mentioned above, a final decree in respect of such mesne profits is to be passed in accordance with the result of such enquiry.[7]

A decree ordering the delivery of possession and directing an enquiry as to mesne profits will thus be partly preliminary and partly final.[8] Where a decree is passed for past and future mesne profits without directing an enquiry the decree is not preliminary but final.[9]

As to the proper way of framing a decree under this rule, see Form No. 33, App. D, Sch. I.[10]

3. Rule applies only where specific interest in land is claimed.— This rule applies only to suits for land or other property in which the plaintiff has a specific interest. It will not apply, for instance, to a suit by a member of a Hindu joint family, for a partition of the joint property inasmuch as the plaintiff has no specific interest in such property until decree,[1] and the defendants cannot be said to be in wrongful possession of any property of the plaintiff. Where, however, the family has been living under a clear arrangement that the members are entitled, not as an ordinary Hindu family, but in specific and definite shares, the right to mesne profits will arise if the enjoyment of those shares is, in any way, disturbed.[2]

Apart from this rule, however, a member of a joint Hindu family who is excluded from participation of the profits of family property may be entitled to an account of the management of the property from the persons in possession and to a share of such profits. Such a right is not a right to mesne profits received by a person in wrongful possession, but is appurtenant to the plaintiff's right under Hindu Law in his share of the lands.[3] In fact a member

4. Enquiry as to mesne profits is no longer a proceeding in execution. —The assessment of mesne profits is, under the present rule, a proceeding in the suit, it has nothing to do with the execution-department.[1] The enquiry is a continuation of the suit which results in a final decree.[2] No application for the ascertainment of mesne profits can be entertained in the execution-department under the present Code.[3] But if the Court passing the decree erroneously gives a direction to the plaintiff to apply for the ascertainment of mesne profits in execution, is such a direction ultra vires and is the executing Court bound to ascertain such profits? The High Court of Calcutta[4] has held that such a direction is ultra vires and that the executing Court can decline to carry out the direction. The High Courts of Bombay[5] and Madras[6] have, on the other hand, held that the decree is not a nullity but that the case was one of a mere irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction, and that the executing Court is bound to enquire into the mesne profits as per the direction in the decree.

Applying the principle laid down by the Judicial Committee in Lachminarain v. Balmakund[6-a] that when once a preliminary decree has been passed the suit cannot be dismissed unless and until the decree is varied or reversed in appeal, the High Courts of Madras[7] and Patna[8] have held that a suit cannot be dismissed for default in prosecuting an application for the ascertainment of mesne profits under this rule. On the same principle it has been held that the suit does not abate by reason of the death of the defendant after the preliminary decree and pending enquiry into mesne profits.[9] A contrary view was, however, assumed by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case.[10] (See also O. 22, R. 3.)

After a preliminary decree, the practice is that the suit should be adjourned to a definite date for further hearing.[11]

5. Mesne profits.—The expression "mesne profits" is defined by S. 2, Cl. (12) as—

> "the profits which a person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might, with ordinary diligence, have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession."

The object of awarding a decree for mesne profits is to compensate the person entitled to be in possession for his having been kept out of possession and thus deprived of the profits of the property.[1] But the very foundation of the cause of action for mesne profits is wrongful possession of the defendant.[2] No decree for mesne profits can therefore be passed against a person who is not in possession at all,[3] or who is in rightful possession.[4]

he cannot also on the same grounds claim mesne profits from a purchaser from the manager, until partition. It will also follow that after the institution of a suit by B for partition and mesne profits. his share becomes a specified interest from that date and mesne profits can be awarded against the purchaser from that date. This is the result arrived at in the undermentioned cases[12] but the grounds of the decision therein. it is respectfully submitted, are not correct. Their Lordships proceed on the view that possession under a voidable sale is rightful possession until set aside and that therefore mesne profits can be awarded only from the institution of the suit where the plaintiff repudiates the transaction. Where a transaction is held not binding on a person and is therefore set aside against him, (it must be deemed to be not binding on him from the very beginning of the transaction and not merely from the date of suit). In Satgur Prasad v. Harnarain Das[13] where A sued B for setting aside a deed executed by A to B on the ground of undue influence and fraud, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that if the document was set aside, the defendant would be liable for mesne profits from the date when he got into possession under the deed. and not merely from the institution of the suit.

Extent of liability.—The period for which mesne profits can be awarded is clearly confined to the period during which the defendant was in possession[14] or to the period during which he was active in keeping the plaintiff out of possession.[15] Thus, if the defendant is deprived of possession by virtue of an order of attachment under S. 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,[16] or is dispossessed by another trespasser,[17] he cannot be held liable for the period during which he had no possession. A transferee from the defendant pendente lite is liable for mesne profits[18] but his liability starts only from the period he entered into possession.[19]

Principles relating to assessment.—"Mesne profits" observed Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment of the Board in Grish Chunder v. Shoshi

Shikreswar, [I. L. R. 27 Cal. 951 (967) P. C.], "are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case". The assessment of mesne profits is therefore a matter for the exercise of Judicial discretion in each case.[20] The question to be decided is the amount of profits which the wrongdoer while in possession received or which without wilful default he might have received.[21] The test is, as pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, not what the plaintiff has lost by his exclusion but what the defendant has or might reasonably have made by his wrong- O.20, R.12, Note 5.

ful possession,[22] what the plaintiff might have made or the character of possession before trespass can only be relevant as evidence of what the defendant might with ordinary diligence have received.[23] A trespasser cannot say that he kept the land waste and that therefore he is not liable for mesne profits.[24]

The principles by which the Courts should be guided in awarding and assessing mesne profits are that the possession which has been wrongfully retained should not be a source of profit to the wrongful possessor, and that the person wrongfully kept out of possession is put in the same position financially as if right had been done.[25]

Where the trespasser is in actual possession the mesne profits should be awarded on the basis of the actual profits received or which might have been received with ordinary diligence less the deductions referred to below.[26] Where, however, the trespasser is not in actual possession, but has himself leased it to third persons, he will be liable only to the extent of the rent which he actually received from his lessee, unless it can be shown that he might, with ordinary diligence, have received more rent.[27] But the lessee himself, will, it is conceived, be also liable, as a person in wrongful possession, to the extent of the actual profit realised by him.[28] O.20, R.12, Note 5.

Illustration.

B trespasses upon the land belonging to A and subsequently lets it out to C for a rental of Rs. 300 per annum. C gets a gross profit of Rs. 700 and the expenses of cultivation amount to Rs 150, A sues B and C for possession and mesne profits. B will be liable to pay A Rs. 300, the rent which he received from C, and C will be liable for Rs. 250, the net profit realised by him after deducting the expenses of cultivation and after deducting the rent paid to B. But B and C cannot be made liable jointly and severally, for the total of the profits realised by both of them together.[29]

Deductions.—In awarding mesne profits it is proper that the following deductions should be made from the gross profits of the defendant in possession.

(1) Public charges such as government rent, revenue or cesses which are made for the preservation of the estate.[30]

(2) The costs of cultivation.[31]

The expenses of collecting the rents and profits cannot however be allowed in favour of the wrongful possessor unless he entered on the property in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right.[32]

O.20, R.12, Notes 5—6.

Onus of proof.—It is for the plaintiff who comes into Court with a claim for mesne profits to establish first his right to immediate possession.[33] The onus of proving the amount of profits actually received is on the person receiving them but the burden of proving the profits, the person in occupation might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, is on the person claiming them.[34] If the plaintiff lets in prima facie evidence to show that the profits were somewhere about the sum he alleges, the burden of proving that they were less shifts to defendant.[35]

6. Interest forming part of mesne profits.—Mesne profits, as defined by the old, as well as this Code, include interest on such profits. But this does not mean that the Court is obliged, in every case, to award interest.[1] It may refuse interest having regard to the circumstances of the case.[2] Under the old Code, where mesne profits were left to be ascertained in execution the executing Court could grant interest even though the decree was silent in respect thereof.[3] Under the present Code, however, the executing Court is not empowered to ascertain the mesne profits and cannot award any interest where both the preliminary and the final decree are silent on the matter.[4] The reason is that the duty of the executing Court is simply to carry out the decree and not to add to it or vary it in any way. But when the preliminary decree is silent as to interest, the Court can award interest in the final decree. O. 20, R. 12, Notes 6—8.

If mesne profits are payable month to month, then interest also should be calculated from month to month.[5] The rate of interest usually awarded by the Court is six per cent.[6] and the period for which the interest should be calculated is from the date of the preliminary decree upto the happening of any one of the events mentioned in Cl. (c).[7] after ascertainment and before execution. Nor can the Court refuse to execute the decree for possession because the Court-fee due in respect of mesne profits is not paid.[3]

No Court-fee is payable on future mesne profits (i.e., profits after the institution of the suit) under S. 11 of the Court-Fees Act.[4] In Madras, however, that section has been amended by Madras Act V of 1922 by which such profits are chargeable with Court-fee and the decree will not be executed until such fee is paid.

Where a Court-fee is payable on mesne profits, it is to be calculated ad valorem on the amount claimed or decreed.[5]

9. Right to apply for ascertainment of future mesne profits when arises.—The right to apply for future mesne profits arises on the happening of any one of the three events mentioned in Cl. (c) and not on the date of the preliminary decree itself.[1] Where a decree for possession is made conditional on the payment of a certain sum of money, the decree-holder will not be entitled to mesne profits until such payment is made.[2]

Decree silent as to future mesne profits.—Where the right to future mesne profits is negatived in the preliminary decree, the Court has no jurisdiction to award the same in a final decree.[3] Similarly where the decree is silent as to the mesne profits it cannot be awarded in execution.[4] But where the decree simply says "the claim of this suit be decreed with costs and mesne profits" the plaintiff will be entitled to such profits up to the date of his re-admission into the land.[5] Where a right to mesne profits is found in the judgment but no such direction is found in the decree (which ought to have been drawn up in accordance with the judgment) it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that there was nothing wrong in the Court assessing mesne profits on an application for such ascertainment without a formal amendment of the decree, and passing a final decree on such assessment.[6]

10. Notice of relinquishment.—Sub-Clause (c).—The relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through Court absolves him from further liability in respect of future mesne profits.[1] The mere filing of a petition without notice[2] is not enough to escape liability unless the decree-holder waives the notice.[3] In the undermentioned case[4] it was held that notice of relinquishment given at a time when it was too late for cultivation was not sufficient to absolve the defendant from liability.

11. Three years from the date of the decree.—The period of three years mentioned in sub-Cl. (iii), Cl. (c) should be reckoned from the date of the preliminary decree, and where the same has been appealed from, the date of the appellate decree.[1] The words "whichever event first occurs" clearly indicates that the maximum period for which future mesne profits can be awarded is three years from the date of the decree finally passed.[2] If the decree without specifying any period simply awards possession with Wasilat from a particular date the decree-holder is ordinarily entitled to mesne profits up to the date of re-delivery of possession to him[3] unless the period of three years elapses before such re-delivery.[4]

12. Limitation.—A suit for the recovery of past mesne profits is governed by Art. 109 of the Limitation Act, 1908, and should be filed within three years from the date of the wrongful receipt of the profits.[1] But so long as a suit is pending there is no limitation to an application for ascertainment of mesne profits.[2] The reason is that it is neither an application for execution, nor is such application one which is required by law to be made as a condition precedent to the ascertainment of mesne profits.[3] The High Court of Madras has, however, taken the view that such an application is governed by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908.[4]

High Court of Calcutta[1] to another preliminary decree, but according to the High Court of Allahabad[2] only to an interlocutory order in a pending suit. [For fuller discussion, see note 10 to S. 2, Cl. (2).] O.20, R.12, Notes 14—15.

15. Appeal.—Under the old Code the ascertainment of mesne profits was done in execution and the order relating thereto was appealable as having the force of a decree under S. 244 (S. 47). Under the present Code, the ascertainment is made in the suit itself and the result of it should be embodied in a final decree which is appealable as such.[1]

When the decree of the trial Court dismissing a suit for possession and mesne profits is reversed in appeal, the appellate Court should not remand the case for enquiring into the mesne profits but should pass a preliminary decree for possession directing an enquiry into mesne profits under this rule.[2] Vide also the amendment made to this rule by the High Court of Madras.

1. Analogous law.—This rule corresponds to S. 34 and Part I, Sch. I, of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, (15 Ger., 5 Cap. 23). The main difference between Part I, Sch. I and this rule consists in the addition of the words "and as to the priorities of debts and liabilities" after the words "contingent liabilities respectively". See Note 8, infra.

2. Administration suits.—"Administration" means the management of the estate of a deceased person who has left no executor.[1] It consists in:—

(i) payment of the funeral expenses of the deceased.

(ii) Collection, realisation and preservation of assets.

(iii) Payment of debts and legacies.

(iv) Acts in respect of adverse claims to assets.

(v) Dealings with creditors and legatees.

(vi) Distribution finally among the heirs and next of kin.[2]

The object of an administration suit is to have the estate administered under a decree of Court. In such a suit the whole administration and (settlement of the estate) are assumed by the Court: the assets are marshalled and a decree is made for the benefit of creditors and other persons entitled to the property.[3]

Thus the suit is, in essence, one for an account and application of the estate of the deceased, for the satisfaction of the dues of all the creditors.[4] It cannot be dismissed at the preliminary stage except where the plaint discloses no cause of action or the suit is premature.[5] O.20, R.13, Notes 2—4.

An administration suit is not a suit relating to immovable property and, therefore, the Court is not incompetent to administer properties, or to deal with questions of title in respect of properties situate outside its jurisdiction.[6] Again the jurisdiction of the Court, as to such a suit, does not depend upon the fact whether the deceased is one to whose estate the Succession Act applies.[6-a]

Though sub-S. (1) does not expressly prohibit the filing of an administration suit in respect of the property of a living person, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that such a suit is not maintainable.[7]

Before the Court takes upon itself the administration of the property, the preliminary decree for administration should be passed.[8] The Court may also make an order for grant of maintenance pendente lite but this power has to be exercised with caution.[9]

3. Hindu Law.—An administration suit is filed only in respect of the estate of the deceased and therefore if the property of a Hindu passes by survivorship, there is no estate of the deceased left for administration and a suit for administration is not maintainable.[1]

See also the undermentioned case.[2]

4. Muhammadan Law.—Under the Muhammadan Law, the funeral expenses of the deceased should be defrayed first from out of the assets, then his debts and then the legacies. The residue is to be thereafter distributed amongst the heirs of the deceased.[1] A suit by the heirs or the creditors or the legatees of a deceased Muhammadan for the enforcement of their claims against the estate of the deceased, becomes essentially a suit for administration,[2] though in such cases, partition of the estate may be an incident thereof,[3] and even the heirs of the deceased who are not parties to such a suit, are bound by the proceedings and cannot claim anything but what remains after the debts of the deceased have been paid.[4]

5. Who may file an administration suit.—A suit for administration of the estate may be instituted by any person interested in the estate. Thus the following persons may maintain a suit for administration:—

(i) Any person entitled to a share in the deceased's estate, such as next of kin.[1]

(ii) A legatee or an annuitant.[2]

(iii) A creditor of the deceased.—But the creditor should sue on behalf of himself and of all the creditors.[3]

(iv) An executor or administrator, where there are disputes between the heirs or the legatees and where there is a doubt as to the manner in which he should administer the estate.[4]

An order for administration will not be made in a suit therefor, unless the plaintiff proves his claim or establishes his right to bring the suit.[5] But it is not obligatory on the Court to pass a decree for administration, if the defendant before decree satisfies the plaintiff's claim. It may dismiss the suit.[6]

6. Plaint in administration suits.—As to the form of plaint in such suits, see App. A, Forms Nos. 41—44.

7. Decree in administration suits.—In drawing up decrees in administration suits the forms prescribed in the Code should be followed as far as possible.[1] For forms of preliminary decrees, see Sch. I, App. D, Forms Nos. 17 and 19, infra, and for forms of final decrees, see Forms Nos. 18 and 20, infra. In a suit by a creditor for administration, it cannot be held that the other creditors are represented by the plaintiff in the sense that they are, in effect parties to the suit.[1-a] But a decree for the administration of the estate of a deceased person is a decree in favour of all creditors and persons entitled to the effects of the deceased, and therefore a creditor who has attached property of the deceased is not entitled to any priority in respect of his claims, and will only rank among other creditors.[2] But the pendency of an administration suit will not debar a secured creditor from enforcing his security.[2-a] After the passing of the preliminary decree it is not proper for the Court to sanction a compromise to which all parties to the suit are not parties,[3] or to discharge the receiver appointed by the Court and direct him to make over the estate to the plaintiff.[4] O.20, R.13, Notes 7–10.

The plaintiff in an administration suit is entitled to get his costs from out of the estate.[5]

8. Estate insufficient to pay all the debts—Sub-R. (2).—Where the estate of the deceased in respect of which administration by Court is sought, is insufficient to pay all the debts of the deceased in full, sub-R. (2) will apply. Under that sub-rule, the Law of Insolvency in respect of the following heads should be observed in the administration of such estates:—

(i) As to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors

See Ss. 28 and 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and S. 48 and Cls. 9—17 of Sch. II of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909.

(ii) As to the debts and liabilities of the estate proveable.

See Ss. 45, 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Ss. 46 and 48 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909; and

(iii) As to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities

See S. 34 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, S. 46 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

The object of this sub-rule is not to apply all rules of insolvency to insolvent estates but only the rules in respect of the three heads mentioned above.[1]

9. Rights of secured creditors.—See Note 8, supra.

10. Provable debts and liabilities under the Insolvency Act.—The dividends due to the creditors should, in an administration suit, be calculated on the amount of the debt at the date of the preliminary decree and not at the date of proof.[1] Unsecured creditors are entitled to interest up to the date of the preliminary decree and not up to the date of payment,[2] but secured creditors are entitled to interest from the proceeds of the sale of secured property up to the date of payment.[3] The general principle governing the position of creditors of an estate under administration by the Court, is that creditors will, on due cause shown, be let in at any time, while the fund is in Court except where they have been guilty of remissness in the assertion of their claim and other creditors are prejudiced thereby.[4] See Ss. 45—50 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Sch. II, Rr. 2, 9, 11, 15, 23—27 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909.

11. Barred Debt.—A creditor whose claim is barred before the preliminary decree cannot come in and claim to be paid out of the estate.[1-a] If a debt is due to the deceased by the next of kin, but is barred by limitation, it has been held in England that an executor can retain a share, inasmuch as the debt still existed though only the remedy is barred[1] This rule has also been followed in India.[2]

12. Court-fees.—A suit for administration is in the nature of a suit for an account and the plaint is chargeable with Court-fee under S. 7 (iv) (f) of the Court Fees Act, 1870.[1] A creditor who comes in with a claim after a preliminary decree has been passed in the administration suit need not pay any Court-fee on such claim.[2]

13. Appeal.—An order directing an account to be taken in an administration suit was not a decree under the old Code and was not appealable.[1] Under the present Code, a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken will of course be appealable under S. 96 of the Code.

1. Legislative changes.—

(1) The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" are new. See Note 8, infra.

(2) Sub-Rule (2) is new.

2. Pre-emption.—The right of pre-emption is the right of a person to purchase property before opportunity to purchase it is offered to others.[1-a] Such a right may, however, be defeated by waiver or acquiescence on the part of the claimant.[1]

O.20, R.14 Notes 2—3.

The doctrine of pre-emption does not apply to execution sales, apparently because, the would-be pre-emptor can, in such a case, as well have bid at the auction.[2]

The right of pre-emption arises only on a sale of immovable property.[3]

Where a plaintiff having a right to pre-empt joins with himself, in a suit for pre-emption, a stranger, he forfeits his right to pre-empt,[4] but not so where the other persons joined are members of the plaintiff's family.[5] See also the undermentioned cases.[6]

3. Pre-emption under Muhammadan Law.—The Muhammadan Law is the only system which provides substantive rules relating to pre-emption.[1] In the Madras Presidency, the right of pre-emption under the Muhammadan Law is not recognised on the ground of its being opposed to public policy, which favours the free and unrestricted transfer of property.[2]

Thus, a right of pre-emption in respect of a property may be conferred on a mortgagee thereof.[2] The price in such cases may or may not be fixed beforehand.[3] It has been held that the right cannot be enforced against an execution purchaser of the equity of redemption.[4]

6. "Shall specify a day before which purchase money shall be paid".—It is necessary, under this rule that the decree should specify a day before which the purchase money shall be paid.[1] It is not a compliance with the rule to say that the money should be paid within a certain period; the date by which the amount should be paid should be specified.[2]

Where the vendee has paid off encumbrances on the property the amount should be included in the "purchase money" unless he has paid off the encumbrance in bad faith or improvidently.[3]

7. Extension of time.—The general principles embodied in O. 20, R. 3 apply to pre-emption decrees under this rule and hence, S. 148 does not enable the Court to enlarge the period fixed by the decree for paying the purchase money.[1] But where the last day allowed to the plaintiff to deposit the purchase money is a holiday, the money may be deposited on the next Court day on general principles of law.[2]

Effect of appeal on time fixed for payment.—The mere presentation of an appeal does not operate as a stay of proceedings in the lower Court (O. 41,

R. 5). Hence, the time for payment fixed by a pre-emption decree is not extended by the fact that an appeal has been preferred against the decree,[3] though the appellate Court, may, if it thinks fit, enlarge the time.[4] Where the appeal is dismissed or the decree of the lower Court is varied and the appellate decree is silent about the extension of time, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the time fixed by the original decree is to be calculated from the date of the appellate decree. See Note 9 to S. 148 ante and the undermentioned case.[5] Where, however, the appellate Court increases the sum to be paid by the plaintiff in a pre-emption suit and he deposits the excess amount ordered within a reasonable time after the appellate decree, the payment is a valid one.[6]

Effect of failure to deposit within the time allowed.—On the plaintiff's default in paying the purchase money within the time allowed, the suit should be dismissed,[7] though the decree does not contain a specific provision to that effect.[8] But where the plaintiff has appealed against the very condition in the decree that he should pay the purchase money within a certain period, the appellate Court should not dismiss the suit simply on the ground of non-payment within the time so fixed.[9]

Where a suit for pre-emption by a son in his own individual capacity is dismissed owing to his failure to pay the purchase money within the time allowed, a fresh suit by his father, for pre-emption, in assertion of his own individual right is not barred.[10]

8. Plaintiff's title when accrues.—The pre-emptor's title to the property accrues from the date of the payment of the purchase money into the Court and not from the date of the sale or of the decree.[1] Nor is a registered instrument necessary for passing the title.[2] The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" have been newly inserted in this rule to make this clear and to supersede the opinion expressed by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case[3] that a registered instrument is necessary for passing title to the pre-empted property.[4] It has been held that where, at the time of the deposit in Court, there are crops on the land, they also pass to the pre-emptor.[5]

Although the rule says that on payment of the purchase money into the Court, the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, this does not apply to the following cases:—

(a) Where the property is in the possession of a usufructuary mortgagee,[6]

(b) Where the pre-emptor is already in possession of the property.[7]

9. Payment into Court.—The payment of purchase money into Court may be made in currency notes.[1] But Government promissory notes are not "money" and the deposit thereof is not valid.[2] A payment made out of Court to the vendee is sufficient compliance with the decree, provided the vendee certifies to the Court within the period allowed for payment the fact of his receipt of the money,[3] but not otherwise.[4]

A payment is not valid if it is not a payment of the full amount stated in the decree, however small may be the sum by which it falls short.[5]

Where the decree directs the payment of the purchase money and costs within a specified time, the payment of the purchase money alone within the time limited is not enough; the costs also must be deposited within that time.[6] But this is not so where though costs are awarded, no time limit is fixed for their payment.[7]

The plaintiff does not forfeit his right of pre-emption by raising the purchase money by a mortgage of the property sought to be pre-empted.[8]

On payment into the Court, the money stands to the credit of the vendee and the pre-emptor's rights are not affected by the fact that a creditor of his, attaches the money and is allowed by the Court to remove it.[9]

10. Tender of money if sufficient.—A tender of the purchase money to the Court within the time limited is sufficient compliance with the decree, although, through the laxity of the Court officials or other such cause, the actual deposit is made later on.[1] But a tender to the Court after its usual working hours is not valid.[2]

11. "On or before the day referred to."—See Note 7, supra.

12. Right to rents and profits.—The rights of a pre-emptor are different from those of an ordinary purchaser. Under a pre-emption decree the right to possession of the property and the consequential right to mesne profits accrue to the pre-emptor only from the date when he pays the amount of the purchase money finally declared by the Court. Till then the original purchaser retains possession and is entitled to the rents and profits.[1] As to whether the vendee is entitled to the crops on the land existing on the date of payment, see Note 8, ante.

13. Vendors' title in pre-emption suits.—A pre-emptor is not entitled in a pre-emption suit to put the vendor to proof of his title to the property which he purports to sell. The principle of pre-emption is substitution. A pre-emptor is, therefore, bound to take the title which the vendee was ready to take.[1]

14. Set-off of costs against purchase money.—The rule does not provide for cases where costs, instead of being awarded against the pre-emptor, were awarded in his favour by the decree. Under the doctrine of equitable set-off, he is entitled to deduct such costs when depositing the purchase money.[1]

O.20, R.14, Notes 15—16.

15. Rival pre-emptors—Sub-R. (2).—Sub-R. (2) is new and prescribes the form of decree to be passed where there are rival pre-emptors. Under the old Code, Courts decided such cases on general principles suited to the emergencies of each case.[1] The present rule enables rival claimants to pre-emption to join as plaintiffs in a suit for pre-emption and to obtain, in that suit, a decision not only as to their right to pre-empt but also as to their rival claims.[2] But where the plaintiffs do not ask the Court to adjudicate upon their respective rights inter se, a joint decree may be passed and if the amount is deposited in compliance with the decree, the defendant has no concern in the way in which the property, is to be shared by the plaintiffs; but the mere fact that a joint decree is passed in favour of all has not the necessary result of passing title to all the joint decree-holders even if only one of them pays the amount. In order to determine in what proportion the joint plaintiffs are to share the property, the circumstances under which the payment was made must in each case be enquired into.[3]

16. Appeal.—A plaintiff who has obtained a decree for pre-emption conditional on his paying a certain sum within a certain period, may appeal against the decree whether or not he has deposited the money in Court within the time limited.[1] Nor does a vendee forfeit his right of appeal against a pre-emption decree merely because he has withdrawn the money deposited by the plaintiff.[2] A plaintiff depositing purchase money in Court under a pre-emption decree is entitled to a refund of the amount on the reversal of the decree in appeal.[3] A decree with a condition that unless the purchase money is paid within the time fixed the suit shall stand dismissed is a complete decree and a subsequent order dismissing the suit is not a decree against which an appeal can be preferred.[4] Further, an order passed on an application for payment of the pre-emptive money in compliance with a decree under R. 14 is not appealable under S. 47 of the Code as it is not an order relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree.[5]

"May pass". See Note 1, Pt. (1).

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule contemplates the passing of a preliminary decree in suits for dissolution of partnership so as to enable the Court to pass a final adjudication of the specific rights of the parties. The words "may pass a preliminary decree" show that the passing of such a decree is in the judicial discretion of the Court. While, on the one hand, it will be an improper exercise of the discretion to pass a preliminary decree where the shares of the parties in, and the fact and date of dissolution of, the partnership are admitted,[1] on the other hand, where such facts are not admitted, the Court ought to pass a preliminary decree defining and declaring the rights of the parties before giving a final adjudication in the suit.[2] In Ramchunder Shaha v. Manick Chunder Banikya,[3] Pontifex, J., observed as follows:—

> "At the first hearing of the suit, really what the Court had to determine was, whether there had been a partnership, and what were its conditions: was it dissolved, or ought it to be dissolved: and who were the parties interested in the partnership, and in what shares: and upon determining these questions, it ought, in the first instance to have directed that accounts should be taken as set forth in Form No. 132 (now Form No. 21, Appendix D), subject, of course, to any such alterations as the nature of the case might require. It is only after taking these accounts and obtaining the report of the officer of the Court, or, if there is no such officer, when the Judge himself has arrived at a decision on the accounts, that a final decree should be made according to Form No. 133 of the Fourth Schedule of the Code (now Form No. 22 of Appendix D)."

If, however, the Court has passed an order defining and declaring the said rights, the mere fact that no formal decree has been drawn up in those terms will be a mere irregularity not vitiating the trial.[4]

Under S. 265 of the Contract Act as it originally stood, a partner had to apply to the District Court to wind up the business of the firm to provide for the payments of its debts and to distribute the surplus according to the shares of the partners respectively and there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a suit for such relief in the ordinary Court lay.[5] The section was amended by the Indian Contract Amendment Act, (IV of 1886), and under the section as it now exists a suit for dissolution of partnership can be brought in the ordinary Courts like any other suit.[6]

2. Preliminary decree directing the taking of accounts.—Besides making the declarations as to the rights of the parties referred to in Note 1 above the Court should, in the preliminary decree, direct an account to be taken of the dealings and transactions of the partnership, of the credits, property and effects due and belonging to it: and should if need be, appoint a receiver for realising the partnership property.[1]

As to the nature of the rights conferred by such a decree, see the cases cited below.[2]

3. Mode of taking accounts.—The Court may itself take the accounts of the partnership or appoint a commissioner for the purpose. In the latter case the Court may give directions, if any are required, as to the mode of taking accounts. It may call upon either party to furnish a statement of particulars relating to the business and its transactions.[1] All the account books and other documents relating to the partnership and in the possession of either party should be produced.[2] Sufficient time should be given to the parties for the purpose and evidence should be taken if necessary.[3]

4. "Fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved".—The preliminary decree should fix a day on which the partnership should stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved. The fixing of the day is a judicial act and should not be done arbitrarily. Ordinarily if a notice of dissolution has been given by one of the partners the dissolution will be declared as and from that date.[1] Otherwise and in the absence of any other circumstance, the dissolution should be ordered to date from the plaint.[2] It can be ordered to date from the judgment only in exceptional cases.[3] O.20, R.15, Notes 4—8.

5. Defendants' right to what is found due to him.—If, on the taking of accounts, it is found that any balance is due to the defendant the Court can pass a decree in his favour for the amount.[1]

6. Court-fee in partnership suits.—The plaint or memorandum of appeal in a partnership suit is chargeable with an ad valoram Court-fee, the valuation being fixed under S. 7, Cl. (iv) (f) of the Court Fees Act.[1]

The defendant in such a suit is not bound either to value his claim or to pay any Court-fee. If, however, on the taking of accounts any amount is found due to him, he is bound to pay Court-fee thereon before a decree for the amount is passed in his favour.[2]

7. Appeal.—An appeal lies from a preliminary decree passed under this rule.[1] But mere directions given to the commissioner in the matter of taking accounts are not decrees and are not appealable.[2]

8. Letters Patent Appeal.—An order appointing the Official Receiver as the Receiver in a partnership suit was held by the Rangoon High Court to be a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 13 of the Letters Patent and as such appealable.[1] The same High Court has, however, held that orders by way of directions to the Commissioner in the matter of taking accounts are not "judgments" within the meaning of the said clause of the Letters Patent and hence not appealable.[2]

Decree in suit for account between principal and agent.

R. 16. [S. 215-A.] In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not hereinbefore provided for, where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such accounts to be taken as it thinks fit.

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.
2. Shall pass a preliminary decree.
3. Suit by principal—Right of agent to the amount found due to him.
4. Valuation for Court-fee and jurisdiction.
5. Appeal.
6. Stay of proceedings.

Final decree, ex parte—Right of defendant to re-open accounts. See Note 2, F.-N. (5).

"In any other suit." See Note 1, Pts. (2) and (3).

Suit for delivery of account papers. See Note 2, F.-N. (7).

'Where it is necessary." See Note 2, Pt. (4).

1. Scope of the rule.—The rule applies to the following kinds of suits viz.:—

(1) Suits for accounts between principal and agent.[1]

(2) Suits in which plaintiff has a right to a rendition of accounts from the defendant;[2] and

(3) Suits in which it is necessary that an account should be taken in order to ascertain the amount due to or from any party.[3]

The purpose of a preliminary decree in such suits is merely to ascertain whether the defendant is liable to account to the plaintiff,[4] and the preliminary judgment, therefore, need not be exhaustive or specify all details.[5]

2. Shall pass a preliminary decree.—Where the plaintiff has established that the defendant was his agent[1] or that the defendant is otherwise liable to account to him,[2] it is the duty of the Court to pass a preliminary decree directing an account to be taken of the transactions between the parties. But no such decree need be passed if the liability to account is not established[3] or if the necessity for accounts is not made out.[4]

A preliminary decree in a suit contemplated by this rule finally declares the liability of the defendant for such sum as may be found due[5] but does not terminate the suit.[6]

For the procedure to be observed in taking accounts, see the cases cited below.[7]

3. Suit by principal—Right of Agent to the amount found due to him.—If, in a suit by the principal, accounts between him and the agent are taken and nothing is found due to the principal but something is found due to the agent, a decree can be passed in defendant's favour for the amount, on his paying the necessary Court-fee.[1]

4. Valuation of Court-fee and jurisdiction.—Suits for accounts are governed by the provisions of S. 7, Cl. (iv) (b) of the Court Fees Act.[1] The plaintiff's valuation will be the value both for the purposes of the Court-fee and for the purpose of jurisdiction.[2] If a defendant appeals against the whole preliminary decree in such a suit, he will be bound by the valuation given in the plaint.[3]

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.

3. Omission to give directions in preliminary decree.

Books of account as prima facie evidence. See Note 1.

1. Scope of the rule.—The rule is new and corresponds to O. 33, R. 3 of the English Rules of the Supreme Court. It, however, enacts no new provision of law: but only recognises an already existing practice in the matter of taking accounts. It is in the discretion of the Court to give special directions or not under this rule.[1] Under the English Practice the Court may treat the account books as prima facie evidence in partnership cases.[2] Similarly account books kept by a trustee may be ordered to be taken as prima facie evidence against the cesti qui trust if the latter has had access to these books.[3] In other cases special directions should be obtained from the Court,[4] and such directions will be given if the ordinary proof of accounts is not available owing

2. Settled accounts.—In proceedings by way of taking accounts, a settled account may be set up or pleaded in the absence of any special directions on the matter, in the preliminary decree.[1]

O.20, R.18, Notes 1—5.

1. Scope of the rule.—Sub-R.1 refers to partition decrees relating to an "estate assessed to Government Revenue" referred to in S. 54 of the Code, while sub-R. 2 deals with partition decrees relating to any other immoveable property or to moveable property. In the former case, the rule does not contemplate the passing of a preliminary and of a final decree.[1] The Court has merely to pass a decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property, the actual partition so as to affect the Government Revenue, being left to be made by the Collector.[2] In the latter case, i.e., a case coming under sub-R. 2, the Court may pass a preliminary decree if the separation cannot be made conveniently without further inquiry. See Note 5, infra.

2. Jurisdiction of Court and Collector.—See S. 54, Note 7, ante.

3. Moveable property.—Where in a suit for partition of moveable property, the plaintiff files a list of properties, and the defendant either denies that they are liable to partition or that they exist, it is incumbent on the Court, before passing a preliminary decree, to determine the following points[1]:—

(1) Whether such properties exist, and if so in whose possession;

(2) Whether they are partible; and

(3) What is their value.

4. Joint Hindu family property.—See the undermentioned cases.[1]

5. Preliminary decree.—In cases coming under sub-R. 2, the Court may pass a preliminary decree. It is not obligatory to do so in every case. For instance, it is not necessary if the shares can be ascertained without difficulty in execution.[1] But where a partition cannot be conveniently made without further enquiry, a preliminary decree may be passed declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property leaving the actual partition to be made later on.[2] It has been held that it would be premature to decide in the preliminary decree whether certain property in the defendant's possession about which partition is claimed is available for partition or not, and that the question should be left to be decided at the enquiry subsequent to the preliminary decree.[8] After a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, the proper course for the plaintiff desiring an absolute separation of his share, is to apply for a final decree and not to bring a fresh suit for that purpose.[4] There is no limitation for such an application inasmuch as the rule does not contemplate any such application being made by the party, and it is the duty of the Court to pass the final decree after the necessary enquiries.[5] In fact the Court cannot, after a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, dismiss it for default in depositing the fee for a commissioner to make a final partition; all that the Court can do in such a case is to adjourn the proceedings sine die.[6]

Any party to the suit whose interest it is, that further proceedings be taken, may move the Court to pass a final decree; but ordinarily it is the plaintiff who moves.[7]

Under the old Code it was not necessary to pass first a preliminary decree and then a final decree in a partition suit.[8] It was, however, usual to pass an interlocutory order declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and then a decree. See the undermentioned cases.[9] As to whether there can be more than one preliminary decree in a case, see the discussion under S. 2 (2), Note 10. As to the maintainability of an appeal against a preliminary decree after the final decree has been passed, see S. 97, Note 5, ante.

6. "Giving such further directions".—These words include also directions for inquiry as to future mesne profits or interest, and it is in the preliminary decree that such directions should be given. Where such decree is silent as to future mesne profits or interest, can the final decree award the same or direct an inquiry in respect of it? As regards mesne profits it has been held that it cannot be done. The reason is that R. 12 and this rule should be read together and inasmuch as, under R. 12, the final decree can only provide for mesne profits where an enquiry into the same has been directed by the preliminary decree, the same principle will apply to cases coming under this rule.[1] Where, however, the final decree does wrongly direct such an enquiry, the defect does not amount to a want of jurisdiction and the executing court cannot go behind it.[2] As to the maintainability of a separate suit for mesne profits where the decree in the partition suit is silent on the point, see S. 11, Note 125 and the undermentioned case.[3]

As regards interest, where the preliminary decree in a partition suit directs accounts to be taken but is silent as to interest, it has been held by the Bombay High Court[4] that it is competent to the Court to award by its final decree, interest in a proper case. The learned judges base their decisions on certain English cases, according to which, a Court has "power on further directions to order payment of interest on a sum found due from a defendant although the decree declaring the liability contains no direction for payment of interest or the statement of claim does not ask for it." It was also pointed out that the case of taking an account under the present rule is similar to the case of taking an account in an administration suit under O. 20, R. 13 and that, if the forms of preliminary and final decrees in administration suits (Appendix D, Forms 17 and 18) are looked at, it will be clear that the legislature does recognise that even where the preliminary decree does not contain any direction as to interest, yet, in the final decree interest may be awarded.

7. Final Decree.—Where subsequent to the preliminary decree, one of the co-sharers dies and the other parties become entitled to increased shares, the final decree may award them the increased shares.[1] In working out preliminary decrees for partition, the Court may, instead of making an actual division of all the property, give one co-pareener a charge over the share of another for any difference in favour of the former.[2] A decree for partition is a joint decree in favour of all the shareholders and therefore execution proceedings taken by one of them are sufficient to keep the decree alive in favour of all.[3] See also the undermentioned case.[4]

8. Stamp for Final Decree.—A final decree for partition is an instrument of partition within S. 2 (15) of the Stamp Act, and is chargeable with stamp duty under Sch. I, Art. 45 of that Act.[1]

9. Appeal.—Under the present Code a preliminary decree in a partition suit is appealable under S. 96 of the Code and, if not appealed against, cannot be questioned in the appeal from the final decree [vide Ss. 2 (2), 96 and 97]. Under the old Code there was only one decree in a partition suit though the decree might be preceded by an interlocutory order declaring the

Synopsis.

1. Where defendant has been allowed a set-off.
2. Appeal from decree relating to set-off.
3. Decree for defendant claiming set-off.
4. Applicability of rule to equitable set-off (sub-R. 3).

1. Where defendant has been allowed a set off.—The rule applies only where the defendant has been allowed a "set-off" against the plaintiff's claim, and not in any other case. Thus the rule does not apply to a case where in determining the defendant's liability for mesne profits deductions are made for costs or expenses of cultivation.[1]

2. Appeal from decree relating to set off.—Under the second paragraph of S. 216 of the old Code corresponding to sub-R. (2) of the present rule, the forum of appeal in relation to the defendant's claim of set-off depended upon the sum claimed by him and not upon the valuation of the suit made by the plaintiff.[1] This has been amended under the present rule so as to give effect to the view that appeals from decrees relating to set-off should lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim of the plaintiff would lie.[2]

A preliminary order disposing of a claim of set-off made by the defendant is not a decree and is not appealable by itself but can be attacked in an appeal from the decree.[3]

3. Decree for defendant claiming set off.—Where the amount due to the defendant by the plaintiff is found to exceed that due to the plaintiff by the defendant, the Court may not only dismiss the suit, but may pass a decree in favour of the defendant against the plaintiff.[1]

The question has arisen as to whether a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant in a suit for accounts, where, on taking accounts, it is found that the balance is in defendant's favour. In such a case it was observed by Phillips, J., in the undermentioned Madras case[2] that there is really no "set-off" pleaded to which the present rule may apply. The High Courts of Allahabad[3] and Calcutta[4] have, on the other hand, held that a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant in such a case under O. 20. Rr. 15 and 16. In one of the Calcutta cases[5] it was even said that it was a case of equitable set-off and that R. 19 itself might apply.

4. Applicability of rule to equitable set off (Sub-R. 3).—O. 8. R. 6 provides only for a legal set-off being allowed. But the present rule applies also to equitable set-off and provides for a decree being passed giving effect to such set-off.[1] As to the distinction between the two types of claims, see Notes under O. 8. R. 6.

ALLAHABAD.

Add the following to O. 20:—

21. (1) Every decree and order as defined in Section 2, other than a decree or order of a Court of Small Causes or of a Court in the exercise of the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, shall be drawn up in the Court vernacular. As soon as such decree or order has been drawn up, and before it is signed, the Munsarim shall cause a notice to be posted on the notice board stating that the decree or order has been drawn up, and that any party or the pleader of any party may, within six working days from the date of such notice, peruse the draft decree or order and may sign it, or may file with the Munsarim an objection to it on the ground that there is in the judgment a verbal error or some accidental defect not affecting a material part of the case, or that such decree or order is at variance with the judgment or contains some clerical or arithmetical error. Such objection shall state clearly, what is the error, defect, or variance alleged, and shall be signed and dated by the person making it.

(2) If any such objection be filed on or before the date specified in the notice, the Munsarim shall enter the case in the earliest weekly list practicable, and shall, on the date fixed, put up the objection together with the record before the Judge who pronounced the judgment, or, if such Judge has ceased to be the Judge of the Court, before the Judge then presiding.

(3) If no objection has been filed on or before the date specified in the notice, or if an objection has been filed and disallowed, the Munsarim shall date the decree as of the day on which the judgment was pronounced and shall lay it before the Judge for signature in accordance with the provisions of Rules 7 and 8.

(4) If an objection has been duly filed and has been allowed, the correction or alteration directed by the Judge shall be made. Every such correction or alteration in the judgment shall be made by the Judge in his own handwriting. A decree amended in accordance with the correction or alteration directed by the Judge shall be drawn up, and the Munsarim shall date the decree as of the day on which the judgment was pronounced and shall lay it before the Judge for signature in accordance, with the provisions of Rules 7 and 8.

(5) When the Judge signs the decree, he shall make an autograph note stating the date on which the decree was signed.

RANGOON.

The following shall be added as Rules 21 and 22:—

Certificate to be issued to Land Records Department when interests in land are affected.

21. As soon as the decree of a Court of first instance in a suit relating to land in a district in which there is a Land Records establishment has become final, or if the decree has been appealed against, when the decree in appeal has become final, and the interest of any party to the suit in any land included in the survey has been affected thereby, the Court of first instance shall certify the nature and extent of such change of interest in each plot of land in suit to the Superintendent of Land Records of the district in which the land is situate. A copy of the certificate in every such case should also be sent to the Sub-Registrar within whose sub-district the land or any part thereof is situate.

Form of certificate.

22. The certificate shall be in the prescribed form, and shall be signed by the presiding officer of the Court.

1. Legislative changes.—
Clause (2) of the rule is new.

2. Retrospective operation of the rules of this order.—See Note 3 to Preamble, ante.

3. Scope and applicability of the rule.—The judgment-debtor is bound to pay the decretal debt in one of the modes specified in the rule. He cannot be relieved from such liability on the ground that the decree-holder is dead.[1]

The rule does not apply to decrees that are inexecutable as where a compromise decree provides that on default in payment, the decree-holder shall have the right to file a suit.[2] Nor does the rule apply to money payable under an order, though such orders are executable, under the provisions of S. 36, like decrees. Thus where a party is ordered to pay the costs of the day to the opposite side, he cannot deposit the costs in Court under this rule.[3] Under S. 11 of the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, XIV of 1920, the provisions of the Code, relating to execution of decrees are applicable to execution of orders under that Act.

4. Payment into Court.—Where a payment under a decree has to be made only into Court, as in the case of pre-emption decrees under O. 20, R. 14, and the Court is closed on the last day for making such payment, the maxim lex non cogit ad impossibilia[1] will apply and the payment can be made on the day the Court re-opens.[2] It has been held by all the High Courts except the High Court of Allahabad that the same rule will apply even where the decree amount may be paid to the decree-holder or into Court, inasmuch as the judgment-debtor is entitled to choose the method of payment.[3] The High Court of

O. 21, R. 1, Notes 4—7.

Allahabad is of the opinion that in such cases, the judgment-debtor cannot get the time for payment extended by choosing to pay the amount only in Court.[4]

An arbitrator is not an officer of the Court and a payment to him is not a payment into Court.[5] Where a Receiver appointed in an administration suit was not authorised to receive certain payments to be made by X but the latter made the payments to the Receiver who misappropriated it, it was held by the Privy Council, that X was not discharged from liability, by reason of such payment.[6]

5. Who should make payment.—A payment into Court under this rule can be made only by the judgment-debtor, his agent, or his representative. A payment made by a stranger will not have the effect of satisfying the decree unless the decree-holder consents thereto.[1] But a payment made by the mortgagee of a party liable to pay is effective, though he is not a party to the suit.[2] In execution of a decree for money obtained by A against B, a Receiver was appointed to collect certain amounts due to B by C. C paid the amount into the hands of the Receiver, who absconded and did not pay the money into Court. It was held that the payment by C to the Receiver did not discharge the judgment-debtor from liability under the decree.[3]

6. Effect of payment.—A payment into Court towards a decree debt operates as a discharge of the decree debt to that extent[1] and where interest has been awarded on the decree amount, it will cease to run on the sum deposited.[2] But if, after having made the payment, he prevents the sum reaching the hands of the decree-holder, he will be liable for interest until the money is available to the decree-holder.[3]

If money is paid into Court under process of execution and the decree-holder or his agent is present, the Court should cause it to be paid to him immediately.[4]

7. Decree directing payment to decree-holder.—Even where the decree directs the payment to be made to the decree-holder, payment into Court is a valid compliance with the decree[1] unless perhaps the Court directs that payment should not be made otherwise than by payment to the decree-holder.[2]

8. Payment out of Court to decree-holder.—A payment made to the decree-holder out of Court also discharges the decree.[1] But the decree-holder is not bound to accept a sum in part satisfaction of his decree and the refusal to receive it will not deprive him of his right to interest.[2] Where a payment out of Court is made through post before a certain fixed date but does not reach the decree-holder within that date the payment is not effective.[3]

The language of the rule is only permissive and does not prohibit a payment to an agent or representative of the decree-holder and hence a payment out of Court may be made to the decree-holder's agent or representative, or in the case of members of a Hindu joint family, to the manager of the family.[4] Where, however, decree is a joint one, a payment to one decree-holder does not amount to an acquittance by the others. The other decree-holders will be entitled to execute the decree in respect of their shares.[5]

9. Notice of payment.—The question of notice of payment into Court to the decree-holder is material only where the decree awards interest. Where no interest has been awarded by the decree and the decretal amount is paid into Court, it operates as a discharge of the decree, even if no notice is given to the decree-holder.[1] But if the decree awards interest then the decree-holder is entitled to interest till the date of notice.[2] Notice of such payment must be in writing and be served on the decree-holder in the way prescribed for the service of summons.[3] Even if the judgment-debtor fails to give notice of the fact of payment it is the duty of the Court to inform the decree-holder about it when he next applies for execution of the decree.[4]

Clause (2) of this rule does not apply to redemption decrees. They are governed by O. 34, R. 8, which does not require any such notice to be given.[5]

O. 21, R. 2. Note 1.

1. Legislative changes.—

1. In sub-R. (1) after the words 'payable under a decree' the words 'of any kind' have been added. See Note 4, infra.
2. The words 'as a payment or adjustment of the decree' which occurred in the old Code in sub-R. (3) after the word 'recognised' have been omitted. See Note 27, infra.
3. The words 'or if any payment is made in pursuance of an agreement of the nature mentioned in S. 257-A' after the words 'to the satisfaction of the decree-holder' have been omitted. S. 257-A of the old Code has also been omitted. It ran as follows:—

"Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable.

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction.

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment debt; and the surplus, if any, shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor."

The omission of S. 257-A from the present Code, renders the undermentioned decisions[1] now merely of academic interest. The effect of the omission is that the legality of such arrangements between parties after decree must be tested like other agreements.[2]

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.—The object of this rule is to ensure that the Court executing the decree shall not be troubled with any disputes between the parties with regard to any payment or adjustment unless the same has been duly certified or recorded.[1] Sub-R. 1 contemplates a certification by the decree-holder and a record by the Court of the payment or adjustment: sub-R. 2 contemplates an application by the judgment-debtor. In this case notice is to be given to the decree-holder and the Court should give a judicial decision whether the payment or adjustment should be recorded as certified.[2] Lastly sub-R. (3) imposes a bar upon the Court executing the decree and prevents it from recognising any payment or adjustment which has not been certified or recorded as certified as required by the rule.[3]

The prohibition under sub-R. 3 will apply only when the parties to a transaction entered into for the purpose of satisfying or adjusting a decree stand, to one another, at the date of such transaction, in the relation of judg- ment-debtor and judgment-creditor.[4] Thus where A, a transferee decree-holder applied for execution of the decree and B, the judgment-debtor objected on the ground that he had transferred certain immoveable property to A in consideration of his paying the judgment debt to the original decree-holder and that A having discharged the debt had got the decree transferred to himself, instead of entering up satisfaction of the decree, and had fraudulently applied for execution, it was held that there must be an enquiry into the truth of B's allegations.[4a] But there is nothing in the wording of this rule to limit the payment to the decree-holder only. Thus, where a compromise decree directed the payment of money to a third party and the payment was not certified to the Court, it was held that it could not be relied upon in execution.[5]

S. 71 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Bombay) expressly excludes the application of this rule to cases governed by it, and therefore, an executing Court governed by that Act, can take cognisance of an uncertified payment or adjustment.[6] As to whether this rule applies to proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act, see the undermentioned cases.[7] S. 80 of the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926 deals with certification under this rule. This rule clearly contemplates a stage in the execution proceedings when the matter lies only between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder and when no other interests have come into being. When once a sale in execution has been effected, a third party's interest intervenes which cannot be disregarded. Therefore after a sale is duly held the Court cannot refuse to confirm the sale on the ground that the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor say that the decree has been satisfied out of Court and the only method by which the sale can be set aside is by the procedure prescribed in O. 21, R. 89.[8] After a decree has been satisfied and the decree-holder has certified such satisfaction, there is no subsisting decree and a sale held in ignorance of the satisfaction is void and liable to be set aside.[9] But if the satisfaction is not certified, the sale is not vitiated and cannot be impeached.[10]

For cases under S. 206 of the Code of 1859 corresponding to this rule, see the undermentioned cases.[11]

3. "Money payable under a decree."—A mortgage decree is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule even though it contains a further direction for the sale of the mortgaged properties on default of payment. The adjustment of such a decree out of Court must be certified under this rule.[1] But where a mortgagee decree-holder is in possession of the mortgaged properties under the original contract of mortgage or by virtue of the terms of the decree, income received by the mortgagee from the mortgaged property is not "money payable under a decree" and does not therefore require to be certified.[2] Where, in a suit for possession by A against B, his tenant who set up a right to hold the land under a mirasi tenure, the Court declared in favour of B and directed payment of rent as before, it was held that rents paid by B to A out of Court were not "moneys payable under the decree".[3]

The words "money payable under a decree" do not mean any money which the party may pay if he chooses, but money which is recoverable by a party in execution against the party liable to pay it. Thus, where a decree merely provided that if one party paid within a certain time a certain sum of money to the other party, the latter was to reconvey certain property to the former and that if default was made in payment, the latter was to enjoy the property with absolute rights, it was held that it was not a decree under which payment of money can be compelled in execution, and that this rule did not apply, so as to bar the Court from recognising an uncertified adjustment out of Court.[4]

As to adjustments or payments made between the dates of preliminary and final decrees in mortgage suits, see O. 34, R. 5, Note 14.

An award under the Indian Arbitration Act when filed in Court is a decree for the purposes of S. 47 of the Code and this rule consequently applies to adjustments of such awards.[5]

4. "Decree of any kind".—Under the old Code, the High Court of Calcutta[1] and the Chief Court of Punjab[2] held that S. 258 of that Code applied to any kind of decree and not merely to money decrees. The High Court of Madras,[3] on the contrary, held that S. 258 was applicable only to decrees under which money is payable and not to other kinds of decrees. Under the present Code the High Courts of Bombay[4] and Calcutta[5] have held that the addition of the words "of any kind" after the word "decree" in sub-R. (1) makes it clear that the provisions of this rule are not confined to money decrees only, but apply to every kind of decree. The High Court of Madras[6] has held that the effect of the change is not to make the rule applicable to all kinds of decrees, whatever be the nature of the relief granted, but that it applies only to cases where money is payable under the decree, whether they are accompanied by other reliefs or not, inasmuch as the words "the decree is otherwise: . . " can only mean the decree under which any money is payable. The effect of the additional words according to that High Court is that where the decree provides for payment of money as well as other reliefs, such as possession or partition of immoveable property, an adjustment of such a decree cannot be recognised unless certified in the manner provided by this rule.[7]

5. "Is paid out of Court."—This rule deals only with voluntary payment out of Court. Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount decreed to the officer of the Court under pressure of process, the payment does not require to be certified under this rule.[1]

6. "Or the decree is otherwise adjusted".—An adjustment of a decree is an agreement which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part, and results in a satisfaction of the whole or a portion of the decree in respect of the particular relief or reliefs granted by the decree.[1] But a transaction by which the parties agree to vary the mode by which the reliefs granted by the decree are to be realised in execution in that suit, or the time when the decree becomes executable, is not an adjustment of the decree.[2] Thus, an agreement between the parties to a decree by which arrangements are made to enable the decree-holder to collect monies due to the judgment-debtor and credit them towards his decree, and which provides for a temporary suspension of execution proceedings is not such an adjustment of the decree as is contemplated by this rule.[3] It is not necessary that the judgment-debtor must have carried out all the terms of the arrangements made by him with the decree-holder: a completed contract by which he promises to do something at a future date, can be accepted by the decree-holder as a legal and immediate adjustment in satisfaction of his decree.[4] But an inchoate agreement, which if completed would bar the execution of the decree cannot be pleaded as an adjustment within the meaning of this rule.[5] The reason is that an inchoate agreement is an agreement not yet concluded by the parties and therefore the judgment-debtor cannot claim that the decree against him has been adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder while the matter is still in the stage of negotiation.

Where there is a dispute as to whether a decree has or has not been adjusted by a compromise, the executing Court would have to determine whether there was a compromise, whether the compromise amounted to an adjustment and what the effect of the adjustment is on the decree.[6]

The question whether an executing Court can entertain an objection to the execution of the decree based on an arrangement between the parties prior to the decree has already been discussed in S. 47, Note 31, ante.[7]

7. Adjustment in part.—A decree may be adjusted in part and the judgment-debtor is entitled to apply for a certificate of part satisfaction.[1] Where there is a money decree against two or more defendants, an agreement discharging one or some only of the judgment-debtors is an adjustment of the decree in part and should be certified.[2]

8. Oral adjustments.—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore and by the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur and Sind that evidence to prove an oral adjustment subsequent to the decree is not inadmissible by reason of S. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act.[1] They proceed on the view that the words "as between the parties to any such instrument" in that section suggests that the section applies to dispositive documents between contracting parties and that a decree is not an "instrument" between parties in the sense in which that expression is used in that section. But the High Court of Madras has, on the other hand, held that S. 92 of the Evidence Act is not confined in its operation to dispositive instruments but applies to decrees also and that therefore no evidence in proof of an oral agreement in adjustment of the decree is admissible.[2]

9. When and with whom payment or adjustment should be made.—The term "decree-holder" in this rule includes his assignee and the latter can certify a payment even before his transfer is recognised under O. 21, R. 16.[1] The judgment-debtor also can apply to record a payment made by him to the transferee.[2] The reason is that it is the transfer and not the Court's recognition that passes the title to the decree. Where an order recognising a transfer of a decree is cancelled and before the order of cancellation is set aside in appeal, the judgment-debtor pays the decretal amount to the original decree-holder, the payment is binding on the transferee decree-holder.[3]

O. 21, R. 2, Notes 9—15.

A judgment-creditor has a right to absolve his judgment-debtor from liability at any time before other persons have acquired a right to realise the debt. Therefore, after a decree has been certified in Court as having been satisfied, it is not open to any creditor of the decree-holder to attach the decree on the ground that the satisfaction was certified collusively in order to defraud his creditors.[4] There is also nothing in this rule to prevent the holder of a decree which is attached, to enter satisfaction of his decree after the attachment, if the payment or adjustment had been made before the attachment.[5] As to the validity of payments or adjustment made after attachment of the decree, see Notes to O. 21, R. 53.

10. Payment to one of several decree-holders.—See Notes to O. 21, R. 15.

11. Adjustment by guardian of minor party.—The provisions of O. 32, R. 7 apply to a compromise entered into even after a decree has been passed, and an adjustment of a decree to which a minor is a party requires the sanction of the Court.[1] A payment or adjustment certified to the Court without the leave of the Court is not binding on a minor decree-holder and cannot be recognised by the Court executing the decree.[2]

12. "The decree-holder shall certify."—It is the duty of the decree-holder to report to the Court any payment or adjustment made out of Court.[1] As to the remedy of the judgment-debtor in case the decree-holder does not certify the payment or adjustment, see Notes 30 and 32, infra.

13. Effect of certifying without being paid.—Where a decree-holder admits and certifies to the Court satisfaction of the decree, he cannot afterwards apply to execute the decree on the ground he was induced to certify by means of fraud or coercion or that it was made under a mistake.[1]

14. Certification by one of several joint decree-holders.—See Notes to O. 21, R. 15.

15. "The judgment-debtor may also inform Court . . . . and apply."—Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount due under the decree out of Court, he is not bound to wait till the decree-holder fails to certify the payment[1] or till the decree is actually drawn up[2] but may himself inform the Court of such payment and apply for its being recorded as certified. Where such application is resisted by the decree-holder on the ground that no such payment or adjustment was made, the Court cannot straight away dismiss the application.[3] It is bound to investigate and decide any question upon which the parties may not be agreed, upon such materials as they may legally place before it.[4] The reason is that the words "to show cause" do not mean merely to allege cause, nor even to make out that there is room for argument, but both to allege cause and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court.[5]

O. 21, R. 2, Note 15.

The dismissal for default of an application under sub-R. 2 does not bar a fresh application by the judgment-debtor for the same purpose, and he is entitled to have an adjudication on the merits subject, of course, to any objection that may be open to the decree-holder.[6]

A certificate of payment or adjustment should be filed in the Court which has to execute the decree, that is, the Court which passed the decree.[7] It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned cases[8] that, where an agreement of adjustment has been brought to the notice of the appellate Court by the judgment-debtor when an appeal from the decree is pending before it and the same is not objected to by the decree-holder, there is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of sub-R. 2. The High Court of Madras has dissented from this view and has held that the filing of a certificate of satisfaction in the wrong Court and obtaining an order recording it cannot be treated as legally valid.[9] Where a decree has been transferred to another Court for execution, the transferee Court is the only Court which has the power to enquire into an application under this rule by the judgment-debtor.[10]

O. 21, R. 2, Notes 16—17.

16. "Judgment-debtor"—Meaning of.—The word "judgment-debtor" in this rule includes persons claiming through him. Thus a transferee of the equity of redemption in the suit property from a judgment-debtor in a mortgage decree is a "judgment-debtor" for the purposes of this rule.[1] A surety for a judgment-debtor can plead an uncertified payment or adjustment made by him (the surety) with the decree-holder.[2] The reason is that when a Court proceeds against a surety under S. 145 it does not purport to execute the decree, but only enforces the bond in the manner provided for the execution of decrees and is not therefore a "Court executing the decree" within the meaning of sub-R. 3.

But the surety cannot plead an uncertified satisfaction or adjustment by the judgment-debtor inasmuch as the latter himself could not have pleaded it and the surety cannot be in any better position.[3]

17. Certification—Form of—Certification by decree-holder.—There is no particular form in which the decree-holder is required to certify a payment or adjustment.[1] It may be done orally[2] or by statement made in a subsequent execution application[3] or in a statement in answer to the objections of the judgment-debtor[4] or in a petition filed by him[5] or by way of admissions.[6] An intimation by him to the Court that the decree is satisfied is also a sufficient certification.[7] Where a decree for sale was passed in favour of a mortgagee in possession, but the decree failed to provide for the taking of accounts of the profits that might thereafter be received by the mortgagee, and the decree-holder intimated to the Court in his application for sale that the net profits should go in reduction of the decree amount it was held by the High Court of Madras that the application could be treated as an intention to certify adjustment of the decree and that an equiry may be directed as to the amounts collected by him.[8] The High Court of Bombay has, however, held that a certification of payment or adjustment without specifying the amount of the payment or without mentioning the terms of the adjustment is not a sufficient compliance with the rule.[9] O. 21, R. 2, Notes 17—18.

Application by judgment-debtor.—An application by the judgment-debtor to certify a payment or adjustment, cannot be said to comply with the rule where there is no prayer for the issue of a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified.[10]

According to the High Courts of Allahabad,[11] Patna[12] and Rangoon,[13] where a judgment-debtor contests an application for execution on the ground of payment or adjustment, the statement of objection can be treated as an application under sub-R. 2 provided it is made within 90 days of such payment or adjustment. The High Courts of Calcutta[14] and Madras[15] have, on the other hand taken a contrary view and have held that to so treat the objection would be to ignore the express language of the rule.

18. Limitation for certification.—The period of limitation for an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-R. 2 is 90 days from the time when the payment or adjustment was made (see Art. 174, Limitation Act). Where a judgment-debtor alleges that the decree-holder had fraudulently kept him from exercising his right to apply under sub-R. 2 by promising that he would himself certify the payment or adjustment, the judgment-debtor cannot claim an extension of time under S. 18 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908).[1] The reason is that S. 18 does not deal with the exercise, of the right to apply, but only to cases where a person has been fraudulently kept from the knowledge of his right. An order granting a time-barred application to record satisfaction of a decree is, however, not a nullity, but is valid and binding unless set aside in appeal or other appropriate proceedings.[1-a]

O. 21, R. 2, Notes 18—19.

There is no express article of the Limitation Act applicable to certification by the decree-holder. Such certification is not an application within the meaning of Article 181 of the Limitation Act and therefore can be made at any time.[2] See also Note 27, infra. In Shri Prakash Singh v. Allahabad Bank[3] it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that even if the document by which the decree-holder certifies, is styled as an application, and is in the form of a petition, it cannot alter the real nature of the procedure, and convert what is really no more than a certificate, into an application within the meaning of Article 181.

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Rangoon and the Chief Court of Oudh, following the decision of the Privy Council in Shri Prakash Sing's case, that a certification by the decree-holder is not an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution, even within the meaning of Article 182, Cl. 5 of the Limitation Act.[4] The High Court of Allahabad has on the other hand, held[5] that it is a step-in-aid of execution provided the payment or adjustment was actually made. The case was, however, decided before the decision of the Privy Council in Shri Prakash Singh's case.

19. "Shall record the same".—Where a decree-holder certifies a payment or adjustment the Court is bound to record it in accordance with his statement. It has no power to proceed to satisfy itself before recording the satisfaction that such statement is true.[1] But the judgment-debtor will be entitled to show when an application for execution is made that no such payment or adjustment was made and cannot therefore extend the period of limitation for execution.[2] O. 21, R. 2, Notes 19–20.

Where the payment or adjustment is pleaded by the judgment-debtor under sub-R. (2), the Court is not bound to record the same as certified without requiring proof of it merely because the decree-holder does not appear to show cause why it should not be recorded as certified.[3] After a payment or adjustment is recorded, it is not necessary that a fresh or amended decree should be drawn up.[4]

Sub-R. (3), which provides that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree, does not require that the payment or adjustment must be both certified and recorded. Thus, where a certificate by the decree-holder was not recorded by the Court as provided in this rule, the judgment-debtor does not lose his protection merely because the Court fails to perform the duty cast upon it to make the record.[5]

An order recording the adjustment of a decree, brought about by the fraud, practised by one party upon another can be vacated under the inherent powers of the Court.[6] But the Court ought not to exercise such powers to vacate the order, unless it is prejudicial to one of the parties.[7]

20. Notice.—Sub-R. (1), does not contemplate the issue of a notice to the judgment-debtor.[1] But when the judgment-debtor applies under sub-R. (2), the Court is bound to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified.[2] An order allowing a certification without notice to the decree-holder is bad in law[3] and an application will lie to set aside such an ex parte order.[4]

O. 21, R. 2, Notes 21—22.

21. Uncertified payment or adjustment not to be recognised by Court executing the decree.—The prohibition in sub-R. (3) against the recognition of an uncertified payment or adjustment is limited to a "Court executing the decree" and will not extend to a Court, which is not executing the decree, when dealing with such a matter.[1] The object of the prohibition is to compel the judgment-debtor to be careful to apply to the Court to have recorded as certified any payment he may have made on account of the decree, if he desires that it should be recognised by the executing Court as against the decree-holder executing the decree.[2]

Where the liability of the judgment-debtor under a decree is only a conditional one, as for instance, where a decree provides that the decree-holder is to execute the decree only in the event of the judgment-debtor failing to comply with a particular condition, it will be open to the latter to prove, where execution is taken out, that the condition has been complied with: sub-R. (3) has no application to such a case.[3]

22. "Court executing the decree."—The third clause of S. 258 of the Code of 1877 as well as S. 259 of the Code of 1859 provided that a payment or adjustment made out of Court shall not be recognised by "any Court executing the decree" unless it had been certified or recorded as certified.[1] S. 258 was amended in 1879 by S. 36 of Act XII of 1879 by omitting the words "executing the decree" after "any Court" and the section as amended was re-enacted in the Code of 1882. This gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to the effect of the amendment. The High Courts of Allahabad,[2] Calcutta[3] and Madras[4] and the Chief Court of Punjab[5] held that the amendment had not the effect of altering the law as it stood before the amendment and that an uncertified payment or adjustment could be recognised by a Court other than a Court executing the decree. A contrary view was taken by the High Court of Bombay.[6] Owing to this conflict of opinion the section was again amended by S. 27 of the Amending Act VII of 1888 which again restricted the prohibition to the Court executing the decree, thus restoring the law to the state in which it was prior to the amendment of 1879.[7] The rule is now in the same form.

23. Court acting under O. 21, R. 16.—Can a judgment-debtor, who is debarred under this rule from pleading an adjustment of the decree with the decree-holder for failure to have it certified, nevertheless, plead the same when opposing an application by the assignee of the decree under O. 21, R. 16? The High Court of Bombay[1] has held following the undermentioned decisions of the High Court of Madras[2] that he can. These cases proceed on the view that when an application is made under O. 21, R. 16 by a transferee decree-holder, it is heard by the Court as a Court which passed the decree and not as a Court which is executing the decree.

The said Madras decisions, have, however, now been overruled by a recent Full Bench decision of the same High Court[3] according to which the judgment-debtor cannot plead such an uncertified adjustment and evade the operation of this rule. This view is based on the ground that an application under O. 21, R. 16 is an application for execution and, therefore, the Court which passed the decree when dealing with such an application does not cease to be an executing Court as well. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has taken the same view.[4]

23-A. Court dealing with application under O. 21, Rr. 90, 95, 97 and 98.—It has been held by the High Courts of Lahore and Patna that an application to set aside a sale under O. 21, R. 90 is not a proceeding in execution of a decree, and an adjustment or compromise of the matter in dispute cannot be certified under the provisions of O. 21, R. 2 but must be recorded only under the provisions of O. 23, R. 3.[1] On the same principle it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a proceeding under O. 21, Rr. 95, 97 and 98 is not one in execution and the Court dealing with such an application is not an executing Court and is therefore not barred from recognising an uncertified adjustment of the decree.[2]

24. Suit by judgment-debtor based upon an uncertified payment or adjustment.—It is only a Court executing the decree that is barred from recognising an uncertified payment or adjustment. A suit based upon such payment or adjustment is not barred.

Illustrations

1. B was a surety for D on a bond for Rs. 50 passed by D to G. G obtained a decree against B on this bond and B fully satisfied the decree by paying G Rs. 38. The payment was made out of Court and was not certified to the Court. B now sued D to recover the money so paid by him to G. Held that sub-R. (3) did not bar the suit and that the payment might be proved.[1]

2. M obtained a decree against C for possession of a Jote and mesne profits. Subsequently C adjusted the decree by paying the amount of mesne profits to M and purchasing the Jote from him by a registered conveyance. After M's death his heirs executed the decree and obtained possession. C's plea of uncertified adjustment having been overruled, C now sued M's heirs for possession of the Jote. Held that though the adjustment was not certified, the suit based upon it was maintainable.[2]

25. Suit by decree-holder based on uncertified payment or adjustment. —Where a judgment-debtor executed a bond in favour of the decree-holder in adjustment of the decree against him, it was held that, in a suit by the decree-holder upon the bond, the uncertified adjustment can be proved.[1] The reason is that the adjustment of a decree out of Court, if not certified to the Court under this rule, is ineffectual only so far as the execution of the decree is concerned. Similarly where the plaintiff brought a suit under O. 21, R. 63 to establish his right to certain attached property on the allegation, that the property attached had been transferred to him in satisfaction of a decree held by him against the judgment-debtor, it was held that it was unnecessary that such transfer should be certified under the provisions of this rule.[2]

26. Effect of fraud.—A obtains a decree against B. B satisfies the decree by a payment or adjustment made out of Court: but such payment or adjustment is not certified to the Court in time. A then applies for execution of the decree, fraudulently omitting to state in his application the payment or adjustment as required by O. 21, R. 11 (e). Is B entitled to claim an investigation of the question under S. 47? The answer is, no. Although the question is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of S. 47, it is taken out of the purview of that section by virtue of the particular provision contained in this rule specifically dealing with such questions.[1]

O. 21, R. 2, Note 27.

27. Effect on limitation.—It has been already mentioned in Note 1 ante that S. 258 of the old Code provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree as a payment or adjustment of the decree. Consequently it was held that such a payment could however be relied upon by a decree-holder for the purpose of extending the period of limitation for execution under S. 20 of the Limitation Act.[1] The words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" have now been omitted in the present rule with the result that the executing Court cannot recognise an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever.[1-a]

Now suppose a decree-holder makes an application for execution of his decree more than three years after the date of the decree or after the last starting point of limitation, and mentions in the application a part payment made by the judgment-debtor. Can the Court executing the decree recognise the payment, and hold that by virtue of such payment the decree is not time-barred? and Rangoon[7] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind[8] have held that it will amount to a sufficient certificate and the payment can therefore be recognised provided the payment is as a matter of fact made and provided also the application for execution is within three years of such payment, (as otherwise S. 20 of the Limitation Act will not apply). The said decisions proceed on the view that nothing is prescribed in this rule as to the time within which or the manner in which the decree-holder must certify a payment or adjustment. See also Notes 17 and 18, supra. The High Court of Allahabad on the other hand, held the contrary view in a series of cases. In one class of cases[9] it was held that this rule contemplates a formal proceeding consisting of two steps:—

First, an application by the decree-holder informing the Court of the payment and

and therefore a statement as to payment in an execution application is not such a certificate as is contemplated by this rule and would not save limitation. It was held in another class of cases[9-a] that where the decree will be time-barred if the payment sought to be certified by the decree-holder is ignored, such a payment cannot be certified. In a recent Full Bench ruling however[10] the same High Court has impliedly overruled these cases and fallen in line with the other Courts. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh[11] has followed the earlier view of the High Court of Allahabad. It is submitted that in view of the general trend of opinion the said decision cannot be accepted as correct.

28. Operation as estoppel.—It is not open to the executing Court to enquire into the fact of payment or adjustment of a decree which has not been certified or recorded within the period allowed by law, on the ground that the decree-holder is estopped from denying such payment or adjustment.[1] The reason is that sub-R. (3) enacts a special law for a special purpose and the general law of estoppel cannot be allowed to override the special law.

29. Remedies of the judgment-debtor.—Where a judgment-debtor satisfies the decree by a payment or adjustment made out of Court, which is not certified to the Court in time and the decree-holder applies for execution of the decree in spite of the satisfaction, what is the remedy of the judgment-debtor in such a case? It is clear that the judgment-debtor cannot maintain a suit for a declaration that the decree has been satisfied and is consequently incapable of execution.[1] The reason is that such questions relate to the satisfaction of the decree, a separate suit in respect of which is barred by S. 47. If the properties of the judgment-debtor are sold in execution in such circumstances, no separate suit will, for the same reason lie to set aside the sale.[2] As to whether a suit for damages will lie against the decree-holder, see Note 30 infra.

30. Suit for damages.—Where a decree-holder whose decree has been satisfied by payment out of Court fails to certify satisfaction to the Court and executes the decree and realises the money a second time, the judgment-debtor may sue him for the recovery of the money paid out of Court.[1] Such a suit will not be barred by S. 47, for the question in the suit as observed by Turner, C.J., in Viraraghava v. Subbakka, I.L.R. 5 Madras 397, "relates not to the execution of a decree, but to a contract which formed no subject of inquiry in the suit and could not form a subject of inquiry in execution of the decree."

The cause of action for the suit is failure of consideration or breach of an express or implied promise or of a statutory duty to certify the payment.

There is a difference of opinion as to when the cause of action for such a suit arises—whether it arises as soon as the application for execution is presented, or only after the amount is actually recovered in execution. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[2] and the undermentioned decisions[3] of the High Court of Madras have held that the cause of action arises only when damage is actually sustained, that is, when the money is recovered a second time. In the following cases[4] however, the High Court of Madras has held that the cause of action arises when the decree-holder fails to fulfil his duty and applies for execution, and that an execution need not actually be levied and money realised a second time before the suit can be maintained.

Where the decree-holder transfers the decree after it is satisfied by an uncertified payment or adjustment and the assignee executes the decree, he is not liable to re-pay the decretal amount realised in execution of the decree even though he has knowledge of the payment or adjustment.[5] The reason is that there is no privity of contract between the parties.

Where an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-R. (2) for recording a payment out of Court is dismissed by the executing Court on a consideration of the merits, the judgment-debtor cannot maintain a suit for recovery of the amount alleged to have been paid twice over, for, such a suit will be barred on general principles of res judicata.[6]

32. Criminal proceedings.—Sub-R. (3) has no application to a case where a criminal Court is investigating a charge under S. 210 of the Penal Code of fraudulently executing a decree.[1] The prohibition in sub-R. (3) only means that the Court cannot consider the alleged adjustment in the course of the execution of the decree in question: The sub-rule does not prohibit the Court executing the decree from holding an enquiry under S. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code into an alleged payment or adjustment with a view to file a complaint against the decree-holder for an offence under S. 210, Indian Penal Code.[2] Any other interpretation would make S. 210 of the Indian Penal Code a mere nullity and there could never be any prosecution for such an offence. Where on the objection of the judgment-debtor, the Court dismisses an application for execution on the ground that the decree has been satisfied by a payment out of Court, the decree-holder is not guilty of an offence under S. 210, Indian Penal Code because the decree has not been caused to be executed.[3]

33. Appeal and revision.—An order on an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-R. (2) recording or refusing to record, as certified, a payment or adjustment made out of Court, is the determination of a question between the parties and relating to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of S. 47 and hence is appealable as a decree.[1] No appeal lies against an order refusing to set aside a dismissal of an application for default[2] or an order refusing to review an order rejecting an application under this rule.[3]

Where a decree-holder certifies a payment made out of Court, but the Court in spite of it orders execution to proceed on the ground that the payment is not proved, the Court fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law and the order is therefore revisable by the High Court under S. 115.[4]

Synopsis.

1. Sale of property situate in more than one jurisdiction.
2. Change of territorial jurisdiction.

1. Sale of property situate in more than one jurisdiction.—As has been seen in Note 8 to S. 17, ante, the general principle of law is that no Court can execute a decree in which the subject-matter of the suit or of the application for execution, is property, situate entirely outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. This rule is an exception to that general rule.[1] Even before this provision was enacted in this Code, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that where property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate and is situate within the territorial jurisdiction of two or more Courts, any one of such Courts has jurisdiction to sell the entire estate.[2] As to sales in execution of mortgage decrees where the mortgaged properties are situate within the jurisdiction of more than one Court, see Ss. 17 and 38.

2. Change of territorial jurisdiction.—See S. 37.

3. Transfer of local jurisdiction.

1. Scope of the rule.—Where two Courts are in the same district, one Court may transmit a decree for execution to the other Court direct without the intervention of the District Court.[1]

But where the Court to which the decree is to be sent is situate in a different district, it should be sent to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed. Where this procedure is not followed and the decree is sent direct to the Court subordinate to the District Court in another district. that Court cannot execute the decree.[2] It should not, however, dismiss

The High Court of Madras has framed a rule—R. 161-A of the Civil Rules of Practice—under which the transferee Court is to return the papers to the transmitting Court, if no steps are taken by the decree-holder within six months from the date of transfer. This rule is one of convenience made with the object of inducing decree-holders to take early steps to execute the decree; and a violation thereof does not render the proceedings taken after six months void ab initio.[4]

"Shall send." See Note 2, Pt. (1).

1. Scope of the rule.—The documents required to be transmitted by the Court sending the decree for execution to another Court are:—

(1) A copy of the decree.

(2) A certificate as required by clause (b), and

(3) A copy of any order for execution that may have been passed.[1]

As to the form of certificate of non-satisfaction see Appendix E, No. 4.

Where a Court, upon an application for transfer of the decree for execution to another Court, places a wrong construction on the decree and mentions in the certificate that a particular amount is due, the statement is ultra vires and the judgment-debtor need not have it amended by the transferor Court.[2] In sending the certificate of non-satisfaction, the Court which passed the decree is not called upon to consider whether the decree is still capable of execution; that is a question for determination by the transferee Court when a proper application for execution is presented to it.[3]

When once an order is made sending a decree to another Court for execution, that by itself, is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder to apply to the Court to which the decree is sent for execution.[4]

2. Certificate, effect of not sending.—The omission to send the certificate as required by clause (b) of this rule is a mere irregularity and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution, to entertain the application for execution.[1] Nor is it a ground for an application under O. 21, R. 90 to set aside a sale.[2]

3. Presumption as to compliance with the rule.—Where the validity of an attachment effected by the transferee Court is attacked on the ground that no copy of the decree was sent by the Court which passed the decree, it lies upon the judgment-debtor to prove that it was not transmitted, the maxim applicable being "Omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta"—all things are presumed to have been rightly and duly performed.[1] Where a decree was passed by a Judge in the capacity of a Small Cause Judge and an application for execution of the decree was filed before the same Judge acting on the original side, it was held that, even though there was no formal order of transfer, the provisions of this rule were sufficiently complied with.[2]

4. Copy of any order.—The words "copy of any order for the execution of the decree" in clause (c) mean a copy of any subsisting order and not a copy of an order for execution in the previous execution application.[1]

2. Without any further proof.—As soon as a copy of the decree which is sent for execution to another Court is filed in the Court to which it is transmitted, it has the same effect as a decree of that Court.[1]

3. Jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree.—See S. 42, Note 1.

4. Executing Court, whether can question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree.—S. 225 of the old Code contained the words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it". There was a conflict of decisions as to whether the transferee Court can go into the question of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree, if it sees any reason to do so.[1] The said words have now been omitted and it is now clear that the transferee Court has no power under the present Code to question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree under execution.[2]

This rule dispensing with the further proof of jurisdiction than the certificate of the transmitting Court applies only to the decrees of British Indian Courts and not to foreign decrees transmitted to British Indian Courts for execution under S. 44; the reason is that S. 44 "does not remove the decree of a Native State falling within its purview from the category of foreign judgments. It merely allows the procedure by which such a judgment can have effect given to it in British India. Notwithstanding the section, such a decree still remains a foreign judgment, and its effect is removed by showing want of jurisdiction in the Court which passed it. The Court, is therefore, not precluded from ascertaining whether a foreign Court had jurisdiction merely because that Court has itself decided an issue upon that point in its own favour".[3]

Execution of decree or order by Court to which it is sent.

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.
2. "Competent jurisdiction."

1. Scope of the rule.—The District Court to which a decree is sent for execution under this rule, has a right to entrust the execution of the decree to a Court subordinate to it.[1] An order of a District Court transferring a decree for execution, signed by the Sheristadar "by order" of the District Judge, is a valid endorsement complying with the provisions of this rule and is not vitiated by the absence of the signature of the Judge.[2]

Where an Assistant Judge is invested with all the powers of a District Judge within any part of the District of such Judge, he is the "District Court" in such part for the purposes of this rule.[3]

2. "Competent jurisdiction".—The expression "Court of competent jurisdiction" refers to territorial competence and therefore if the attached property is transferred from the jurisdiction of the transferee Court to some other Court, the sale by the transferee Court after the transfer of the property from its jurisdiction, is not valid even though the Court had jurisdiction over such property at the time of the transfer.[1]

O. 21, R. 9.

R. 9. [S. 227.] Where the Court to which the decree is sent for execution is a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been passed by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

1. Scope.—It has been held in a very early case of the Calcutta High Court[1] that the functions of the High Court, in respect of the execution of a decree of another Court, are limited to effecting execution and to the matters arising out of the proceedings in execution, and that the question whether or not the applicant had a right to obtain execution, must be judged by the Court in which the record was. O. 21, R. 9, Notes 1—3.

2. Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction—Meaning of.—See Notes to Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras High Courts.

3. Limitation.—The period of limitation applicable to the execution of a decree transmitted by one Court to another for execution, depends upon the character of the Court which passed the decree and not on the character of the Court executing it.[1] The manner of execution mentioned in this rule refers to the procedure under which the execution is to be had, and has no reference to the law of limitation; it simply applies the High Court machinery to the execution of the decree.[2] Thus, where a decree passed by the Calcutta Small Cause Court was transferred to the High Court at Calcutta for execution, it was held that the period of limitation applicable to the decree was Art. 182 of the Limitation Act and that it was not governed by the law of limitation relating to decrees of the High Court.[3]

The following shall be inserted as Rule 10-A:—

1. Successive applications for execution.—The Code does not bar a succession of applications for execution.[1-a] Thus, where an application for execution is withdrawn by the decree-holder without leave to apply again having been granted by the Court, a second application is not barred; S. 141 cannot be invoked so as to apply O. 23, R. 1, since that section does not apply to execution proceedings.[1] Similarly O. 2, R. 2 does not apply to proceedings in execution and when a decree gives reliefs of a different character, such as a decree for possession and a decree for costs, there is nothing which prevents separate and successive applications for executions as regards each of them.[2]

2. Who may apply for execution.—It is only the decree-holder whose name is on the record that is entitled to apply for execution of the decree.[1] A defendant in a partition suit in which a decree has been passed is in the position of a decree-holder, and will be entitled to apply for execution.[2] In the case of decrees in representative suits, a person not on the record, but who was represented in the suit by the decree-holder on record, can apply to be brought on the record and to execute the decree.[3] Similarly the representatives of a irregular manner is not null and void and if the irregularity is not objected to, an application made to the transferee Court is in order.[2]

7. Executing Court cannot go behind the decree.—See Note 8 to S. 38.

8. Application for execution.—It has been already seen in Note 5 to S. 38 that where a decree is reversed, modified or affirmed in appeal, the only decree capable of execution is the appellate decree. Therefore, if a decree of a lower Court is confirmed on appeal while execution proceedings are pending, a fresh application for execution is necessary.[1]

When a decree follows an attachment before judgment, O. 38, R. 11 does not exempt the plaintiff from making an application as required by this rule.[2]

An application under S. 39 for transfer of a decree is not an application for execution[3]; but is only an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.[4] It is necessary however even for this purpose that the application for transfer should have been made to Court having jurisdiction in the matter.[4-a]

Where a decree-holder makes an application praying for a relief not granted by the decree, it is not an application which will save limitation under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[5] But an application which is merely incorrect in some respects would be one furthering execution.[6]

9. Dismissal of application for default.—A Court has inherent power to dismiss an application for execution when the applicant fails through his own laches, to put the Court in a position to proceed with the application.[1] But such dismissal does not bar a fresh application for execution.[2]

As to whether a Court has power to restore to the file an application dismissed for default, see Notes to O. 9, R. 9.

1. Legislative changes.—

Sub-Rule (1) corresponds with S. 256 of the old Code and sub-Rule (2) with S. 235. Sub-Rule (3) is new and empowers the Court executing the decree to call upon the decree-holder to produce a certified copy of the decree.[1]

The following are the points of difference between sub-Rule (1) and S. 256:—

(1) Section 256 provided for immediate execution only where the amount decreed did not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees. This rule fixes no such limit.

(2) Under S. 256 the Court could order immediate execution only by the issue of a warrant. Under this rule the order may be made even prior to the preparation of a warrant.

(3) Under this rule execution cannot issue against the movable property of the judgment-debtor as was possible under the old Code.

(4) Under the old Code execution could be ordered if the judgment-debtor was "within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court". Under this rule it could be ordered only if he is within the precincts of the Court.

The following are the important alterations in sub-Rule (2):—

(1) The words "together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed in Cl. (g) are new.

(2) The words "and sale, or by the sale without attachment" in Cl. (j), sub-Cl. (ii) are new.

(3) Sub-Cl. (iv), Cl. (j) is new.

2. Scope of the rule.—An application for execution should be in writing except in the case dealt with under sub-Rule 1, when, it may be oral. Sub-Rule (2) says what particulars a written application for execution shall contain. But every omission to comply with the said requirements is not necessarily such a defect as will vitiate the execution proceedings.[1] Informalities of an immaterial character will not vitiate it.[2] Thus the omission to mention the amount of costs,[3] or giving a wrong suit number,[4] or making a mistake in the name of the judgment-debtor,[5] or wrongly calculating the pleader's fee,[6] or the failure to draw up the petition in a tabular form,[7] is only an irregularity of an immaterial character which will not vitiate the proceeding. Where, however, the omissions relate to material particulars the application cannot be considered to be one in accordance with the law and cannot save limitation.[8] Whether an omission is material or not will depend upon the particular facts of each case.[9] See also the notes under the various headings below.

2-A. Applicability of rule to execution of decrees under other Acts.—Under the Oudh Rent Act, XXII of 1886 (S. 146), The Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913 [S. 198 (j)]; and The Madras Estates Land Act, I of 1908 [S. 192 (g)], the Court may order immediate execution, on the oral application of the decree-holder, as enacted in sub-R. (i) of this rule.

In applications for execution of decree relating to immoveable property under The Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1908, S. 210 (3) (b), as amended by Act, VI of 1920, [S. 50 (1)], the application shall be accompanied by a certified copy of the decree, as provided in sub-R. (iii) of this rule.

As to what particulars are necessary, when an application is made under sub-R. (2) of this rule, to execute a decree against the immoveable properties of the judgment-debtor, under the Bengal Tenancy Act, VIII of 1885, and The Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913, see Ss. 162 and 216, of those Acts respectively.

3. Immediate execution—Sub-R. (1)—Privilege from arrest.—S. 135 ante deals with exemptions from arrest. But sub-S. 3 thereof provides that "nothing in sub-S. 2 shall enable a judgment-debtor to claim exemption from arrest under an order for immediate execution....."[1]

4. Verification of application.—The application for execution should be signed and verified by (a) the applicant, or (b) some other person acquainted with the facts of the case. Where there are several applicants it is not necessary that all of them should verify the application even though some of them are not acquainted with the facts of the case.[1] Where an application for execution is verified by a person other than the decree-holder, all that is necessary is that the Court should be satisfied that he is acquainted with the facts of the case.[2] O.21, R.11, Notes 4—7.

An application not verified is a defective application which ought to be rejected. Where the period of 12 years from the date of a decree expired when the Court was closed and the decree-holder presented an unverified petition for execution on the re-opening day it was held by the High Court of Madras that the petition ought to be rejected and not be allowed to be amended.[3]

5. Who may apply for execution.—See Note to O. 21, R. 10.

6. Date of the decree to be given—Cl. (c).—The date of the decree is the date on which the judgment was pronounced.[1] See also Notes to O. 20, R. 7. An error in the date of the decree or the omission to give it in an application for execution is not a material irregularity and will not affect the validity of the application.[2] It can be amended even after the period of limitation for execution has expired and the amendment so made would relate back to the date of the application.[3]

Where a decree was, by mistake, dated 16th February, 1929 instead of 11th February and the decree-holder was misled thereby and applied for execution on the 15th February, 1932 it was held that the decree ought to be regarded as having been passed on the 16th February, 1929 on the principle actus curiae neminem gravabit. An act of the Court shall prejudice no man.[4]

7. Whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree—Sub-Cl. (d).—It has been already mentioned in Note 5 to S. 38 that where an appeal is preferred against a decree and the decree is modified, reversed, or confirmed, it is the decree of the appellate Court that is capable of execution. This sub-clause requires that the application should state any modifications or reversals, etc., which the decree of the appellate Court may have introduced in the decree of the lower Court.[1]

8. Payment or other adjustment—Sub-Cl. (e).—The applicant for execution is bound to mention in the application any payment or adjustment made between the parties after decree.[1] The non-mention of an uncertified payment out of Court in an application for execution does not, according to the High Court of Madras, render it an application not "in accordance with law" within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908.[2] The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has held that where the decree-holder deliberately omits to mention a certified adjustment, the application is not one "in accordance with law".[3]

9. Previous applications and their results.—An omission to specify all the previous applications with their dates and their results is not a material defect such as would vitiate the application and render it one not "in accordance with law" within Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[1]

10. Amount due upon the decree—Cl. (g).—A Court will be justified in declining to act on an execution petition when the decree-holder does not state the amount due upon the decree.[1] Where a decree awards interest and the application for execution specifies the interest from the date of the decree to the date of the application, execution may be ordered for future interest also up to the date of sale, even though it is not specifically included in the application.[2]

The omission to mention the amount of costs is not a material omission and will not vitiate the application for execution.[3]

11. Against whom execution is to issue—Cl. (i).—An application for execution must state the name of the person against whom execution is sought[1]

Where an application is made against a dead person it cannot be acted upon, but it will be a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act if it had been made bona fide in ignorance of the death.[2] Similarly, where, in an application for execution the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant is described by mistake, as the judgment-debtor, the application will give a fresh starting point for limitation.[3] But where a minor judgment-debtor is not represented at all by a guardian, the application is not one in accordance with law and is of no effect.[4]

12. Mode in which the assistance of the Court is required—Cl. (j). —An execution application which does not specify the manner in which the assistance of the Court is required is not an application in accordance with law.[1] So also is an application asking for a relief which the Court cannot grant inasmuch as the Court is asked to do something which it is not competent to do.[2]

The words "otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require" in Cl. (j), show that the modes of execution mentioned above are not exhaustive.[3] But where the decree-holder prays for a particular mode of execution, he cannot ask the Court to give a different mode of execution upon that application.[4] and others belonging to the judgment-debtor, an inventory is obviously necessary before an attachment could be made.[1] But where a decree is passed under S. 52 of the Code against the legal representatives of a deceased debtor and the moveable property attached is in their possession, the rule has no application.[2] The reason is that the legal representatives themselves are the judgment-debtors and therefore the property sought to be attached could not be said to be property belonging to, but not in the possession of the judgment-debtor. O.21, R.12, Notes 1--2.

the filling up of forms of process concerning immoveable property, must also be furnished so far as they are not given in the plan. In the case of other immoveable property, a plan is not required, but such of the particulars in the annexed instructions as can be given must be supplied:—

1. If the property to be sold is agricultural land which has been cadastrally surveyed and of which survey maps exist, the area, kwin number, latest holding number (if different kinds of holding, e.g., rice land and garden holdings are numbered in different series, the kind of holding must be stated), field numbers (if the property does not coincide with one complete holding), year of kwin map from which the holding number is taken, and revenue last assessed upon the land, must be given.

2. In the case of other agricultural land, the area and village tract within which it falls, distance and direction from nearest town or village and boundaries should be specified.

3. In the case of land in large towns the area, block or quarter, name or number, the lot number (if there are separate series of lots, the series should be stated, and where the land forms part only of a lot, particulars regarding that part), the holding number in the latest town survey map, if any, and year of the map, the rent or revenue last assessed on the land, must be given.

4. In the case of buildings situated in a large town when the land on which such buildings stand is not affected, the name or number of the street, or, if the street has neither name nor number, the quarter or block name or number, the number of the building in the street or if it has no number, the lot number must be given.

5. In the case of immoveable property situated in a small town or village, such of the particulars in paragraphs 3 and 4 above as can be given should be given.

6. The purpose to which land or buildings are put, the material and age of buildings, all incumbrances and Municipal taxes should be stated.

7. The judgment-debtor's share or interest in the property should be specified.

(2) The cost of the certified extract should be reckoned in the costs of the application.

Synopsis.

1. Legislative changes. 2. Specification of property.

Sufficient to identify. See Note 2, Pt. (2).

1. Legislative changes.—

This rule corresponds to the first paragraph of S. 237 of the old Code, except that the words "and in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers" have been newly added in Cl. (a).

The second paragraph of S. 237 requiring the list of properties to be verified has been omitted from this rule and reproduced in sub-Rule (3) of R. 66 of this order.[1]

2. Specification of property.—The rule applies only to execution of money decrees, and not to decrees made upon a charge or a mortgage.[1]

Order 21, Rule 13—Note 1.

(1) For cases under the old Code which required verification, see Nasir-un-nissa v. Gafur-ud-din, (1906) 28 All 244 (245): 1905 All W N 263; Basdeo v. John Smidt, (1899) 22 All 55 (64): 1899 All W N 172.

Note 2.

(1) Raghunath Tewari v. Radhessor Kuar, (1916) 35 Ind Cas 368 (369) Pat.

The object of requiring the boundaries and numbers to be specified is to easily identify the property.[2] Clause (b) imposes a duty on the decree-holder to specify the judgment-debtor's share or interest, to the best of his belief.[3] Thus where the share is undivided it should be so specified.[4] O.21, R.13, Note 2.

An application which does not contain the particulars required by this rule cannot be treated as an application in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act unless the defects are remedied by amendment under R. 17.[5] (See also Notes to R. 17, infra.)

1. Legislative changes.— O.21, R.15, Notes 1—2.

1. The words "or his or their representatives" in S. 231 of the old Code, after the words "one or more of such persons" have been omitted as unnecessary in view of the provisions of S. 146, ante.
2. The words "unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary" are new. See Note 5.

2. Scope of the rule.—There are two rules of general application governing the execution of joint decrees in favour of several persons:—

(1) One of the decree-holders alone cannot apply for execution of his share only of the decree, leaving the other decree-holders to take out execution for their shares.[1-a]

(2) One of the decree-holders alone cannot execute the whole decree so as to bind the other decree-holders by the result of such execution.

The first rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a number of applications for execution. As observed by Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J. in Haro Sankar Sandyal v. Tarak Chandra Buttacharjee, 11 Suth. W. R. 488 at p. 490:

"Suppose there was a decree for a lac of rupees, it could not be contended that the decree-holder could assign it to a lac of assignees, so as to give to each of them power to take out execution for one rupee, his portion of it. Otherwise, there might be a lac of executions under the decree, a lac of seizures and a lac of sales under each one of which there can be no doubt that the judgment-debtor would suffer loss. If this were allowed, the judgment-debtor must necessarily be ruined."

The second rule is based on the principle that the interests of the other decree-holders should not be jeopardised, and also on the principle that all persons representing a single and indivisible right must be parties before the right can be adjudicated upon. (See Note 7 to O. 1, R. 1.)

This rule is an exception to the second of the two rules abovementioned, in that it provides that one of several joint decree-holders can execute, under certain circumstances, the whole decree. In order, however, to prevent the interest of the other decree-holders from being jeopardised, the Court is given power, and is indeed bound, to make such order as is necessary to safeguard such interests.[1]

3. "Where a decree has been passed jointly".—A decree directing the defendant to pay a certain sum of money to several persons specifying their shares therein is not a joint decree, even though the amount is made payable as an entire sum.[1] The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, in a recent case[2] expressed an obiter dictum that a decree does not cease to be a joint decree merely because the shares of the decree-holders in the decretal amount has been determined by the decree. According to the High Court of Lahore, where a suit is filed in the name of a firm, the decree passed in the suit in favour of the firm must be held to be a decree passed jointly in favour of all the partners, since a firm name is only a compendious method of writing the names of all the partners.[3] But the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind has held that unless a declaration of the names of all the partners has been made under O. 30, R. 2, the decree in favour of the firm cannot be said to be a joint decree.[4]

This rule can apply only where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one. Where a portion of a decree is transferred to another, either by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and the Court has got the inherent power to grant him relief in execution by applying general principles of law analogous to this rule.[5]

4. "Any one or more of such persons may apply for the execution of the whole decree."—As has been seen in Note 2 above, this rule makes an exception to the general rule that all decree-holders must join in an application to execute the joint decree, and permits one or more of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution of the whole decree,[1] unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary.[2] But it does not confer an unconditional right on one of the decree-holders to execute the decree. It is within the discretion of the Court to allow such execution and the Court will act only if it sees sufficient cause for allowing such a course to be taken.[3] It may allow other decree-holders to intervene in a pending execution, if it is not being properly conducted.[4] It is also in the discretion of the Court whether or not notice should be given to the other decree-holders or to the judgment-debtor before making an order for execution under this rule.[5] Where one of several decree-holders applies for execution and the others do not object to execution being granted to him, it is not for the judgment-debtor to say that sufficient steps have not been taken to safeguard the interests of the other decree-holders.[6]

When one of several joint decree-holders executes a decree, he executes the decree prima facie for the benefit of all, unless there is a direction by the Court or in the decree itself which permits execution for the benefit of the executing creditor alone.[7] Therefore, where one decree-holder executes a joint decree and realises the amount due under it, the realisation is made on behalf of, and for the benefit of, all the joint decree-holders and they are entitled to recover their respective shares from him by a separate suit.[8]

The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned case[9] that it need not be stated in the body of the application that it is being made for the benefit of all the decree-holders and that when the application is for execution of the entire decree, it should be assumed that the person applying is attempting to execute it on behalf of all the decree-holders. But the High Court of Patna has held that such an application is invalid and must be disallowed.[10]

The omission on the part of the decree-holder to state in his application the names of all the persons who are interested in the decree is not such a defect as would invalidate the execution proceedings.[11]

5. Application by one of several decree-holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree.—It has been seen in Note 2 above that it is not open to one of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution in respect of his share only of the decree, and that the rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a multiplicity of applications by different decree-holders. Where, therefore, there is no possibility of the judgment-debtor being harassed by different applications, the bar against one of the decree-holders applying for execution will not apply. Thus where some of the joint decree-holders apply for execution with regard to a certain portion only of the decree giving up the rest and the other decree-holders, being made parties, do not object to such a giving up by the applicants, the execution asked for may be allowed and the other decree-holders cannot subsequently apply for execution of the balance of the decree.[1] Similarly, where one of the joint decree-holders intimates to the Court satisfaction of his share in the decree, this rule does not bar an application by the others for execution for the balance remaining due under the decree.[2] So also, where A and B jointly obtain a decree for money or for possession of immoveable property against C, and C as judgment-debtor either purchases his share in the decree or inherits such share from A, the result would be the extinguishment of the decree pro tanto and B could, therefore, execute the decree in respect of his share.[3]

6. Unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary.—This rule is not applicable to the case of joint decree-holders where the execution of a joint decree is made dependent upon all the decree-holders joining in the application.[1]

7. Execution against one of the joint judgment-debtors—Limitation.—See Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.

O.21, R.15, Note 8.

8. Payment by judgment-debtor out of Court to one of several decree-holders.—One of several joint decree-holders cannot, as a general rule, give a valid discharge of the entire decree without the concurrence of others. A payment, therefore, to one of several decree-holders out of Court is valid only to the extent of the share of that decree-holder, unless it can be proved that the decree-holder who granted the discharge was an agent of the other decree-holders, or otherwise had legal authority to bind them by his acts.[1] On the same principle one of two or more joint decree-holders, is not competent, without being authorised by the other or others, to certify a payment made to him under O. 21, R. 2 so as to operate as a satisfaction of the entire decree, and the others are not debarred from executing the decree as to their shares.[2] The reason is that "when one of two or more joint decree-holders takes it upon himself to certify satisfaction of the whole decree, it is clear that no provision can be made by the Court for safeguarding the interests of the other decree-holder or decree-holders; and that if a Court was bound to recognise such an adjustment out of Court, the remaining decree-holders might be driven to another suit to recover money for which a decree had already been passed in their favour."[3]

Where the joint decree-holders are partners or members of a Hindu co-parcenary, a payment to one of them or a certificate by him under O. 21, R. 2 cannot according to the High Court of Madras,[4] be treated as satisfaction of the decree even in part. This view is based on the ground that a decree debt in favour of a firm or of a co-parcenary is only one asset out of the numerous other assets and that one of the decree-holders cannot legally claim any definite share in the particular decree debt. The same High Court has also held that the fact that the decree-holder receiving payment is a partner or is the managing member of the joint family is not enough to clothe him with authority to act as the agent of the other decree-holders in receiving such payment.[5] The High Courts of Allahabad[6] and Patna[7] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh[8] have, on the other hand, held that a karta of a joint Hindu family has legal authority to act on behalf of the family and that a payment to, or a certificate by him will bind the other decree-holders. It has been held by the High Court of Lahore[9] and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind[10] that one partner is the agent of the others and that where a decree is obtained in the name of a firm, one of the partners can receive the entire money due under the decree and certify the payment.

Although a payment to one of two joint decree-holders of the whole decree amount does not, even when certified, absolve the judgment-debtor from liability to the other decree-holder, such decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the judgment-debtor in execution, but may sue to recover his share from the other decree-holder.[11]

9. Defective application under the rule—If could be amended.—It has been held by the High Court of Patna in the undermentioned case[1] that where in an application for execution of a decree by one of several joint decree-holders, it is not stated that the application is for the benefit of all the decree-holders, the application is invalid and cannot be allowed to be amended. It proceeds upon the view that the requirements of this rule go to the root of the execution of the decree and that while R. 17 of this Order empowers the Court to allow a defect in the requirements of Rr. 11 to 14 to be amended, it does not include this rule. But the High Court of Allahabad[2] has taken a contrary view that there is nothing in R. 17 which deprives the Court of its powers to allow amendments in relation to matters required to be mentioned by this rule.

10. Appeal.—The question whether an appeal lies from an order passed under this rule depends upon the consideration whether the question decided is one within S. 47 of the Code. Thus, an order allowing or refusing execution in favour of one of the decree-holders when an objection is raised by the judgment-debtor is one falling under S. 47 and, therefore, appealable as a decree.[1] But no appeal will lie against an order refusing to allow execution in favour of one on the objection of another joint decree-holder[2] or against an order protecting the interests of the non-applying decree-holder.[3] O.21, R.15, Notes 10—11.

11. Limitation.—An application for execution by one of several joint decree-holders is an application in accordance with law and will afford a fresh starting point of limitation under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[1] It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras that although this rule does not allow one of such decree-holders to apply for partial execution of a joint decree, yet such an application may keep alive the right to execute the decree.[2] But the High Court of Allahabad and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh have taken the contrary view that such an application is not one in accordance with law and, therefore, will not save limitation.[3]

Where there is a decree in favour of two or more joint decree-holders and one of them is a minor, can the minor decree-holder apply to execute the decree on behalf of all, more than three years after the last starting point of limitation but within three years of his attaining majority? There is a conflict of opinion on this question. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,[4] Bombay,[5] Calcutta[6] and Lahore[7] that the ex-minor decree-holder can apply to execute the whole decree, even though the other decree-holders would be barred by limitation. But the High Court of Madras[8] has, on the other hand, held that the decree cannot be executed as a joint decree. See S. 7 of the Indian Limitation Act.

R. 16. [S. 232.] Where a decree or, if a decree has been passed jointly[7] in favour of two or more persons, [8]the interest of any decree-holder in the decree is transferred[3] by assignment in writing[4] or by operation of law[5], the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it; and the decree may be executed[11] in the same manner and subject to the same conditions[21] as if the application were made by such decree-holder:

Application for execution by transferee of decree.

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice[14] of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections[15] (if any) to its execution:

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money[17] against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them[16], it shall not be executed against the others.

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree", are new. See Note 7, infra.

2. The words "if that Court thinks fit" which occurred in the old S. 232 before the words "the decree may be executed in the same manner . . . ." have been omitted. See Note 11, infra.

3. The words "decree for money" in the second proviso have been changed into "a decree for the payment of money . . . .". See Note 17, infra.

2. Decree.—The provisions of this rule in the first paragraph as well as in the first proviso are not restricted to money decrees, they apply to mortgage decrees also.[1] As to the applicability of the second proviso, see Note 17, infra.

3. "Where a decree has been transferred."—The principle of this rule is that no one can execute a decree except the decree-holder or a person to whom the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law.[1] A third person cannot, therefore, apply for execution of a decree unless there is a transfer to him of the decree by the original decree-holder.[2] Where on the death of A, the plaintiff in a suit, his widow B continues the proceedings as his legal representative and obtains a decree, C claiming to be the real heir of A cannot apply to execute the decree inasmuch as there is no transfer of the decree by B in his favour.[3] The rule is, however, intended primarily for those cases where the applicant for execution does not appear as decree-holder in the decree and he applies for execution on the basis of a transfer of the decree; it does not, therefore, apply where the applicant is one whose name is already in the decree as one of two persons in whose favour the decree has been passed and who claims on the death of the other decree-holder to execute the decree as the surviving decree-holder.[3-a]

A transfer in writing of the property dealt with by the decree is not a transfer of the decree itself and the transferee cannot apply under this rule.[4] It has, however, been held by the High Court of Rangoon that it is a matter of construction of the deed of transfer whether the decree also was intended to be transferred by the transfer of the property,[5] and the words of the rule relating to the transfer of a decree cannot be construed so as to apply to a case where there was no decree in existence at the time of the assignment. The assignee of decree to be subsequently passed cannot apply for execution under this rule.[6] Thus a person who obtains a transfer, pending suit, of the property forming the subject-matter of the suit is not entitled to execute the decree subsequently passed unless his name has been substituted in place of his vendor under O. 22, R. 10.[7] Similarly, the assignee of a preliminary decree who has not taken steps to be impleaded in the suit cannot apply to execute the final decree in the suit.[7-a]

The High Court of Bombay has, however, held in the undermentioned case[8] that the effect of the transfer was, in equity, to vest, in the transferee, the interest in the decree which was afterwards obtained and that the decree must be taken to have been transferred by operation of law. The High Court of Rangoon has dissented from the above reasoning of the High Court of Bombay and has held that the words "by operation of law" cannot be invoked so as to make an assignment in writing, an assignment by operation of law.[9] O.21, R.16, Notes 3—4.

When a decree is assigned, what is really transferred is not the decree alone, but the interest of the decree-holder in the decree as may be finally determined. Therefore an assignment of the decree of the trial Court carries with it the right to execute the decree passed in appeal.[10]

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case[11] that the transferee of a decree for future maintenance is entitled to apply for execution in respect of the amounts that fall due from time to time and that S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act will not apply when the cause of action has merged in the decree. But the High Court of Madras[12] has held that only that portion of the maintenance decree that related to the arrears of maintenance already accrued due could legally be transferred.

4. Transfer by assignment in writing.—An assignee of a decree under an oral transfer has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule.[1] In order to enable a transferee to apply, the transfer must be effected by an instrument in writing.[2] A mere contract for sale of a decree without an assignment in writing in favour of the purchaser, is not enough.[3] Nor does a release of his rights by a decree-holder in favour of another operate as an assignment.[4]

It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore that a decree for sale of immovable property is itself not immovable property and, therefore, an assignment of such a decree does not require to be registered.[5]

O.21,R.16, Notes 4—5.

But the High Court of Bombay has taken a contrary view.[6] In any view a personal decree against a defendant is transferable without registration even though the decree may be a mortgage decree as against the other defendants.[7]

5. Transfer by operation of law.—Ordinarily transferees by operation of law would include the following persons[1]:—

(1) In the case of a deceased decree-holder, his legal representatives.

(2) In the case of an insolvent debtor the Official Assignee or Official Receiver.

(3) The purchaser of a decree at a Court sale.

The following are also some of the instances of transfer by operation of law:—

(1) A obtains a decree against X. B, his son, sues A for partition and obtains a decree for 1/5th share of the decree obtained by A. B is entitled to apply for execution as transferee by operation of law.[2]

(2) A, a trustee obtained a decree for rent against certain tenants. A filed another suit and obtained therein a declaration that the trust was incapable of being executed. It was held that thereafter the original owner of the properties could apply to execute the decree for rent without actual assignment.[3]

(3) Where, on the revocation of a probate of a will, the minor son of the testator succeeds to the estate, he is entitled to execute the decree obtained by the executrix.[4]

(4) A mortgagee who has obtained a final decree for foreclosure against the mortgagor who in turn has obtained a decree for possession of the immovable properties comprised in the mortgage, is an assignee by operation of law.[5]

(5) Where a mortgage is foreclosed and a pre-emptor obtains a decree for pre-emption of the same properties, he is a transferee of the foreclosure decree.[6]

(6) A holder of a certificate of administration granted under S. 3 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 is a transferee by operation of law.[7] O.21, R.16, Notes 5—6.

But if a decree obtained by a member of a joint Hindu family is allotted to another member at a family partition, the latter is not a transferee by operation of law and, therefore, must get an assignment in writing from the decree-holder to enable him to apply under this rule.[8] A person does not become a transferee by operation of law from a decree-holder by merely obtaining another decree against him.[9]

6. Benamidar.—A obtains a decree against B and transfers it to C benami for D. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that D is the person entitled to execute the decree, that C, not being the real transferee cannot apply under this rule, and that a mere application by him for execution cannot be held to be one in "accordance with law" for the purposes of limitation[1] but that it will be one in "accordance with law" if, with the permission of the Court he is allowed to execute the decree.[2] On the other hand, the High Courts of Madras[3] and Lahore[4] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind[5] have held that the "transferee" referred to in the rule is the transferee named as such in the transfer, and that the real owner is not entitled to apply. The High Courts of Allahabad[6] and the Chief Court of Lower Burma[7] have also held that the benamidar is entitled to apply without deciding whether the real owner can or cannot do so.

Where the transferee of a decree dies and thereupon, his heirs and a person alleging that the transferee was only a benamidar for him apply separately to execute the decree, the Court has got power under S. 47, sub-S. 3 to enquire who is the representative of the deceased and the question of benami can be gone into in execution proceedings.[8]

Where the decree itself is obtained by a benamidar, the Chief Court of Oudh has held that the benamidar has the right to execute the decree.[9] The High Court of Calcutta is, on the other hand, of opinion that he cannot so apply and that his application will, therefore, not be one in accordance with law.[10]

7. Part transfer of a decree.—Under S. 232 of the old Code it was held that the transferee of the interest of any one of several joint decree-holders in the decree could apply to execute the decree.[1] This principle has been given effect to in the present Code by adding in this rule the words "or if a decree has been passed jointly . . . in the decree" (see Note 1 supra). Similarly there is nothing in this rule or elsewhere which prohibits the transferee of a portion of the decree from applying under this rule.[2] The only qualification in such a case is that the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and can execute the decree only subject to general provisions of law analagous to R. 15 supra.[3] See also notes to O. 21, R. 15.

8. Pledge of decree.—The transfer of a decree by way of a mortgage is an "assignment in writing" of a fractional interest in the decree and the mortgagee is, therefore, entitled to apply under this rule.[1]

9. Assignment of rent decree under the Tenancy Acts.—S. 148, clause (o) of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) provides that, notwithstanding anything contained in S. 232, Civil Procedure Code (of 1882), an application for the execution of a decree for arrears of rent shall not be made by an assignee of the decree, unless the landlord's interest in the land has become vested in him.[1] The word "assignee" in that section refers only to purchasers for consideration and does not include a person in whom the legal estate is vested by an act of the owner, as for instance, a trustee, who has no independent interest in the property.[2] It has been held in the undermentioned case[3] that a Court executing a rent decree cannot refuse execution when the assignment had been recognised by the Court before the Tenancy Act came into force. O.21, R.16, Notes 9—11.

A provision similar to that in S. 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has been made also by S. 198 (k) of the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913). By Sch. II, List II of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) it is provided that no application for the execution of a decree shall be made by an assignee of the decree unless the assignor's interest in the land to which it relates has become and is vested in such assignee.

10. Transfer when takes effect.—The transfer of a decree made by an instrument in writing takes effect from the date of such instrument, irrespective of its recognition by the Court on an application made to it under this rule.[1]

1. A brought certain properties to sale in execution of a decree obtained by him against F. Pending execution proceedings A assigned his decree to D. Subsequently two days before sale, A reported that the decree had been satisfied by payment. D intervened and objected to the record of satisfaction being made. It was held that if his transfer was true he was a representative of A and the matter must be enquired into. Dwar Buksh v. Fatik, I. L. R. 26 Cal. 250.

2. M had obtained a money decree against H. R in execution of a decree obtained by him against M applied under O. 21, R. 53 and recovered the amount due under M's decree. Thereupon C, claiming under an assignment of the decree in writing from M prior to R's attachment, sued R for the recovery of the money drawn by him. It was held that C's title to the decree was complete on the date of the assignment and therefore prevailed as against R's attachment. Co-operative Town Bank of Padigar v. Raman Chettiar, I. been omitted and the transferee's right to apply does not depend upon the discretion of the Court.[2]

Where a transfer is recognised by the Court on an application under this rule, the transferee is entitled to execute the decree as if the application were made by the original decree-holder.[3] The absence of consideration for the assignment of a decree is immaterial and will not deprive the assignee of his rights to execute the decree, provided the assignment is not a sham transaction.[4]

It has already been mentioned in Notes to O. 21, R. 10 ante that the person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is the person entitled to execution. Therefore, where the transferee of a decree does not apply under this rule for execution, the executing Court is bound to allow execution at the instance of the transferor, even after the date of the transfer till the transfer is recognised by the Court.[5]

As to the right of the transferee to apply for execution, where the decree has been attached by the holder of a decree against the transferor, see notes to O. 21, R. 53 infra.

Where an ex parte decree was assigned and the assignee did not take any step under this rule and thereafter on an application made by the defendant as against the original decree-holder alone, the ex parte decree was set aside, it was held that the transferee could not proceed with the execution until he got an order cancelling the order setting aside the ex parte decree.[6]

12. Application for execution must be made to the Court which passed the decree.—An application by the transferee of a decree under this rule can be entertained only by the Court which passed the decree; the Court to which the decree has been transferred has no jurisdiction to entertain the same.[1]

The reason is, as stated in Sheo Narain Singh v. Hurbans Lall, (1870) 14 W. R. 65 (66), that "it would lead to the greatest difficulties, if in one Court one party was recognised as being the holder of, and having the control over, a decree, and at the same time in another Court another party was recognised as being in that position."

As to whether a transferee can continue the execution proceedings initiated by the original decree-holder without a fresh application, see Note 19 infra.

13. Award.—A having obtained an award against B and filed it in Court, assigned the same to C. C applied to execute it under S. 15 of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) which provides that the award on being filed in Court, shall be enforceable as a decree. It was held that C could execute it and that the Court in which the award was filed must be deemed to be the Court which passed the decree for the purposes of this rule.[1]

14. Notice to transferor and judgment-debtor.—The provisions of this rule as to notice are imperative; the giving of notice of the application, to the assignor and to the judgment-debtor is an indispensable condition of jurisdiction and the failure to give it renders all the proceedings in execution void as against them.[1] Where the assignee applied under this rule for notices to the assignor and the judgment-debtor and also for attachment of a certain property and the notice as well as the warrant of attachment were issued together, it was held that the attachment was illegal inasmuch as the objections of the judgment-debtor were not heard at that time.[2] Where in an application under this rule, by the assignee of a mortgage decree, notice is given only to the mortgagor and not to the subsequent mortgagee, who was also a judgment-debtor under the decree, the latter will not be bound by such execution and the auction-purchaser will acquire only the rights of the mortgagor, but not those of the subsequent mortgagee.[3]

The notice that is to be given under this rule is of the application for execution and not of the assignment.[4] But a written notice is not always necessary; if the judgment-debtor is present in Court at the time the order on the application is made, and has thus notice of the application, the fact that no written notice was given will not vitiate the proceedings.[5]

The object of issuing notice under this rule is to determine once for all and in the presence of all the parties the validity of the instrument of transfer. It is therefore not necessary that notice must be issued on every subsequent application by the transferee under this rule.[5-a]

If the judgment-debtor is dead when the assignee applies for execution, the notice required by this rule may be served on his legal representatives.[6] If the original decree-holder becomes insolvent, the Official Receiver would be entitled to notice.[7]

15. Objections to be heard.—After the service of the notice mentioned in the first proviso to this rule, the Court is bound to hear the objections, if any, of the transferor and of the judgment-debtor.[1] As has been already mentioned in Note 11 ante, it is not a valid objection that the assignment is not supported by consideration.[2] Nor can the judgment-debtor raise the plea that the decree is not valid.[3] As to the right of the judgment-debtor to plead an uncertified payment or adjustment, see Note 23 to O. 21, R. 2.

An assignment of a decree is not valid as against the judgment-debtor until the debtor has had notice of the assignment and, therefore, any payment made to the original decree-holder before notice is valid as against the transferee.[4]

The failure of the judgment-debtor to object to the validity of the assignment when an application under this rule is made will preclude him, under general principles of res judicata, from raising such objection at a subsequent stage of the proceedings.[5]

16. Transfer of decree for payment of money against two or more persons to one of them.—It is a general principle of law that when one of the persons jointly liable under a decree unites in himself the two opposite characters of creditor and joint-debtor in respect of the whole decretal debt, the effect is to extinguish the liability of all the co-judgment-debtors under the decree.[1] The second proviso to this rule is based on this general principle and provides that, in such a case, the transferee cannot enforce the decree by execution against his co-debtors.[2] On the same principle where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons and the interest of one of such decree-holders devolves upon a judgment-debtor the decree is extinguished pro tanto.[3] When the alleged transferee of a decree for money is found to be the benamidar of one of the judgment-debtors, the Court is bound, under the second proviso to this rule, to refuse to allow the assignee to execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors.[4] But an agreement between the decree-holder and some of the judgment-debtors that the decree-holder should execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors and pay the amount realised to them in consideration of the fact that they have paid the amount in advance, does not fall under the prohibition in this rule.[5]

This proviso does not make the assignment of a decree in favour of one of several judgment-debtors invalid in law; it only provides that the transferee is not entitled to enforce his rights by execution.[6] His remedy is, therefore, to sue his co-judgment-debtors for contribution having regard to the proportion in which they were bound inter se to satisfy the decree.[7]

The words "decree for the payment of money against two or more persons" mean a decree against two or more persons jointly.

Illustration.

A decree directed that N should pay Rs. 90 and Rs. 11-5-3 as costs, and A should pay Rs. 30 with Rs. 3-12-4 as costs. A afterwards took an assignment of the decree in writing and applied to execute it against N to the extent of Rs. 90 and costs. It was held that the decree for money so far as it related to Rs. 90 and costs was not a decree against several persons, but against one person N, and therefore A could execute it.[8]

17. "Decree for the payment of money."—The second proviso to this rule does not apply to decrees other than money decrees.[1] Thus it does not apply to mortgage decrees for sale, and, therefore, an assignment of a mortgage decree in favour of one of the judgment-debtors does not extinguish the decree.[2]

The expression "decree for money" in S. 232 of the old Code (corresponding to this rule) was interpreted by the High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta to mean a personal decree for the payment of money. Thus, a decree against a legal representative for payment of money out of the assets of the deceased,[3] or a decree against a purchaser of the equity of redemption in a mortgage suit[4] was held not to come within that section. The High Court of Allahabad[5] has in a recent case held that the substitution of the expression "for the payment of money" for the words "for money" in the proviso is intended to emphasise the fact that the proviso is confined to cases of personal decrees. On the other hand, the High Court of Madras[6] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[7] have held that this is an unduly narrow interpretation of the rule and that it is immaterial whether the assignee decree-holder is one against whom a personal money decree has been passed or one who has been directed to pay the decretal debt out of the assets in his hands.

O. 21. R. 16, Notes 18—19.

18. Attachment of decree by co-judgment-debtor.—One S obtained a decree against A, B, C and D. A obtained decree against S and attached the decree of S and applied under O. 21, R. 53 for execution of S's decree against his co-judgment-debtors B, C, and D. It was held that A, by attaching S's decree, did not become an assignee thereof, that the prohibition in this rule did not therefore apply to such a case and that A was entitled to execute the decree.[1]

19. Application for substitution by transferee.—A transferee from a decree-holder can only apply under this rule to execute the decree; an application merely for recognising him as transferee is legally incompetent and must be rejected.[1] It is not also necessary for the validity of the proceedings that the substitution of the name of the transferee is actually made.[2] All that is necessary is that the transferee should merely file his application for execution of the decree setting out either in it or in an affidavit filed in support thereof that he is such a transferee; thereupon the Court orders the application for execution to proceed or rejects it.[3]

Where during the pendency of execution proceedings, the decree-holder dies or transfers the decree by an assignment in writing, can the transferee apply under this rule to continue the execution proceedings? It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind that it is open to the transferee either to apply for continuing the proceedings in execution or to make a fresh application.[4] The reason is that a pending execution application does not abate by reason of the death or devolution of any interest of the decree-holder and, therefore, the transferee can apply by virtue of S. 146 and this rule. Similarly where the decree-holder dies while his application is pending in a Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution, his legal representatives may either apply to the Court which passed the decree for fresh execution after bringing their names on the record, or may apply to the executing Court for continuing the proceedings, subsequently producing from the Court which passed the decree the necessary order under this rule.[5] According to the High Court of Allahabad, however, the transferee must apply, whenever he does apply, for fresh execution, even when the application by his predecessor is pending.[6]

Though an application by the transferee merely for substitution of his name is not competent, still it is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act so as to give a fresh starting point of time.[7] But in cases governed by Art. 183 of the Limitation Act, the order of the Court allowing the transferee to execute the decree after recognition of his transfer will operate as a revivor and be a fresh starting point of limitation.[8] The mere issue of a notice under this rule without a decision of the Court that the decree is executable will not, however, operate as a revivor.[9]

See also the undermentioned cases holding that an application under this rule is an application in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[10]

20. Transfer of decree against company in liquidation.—An application by a transferee of a decree, obtained against a limited company which has since gone into liquidation, for substitution of his name as decree-holder must, in spite of the provisions of S. 171 of the Indian Companies Act, be made to the execution Court and not to the Court in which the winding up proceedings are pending.[1] to the assignee of a decree, see Note 4 to S. 49 and O. 34, R. 14 and also the undermentioned case.[1]

22. Appeal.—An order allowing or dismissing an application by a transferee from a decree-holder made under this Rule is appealable as a decree.[1] The reason is that, as mentioned already in Note 24 to S. 47, the transferee is a representative of the decree-holder and, therefore, a decision on a question whether any person is a representative or not of a party is one within the scope of S. 47, sub-S. 3. Sub-section 3 to S. 47 was first introduced in S. 244 of the old Code by the Amending Act VII of 1888 and the undermentioned decisions[2] prior to that Act holding that no appeal lay in such a case are no longer good law.

23. Suit by assignee for declaration of right or for refund of price.—Section 47, sub-S. 3 provides that a question as to whether any person is, or is not the representative of a party shall, for the purposes of S. 47, be determined by the Court (i.e., the Court executing the decree). The provision in S. 244 of the old Code corresponding to this sub-section was introduced in that section by the Amending Act VII of 1888 and ran as follows:—

> "If a question arises as to who is the representative of a party for the purposes of this section, the Court may either stay execution of decree until the question has been determined by a separate suit, or itself determine the question by an order under this section."

It was held in cases arising before the date of the amendment that a question as to the validity of the transfer of a decree entitling him to execute the decree was not one within S. 244 and that a suit raising such question was not barred.[1] In one class of cases arising after the date of the said amendment

it was held that where an application by the transferee under S. 232 of the old Code (O. 21, R. 16) was rejected, the transferee could not be considered to be the representative of the decree-holder and that the question of the validity of the transfer not being thus "between the parties or their representatives" is not one within S. 244 and can be agitated in a separate suit by the transferee.[2] In a second class of cases it was held that the above amendment left two courses open to the Court, namely, of either determining the question in execution itself or of referring the parties to a separate suit, and that a mere dismissal of application under S. 232 did not bar a suit by the transferee for declaration of his right.[3] In a third class of cases it was held that the bar of suit in respect of questions falling within the first sentence of S. 244 could not be reasonably extended to cases falling under the amendment, and a suit was, therefore, not barred.[4]

In view of the present sub-R. 3 it is now clear that a suit raising such a question for the purposes of execution is barred.[5] The High Court of Lahore has, however, taken a contrary view relying on Bommanapatti Veerappa v. Chintakunta Srinivasa Rao, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 264, a decision under the old Code. It is submitted that the decision cannot be accepted as correct.[6]

Where a transfer of a decree is not recognised by the executing Court, the transferee is entitled to sue the assignor for refund of the money received by him for the assignment.[7] But the assignee is not entitled to treat the assignment in his favour as ineffectual and to maintain a suit unless he has taken steps to have his transfer recognised. Thus, where, after a transfer was effected, the decree was attached at the instance of a third person, and the assignee's application for execution was dismissed wrongly, on the ground that the decree had been attached, and thereupon the assignee filed a suit for refund of the purchase money, it was held that it was his duty to have the attachment removed by presenting a claim to the attaching Court on the strength of his assignment and that unless such a claim was presented and rejected he could not succeed in the suit.[8]

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "may allow it to be amended" have been replaced by the words "may allow the defect to be remedied". The object is to make the rule clear and comprehensive so as to include cases of defects such as omission to file a copy of the decree.

2. Sub-R. (2) is new. See Note 3, infra.

2. Procedure on receiving an application for execution.—Sub-R. 1 prescribes the procedure to be followed on receiving an application for execution of a decree. It casts a duty upon the Court to ascertain whether such of the requirements of Rr. 11 to 14 as are applicable have been complied with or not. If they are not complied with the Court can either reject the application at once or allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time fixed.[1] If it does neither, it cannot, after the period of limitation for execution has expired, reject the application without giving the decree-holder an opportunity to amend the application.[2]

3. Amendment and limitation.—This rule contemplates the amendment of defects in the execution application before admission and registration. But supposing the Court overlooks the defects and registers the application, can they be subsequently amended during the pendency of the application? The answer to this depends upon the question whether the decree is or is not barred by limitation on the date of the amendment. If there is no bar of limitation, the amendment can according to the Patna High Court be allowed.[1] The reason is that a substantive fresh application can be entertained on that date, and that there is nothing which prevents the Court from treating the amended application as a fresh application for execution.[2] A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has, on the other hand, held in Asgar Ali v. Troilokyanath, I. L. R. 17 Cal. 631 (F. B.) that "section 245 by implication excludes the power of the Court to amend after admission and registration". It was held by the Patna High Court in Ram Sumran v. Ram Bahadur, I. L. R. 2 Pat. 328, that the said observations should be understood only as referring to the particular case before the Full Bench where the decree was barred on the date when the defect (viz., omission to file a list of property) was sought to be amended.

Where, however, on the date when the defect is sought to be amended the decree would be barred by limitation, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether or not an amendment can be allowed. On the one hand, the High Court of Calcutta[3] holds that no amendment is permissible on the ground that the Court is not empowered under the Rule to allow such an amendment. On the other hand, the High Court of Madras[4] holds that the Court can allow such an amendment under sub-R. 1 and that such amendment relates back to the date of the application. The reasoning of the Madras High Court is that the law casts a duty upon the Court to notice the defects in the application before admission and if the Court had done its duty properly, the defects could have been remedied within time, and that the decree-holder should not be made to suffer for the failure of the Court to do its duty. The High Courts of Allahabad,[5] Lahore[6] and Patna[7] have also in the undermentioned cases allowed the defects to be amended though the decree became barred on the date of the amendment.

Sub-R. 1 refers only to the requirements of Rr. 11 to 14. Consequently the rule does not apply where the defect in the execution application is one which has no reference to Rr. 11 to 14. The Court can, however, amend such defects under its general powers.[8] As to whether a defect by reason of non-compliance with O. 21, R. 15 can be amended under this rule see R. 15, ante.

Effect of amendment.—In the absence of any provision under the old Code corresponding to sub-R. 2, there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an amendment took effect only from the date of the amendment or from the date of the application, and whether the original application which was defective could be considered as being in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 179, Cl. 4 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (Art. 182, Cl. 5 of the present Limitation Act of 1908) so as to operate as a fresh starting point for limitation.[9] Under sub-R. 2 of this rule it is now clear that the application. though defective, when presented should be deemed to be in accordance with law when the defect is subsequently amended and the amendment dates back to the original date of the application.[10] The effect of the sub-rule is to preclude the judgment-debtor from raising any objection at a later stage on the ground that the application was not in accordance with law at the time it was presented.[11] If, however, the Court without giving an opportunity to amend rejects the application, the rejected application cannot be considered to be in accordance with law.[12]

As to whether an application returned for amendment and not represented is one in accordance with law, see Note 4 below.

4. Non-compliance with the order of amendment within the time fixed.—Sub-R. 1 empowers the Court to fix a time for the amendment of the execution application. If the party fails to amend within the time fixed or such further time as the Court may extend, the proper course is to reject the application.[1] If notwithstanding the decree-holder's failure to amend the defect within the time fixed the Court does not reject the application, it is not precluded from allowing a fresh application for amendment at a subsequent stage.[2] O.21, R.17, Notes 4—5.

If the Court returns an application for amendment of the defects, and the decree-holder does not represent it within the time fixed, the question arises whether such an application can be treated as one in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 182, Cl. 5 of the Limitation Act so as to operate as a fresh starting point for execution. The answer to this question depends upon another question namely whether the defect for the amendment of which the application was returned was a material defect, without the amendment of which, further proceedings could not be taken, or was only a formal defect.[3] In the latter case the application will be one in accordance with law[4] while in the former case it will not.[5]

Where the application is returned not for any defect in Rr. 11 to 14 but for some other defect it has been held by the Allahabad and the Patna High Courts that the application would be one in accordance with law.[6]

5. Procedure on admission of application.—Sub-R. 4 prescribes the procedure to be followed after admission of the application. If it is not in any way defective the Court is bound to order execution according to the nature of the application. Thus if the decree-holder prays for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, the Court cannot refuse the same and direct him to proceed against the property in the first instance.[1] No enquiry as to whether the property sought to be proceeded against belongs to the judgment-debtor is contemplated under the rule before execution can be ordered.[2]

6. Execution of declaratory decree.—See Note 33 to S. 47 and Note 5 to S. 38 and the following cases.[1]

7. Execution of rent decree under the Tenancy Act.—A landlord who obtains a decree for arrears of rent of an undertenure is not restricted by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act to execute the decree in the first instance by sale of the undertenure. He is at liberty to execute it in the ordinary manner against the person or property of his judgment-debtor.[1] S. 163 of the Bengal Tenancy Act VIII of 1885 and S. 217 of the Bihar and Orissa Tenancy Act II of 1913 prescribe that the Court shall, on admission of the application for execution, order the issue simultaneously of the order of attachment as well as of the proclamation for sale.

8. Execution of maintenance decree.—A decree declaring a person's right to maintenance at a certain rate and also directing the payment of such maintenance by future instalments is not a mere declaratory decree and can be executed as each instalment falls due.[1]

Where a decree awarding future maintenance also charges certain property for the due payment thereof the decree-holder can, if there is default, apply for an order for the sale of the property or file a fresh suit to enforce the charge.[2] The High Court of Calcutta[3] has held that to avoid the difficulty of a further suit the Court can provide in the decree for maintenance for the appointment of a receiver with directions to take possession of the property in case of default and sell the same and pay the maintenance from out of the sale proceeds.

9. Value of property attached.—Under the proviso to the rule the Court should call upon the decree-holder to specify the approximate value of the property to be attached, to see that the value of the property to be attached corresponded as nearly as may be with the amount due under the decree.[1] But if more property than is necessary is attached and sold and a purchaser buys the same without notice of the fact that the amount realised by sale of the other plots was more than sufficient to satisfy the decree, the sale in his favour cannot be set aside.[2] O.21, R.17, Notes 9—10.

10. Appeal.—An appeal lies against an order returning an execution application on the ground that the decree-holder is not entitled to calculate the amount due to him on the basis adopted in the petition, and directing him to amend the same.[1] But an order allowing the decree-holder to withdraw the execution proceedings does not determine anything under S. 47 and is not appealable.[2]

1. Legislative changes.—

1 The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits" in sub-R. (1) are new.

2 Sub-R. (4) is new.

3. Illustration (d) is new.

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.—This rule provides that cross-decrees for the payment of money shall be set-off against each other. In order that this rule may apply the following conditions must be satisfied:— O.21, R.18, Notes 2–3.

(1) The decrees must be for the payment of definite sums of money (infra.)

(2) They must have been passed in separate suits.[1] (Vide also Note 4 infra.)

(3) The decree-holder in one must be the judgment-debtor in the other.

(4) The parties must fill the same character in both suits (Note 6 infra).

(5) Both decrees must be capable of execution[2] and must be so at the same time and by the same Court. (Notes 7 and 8, infra.)

(6) Applications should have been made to the Court for execution of both decrees (Note 8 infra).

If the above conditions are satisfied the set-off should be worked out as follows:—

(1) If the amounts under the two decrees are equal, then the two decrees shall satisfy each other and full satisfaction shall be entered upon both.

(2) If the amounts under the two decrees are not equal, then full satisfaction shall be entered upon the decree for the smaller amount, and part-satisfaction upon the decree for the larger amount; and execution shall be allowed only under the latter decree and for so much only, as remains due after the set-off (vide Note 9 infra).

A right to set-off under this rule cannot be defeated by an assignment of either decree (vide Note 10 infra) or by its attachment by the other decree-holder,[3] or by a stranger.[4]

Where an application is made for the execution of a decree and a suit which is capable of resulting in a cross-decree of the kind contemplated by this rule is at that time pending in the Court which passed that decree, the execution may be stayed under R. 29. But if such suit is pending in any other Court, R. 29 will not apply.[5]

3. Cross-decrees for the payment of two sums of money.—The first condition for claiming a set-off under this rule is that the decrees should be for the payment of money and that the amounts under each decree should be definite and ascertained.[1] A decree directing recovery of money by sale of immoveable property is a decree for the payment of money under this rule,[2] even though it may be in enforcement of a charge.[3] But a mortgage-decree in which there is no personal liability does not fall within this rule.[4] See Notes to R. 20, infra.

A decree for mesne profits of which the amount has not been ascertained cannot be set-off under this rule as the amount is not definite.[5]

4. Cross-decrees in separate suits.—The second condition is that there must be cross-decrees and they must have been passed in separate suits. An adjudication under S. 144 of the Code is a decree to which this rule will apply.[1] But a private award is not.[2]

Cross-claims in the same suit do not fall within this rule but come under R. 19.[3]

is as against him not a decree for payment of money personally. If he had himself been the mortgagor there would have been his personal liability and the two decrees could have been set-off. The expression "same character, etc.", does not mean that the liability to pay which resulted in the decree should have been incurred by the parties themselves in both suits. Thus a decree against a widow in respect of a debt contracted by her deceased husband can be set-off against a decree obtained by the widow on a debt due to herself.[3] A decree against a firm is binding on the partners personally. It can be set-off against a decree obtained by one of the partners against the holder of the former decree.[4]

7. Decrees must be capable of execution at the same time.—It is necessary that the decrees should be capable of execution at the same time. Thus there can be no set-off if one of the decrees is only a preliminary decree[1] or if its execution is time-barred[2] or if its execution is expressly postponed till the happening of a certain contingency and the contingency has not happened.[3] But the fact that the judgment-debtor under one decree intends appealing against the decree will not make it inexecutable so as to prevent a set-off being allowed.[4]

8. Decrees must be in the same Court for execution.—Finally, applications should have been made for execution of both decrees[1] and those applications should be pending in one and the same Court either as the Court which passed the decrees or as the Court to which the decree or decrees have been transferred for execution.[2]

However, if at the time execution of one decree is sought, no application for the execution of the other decree is pending, execution of the former decree may be stayed in order to enable an application for execution of the latter decree being filed and the set-off worked out.[3]

Further, if one of the decrees expressly stipulates that execution shall not issue till the amount under the other decree is ascertained, a set-off can be ordered even though no application for execution of the latter decree may have been filed.[4]

9. Execution can be had only of the decree for the larger sum.—If the amounts due under two cross-decrees are equal, they satisfy each other. If the sums are not equal, execution of the decree for the smaller sum becomes incapable of being issued;[1] execution can only issue under the decree for the larger amount and only in respect of the balance due after the set-off.[2] This does not, however, deprive the holder of the decree for the smaller amount of any claim to priority or otherwise which he might possess.[3] Further if execution of the decree for the smaller sum does take place and properties are sold in auction, the same is not invalid.[4]

10. Assignment of the decree.—Under S. 49 of the Code, every transferee of a decree will hold the same subject to all equities which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the decree-holder. A right to set-off is one such equity and sub-R. 2 expressly recognises its enforcement against the assignee.[1]

Illustrations.

1. A holds a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B holds a decree against A for Rs. 3,000, A assigns his decree to C. B can claim a set-off to the extent of Rs. 3,000 even as against C; and C will be entitled to execute the decree only for Rs. 2,000.[2]
2. A holds a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B holds a decree against A for Rs. 6,000, A assigns his decree to C. B can claim a set-off and C will not be entitled to execute his decree for any amount.[3]

The fact that the assignment took place before the one, or the other, decree had been passed, will not affect the right to set-off, provided that the assignee had notice thereof:—

Illustrations.

1. A, who held a decree against B assigns it to C. Before the assignment B had filed a suit against A, and the suit results in a decree. B can set-off the decree even as against C.[4]
2. A holds a decree against B. B who had filed a suit against A assigns his interest in the suit to C. The suit is decreed. A can set-off his decree as against the decree in favour of C.[5] to prevent each side taking out execution in respect of sums due under the same decree.[2] It is, however, not necessary that the remedy of each party against the other should be identical. In an old Allahabad case it was held that a set-off cannot be ordered unless the parties had identical rights of execution in respect of their claims.[3] This is no longer good law and it is now well settled that a set-off under this rule will be ordered even though the remedy of each party against the other is not precisely of the same nature.[4] Thus costs awarded can be set-off against—

(1) Money directed to be realised by sale of hypothecated property[5] or against redemption amount awarded by the decree.[6]

(2) Against mesne profits decreed.[7]

(3) Against pre-emption amount to be deposited under the decree.[8] But in pre-emption suits under Ss. 14 and 15 of the Oudh Laws Act the purchase money must be deposited; else, the right is lost. In such suits it has been held that the costs cannot be set-off against the pre-emption amount.[9]

"By S. 265 (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), this rule has been made applicable to execution of decrees under that Act, subject to the other provisions of the Act; and the rules that may be made under sub-S. (1).

claim for larger amount should be allowed only to the extent of the difference.[2] The Court should first ascertain the amounts due, enter satisfaction in respect of the claim for the smaller amount and enforce execution for the balance of the amount due under the larger claim.[3] Since the two claims form a single indivisible decree, and only enforceable for the difference, the fact that one of the claims is barred by limitation, does not alter the position.[4] O.21, R.19, Notes 3—4.

If in executing the decree for the larger claim, no deduction is made for the amount due under the smaller claim, and the claim is executed in full, the Court may order refund of the excess under S. 151.[5]

4. Set-off of costs.—From the illustrations given in Note 1, supra it is seen that an award of costs is a claim to "recover money" within the meaning of this rule. Thus costs awarded to one party in a suit may be set-off either against costs awarded to the other party in the suit[1] or against other sums awarded to the latter party.[2] Such costs, should, however, have been actually awarded.[3]

When costs have been awarded on interlocutory matters in the same suit between the same parties and against each other, they will be deemed to be incorporated in and to form part of, the final decree in the suit and will therefore be set-off against each other under this rule.[4]

Simultaneous execution.

[1877—Ss. 230, 231. See S. 51 and O. 21, R. 30.]

Synopsis.

1. Simultaneous execution.
2. Appeal.

Applicability to O. 38. See Note 1, F.-N. (1).

No power to direct mode of execution. See Note 1, Pts. (5) and (2).

1. Simultaneous execution.—Rule 30 entitles the decree-holder to execute his decree against the person, or the property, or both, of the judgment-debtor. But the power to order execution against the person and property simultaneously is within the discretion of the Court,[1] and this rule provides that such simultaneous execution may be refused.

In exercising the discretion under this Rule, regard must be had to the principle that the decree-holder has a right to realise the fruits of his decree in any manner allowed by law and therefore the refusal of simultaneous execution should be an exception rather than the rule.[2]

If the judgment-debtor is evading payment, his arrest can be ordered even though his properties might have been attached under the same decree.[3] But if there is no fraud or mala fides on his part, simultaneous execution may be refused.[4]

This rule, however, does not empower the Court to pin the decree-holder down to any particular mode of execution or refuse one mode of execution, on the ground that he had not sought the other in the first

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "of any decree passed on appeal from the decree sought to be executed or" which occurred in the proviso to the old S. 248 have been omitted as being unnecessary, as the decree to be executed in such cases will be the appellate decree.[1]

2. The explanation contained in the old section has also been omitted in view of the definition of "Court" given in S. 37.[2]

3. Sub-Rule (2) is new. Vide Note 16, infra.

2. Scope and object of the rule.—The object of the notice required to be given under this rule is not only to furnish an opportunity to the person concerned to urge any objection he may have to the maintainability of the execution application, but also to prevent his being taken by surprise and to enable him to satisfy the decree before execution is issued against him.[1] The rule is imperative and notice shall be issued—

(1) where the application is made one year after the date of the decree, and

(2) where it is made against the legal representatives of a party to the decree.[2]

An amendment, after one year, of an application for execution made within one year, does not render the application one made after one year for the purposes of this rule.[3] The necessity for notice in an application for execution against the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor is not confined to cases where execution is taken out against them in the first instance; it equally applies to cases where execution had been previously taken against the judgment-debtor himself and, on his death, the execution is sought to be taken out against the legal representatives.[4]

A notice under this rule may be issued by the Court executing a transferred decree, while a notice under O. 21, R. 16 should be given only by the Court which passed the decree.[5]

The issue of a notice under this rule to the guardian of a minor judgment-debtor raises no presumption that he has been appointed guardian by implication by the Court.[6]

The rule does not apply to summary proceedings like those contained in S. 111 of the Madras Estates Land Act.[7]

3. "Shall issue notice."—The provisions of this rule are mandatory[1] and the issue of the notice is a condition precedent to the validity of the execution proceedings.[2] It is the duty of the Court to issue the notice whether the decree-holder has asked for it or not[3] and the failure to do so will render the proceedings null and void.[4] See Note 5, infra.

The Rule is, however, sufficiently complied with if notice has been given to all persons interested and the fact that some of them were minors for whom guardians had not been appointed will not invalidate the execution proceedings if the others sufficiently represented them.[5]

A minor who attained majority pending execution proceedings is not entitled, on that ground, to a fresh notice under this rule.[6]

A notice under the rule should be to specifically show cause why the decree should not be executed.[7] O.21, R.22, Notes 3—5.

4. Proof of notice.—Where an execution is impeached on the ground of want of notice under the rule, the onus of proving the want of notice will be on the party setting it up.[1] The reason is that the issue of a notice under the rule being the duty of Court, it will be presumed that the Court has done all that it was legally bound to do. In this connection an entry on the order sheet[2] or a report of the Nazir[3] to the effect that notice has been served will be prima facie evidence of the service of notice.

5. Effect of omission to give notice.—Before the date of the Privy Council decision in Malkarjun v. Narhari,[1] it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta that a sale in execution without giving the notice required by this rule was absolutely void and without jurisdiction.[2] The High Court of Madras, on the other hand, held that the absence of notice was only a material irregularity and that the sale was only voidable, and not void.[3] In this state of conflict of authority the Privy Council decided the case of Malkarjun v. Narhari.[4] There, a judgment-debtor having died, the decree was executed against his estate. A notice under the rule was issued and served on a person as the legal representative of the judgment-debtor. He appeared and objected that he was not the legal representative. The Court, however, decided that he was the legal representative and proceeded with the execution. The properties of the judgment-debtor were sold in Court auction. It was ultimately found that the person to whom the notice was sent was not the proper legal representative. The question before the Privy Council was whether the sale was, under the circumstances, void for want of jurisdiction or only voidable on the ground of material irregularity. Their Lordships decided that the Court had jurisdiction to decide whether a person was a legal representative of a party or not, that having decided it in a particular manner, the decision cannot be said to be without jurisdiction, that the case was only one of material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction and that the sale was, therefore, not void.

Notwithstanding the above points of distinction the decision came to be regarded in India as one equally applying to a total omission to issue notice and as laying down the law that, even in the absence altogether of any notice there was only a material irregularity and not a want of jurisdiction and that the sale was voidable and not void. Accordingly, the Calcutta High Court changed its original view and held that an omission to give notice under the rule was only a material irregularity rendering the execution-sale voidable.[5] The Allahabad and Madras High Courts also began to hold the same view.[5-a] This view held the field till the Privy Council had occasion to clarify the whole position, in Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das.[6] In that case, the judgment-debtor having become insolvent, his properties had vested in the Official Assignee. When the decree-holder took out execution a notice was issued to the Official Assignee to show cause why he should not be substituted for the debtor but there was no notice to show cause why the decree should not be executed. It was, therefore, a case of omission to issue notice under the rule. The execution proceeded and the properties of the debtor were sold in Court auction. The question before the Privy Council was whether the sale was void or only voidable. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a notice under the rule was necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property, that the notice to show cause against substitution was not enough and that the sale was, therefore, void and the purchaser obtained no title. Their Lordships pointed out—

(1) that in Malkarjun's case a notice having been issued and served, though on a wrong person, the Court had acquired jurisdiction to deal with the matter;

(2) that the Court in deciding upon a wrong person as the legal representative nevertheless acted with jurisdiction;

(3) that in so deciding erroneously, the Court acted only with material irregularity and not without jurisdiction.

Since the said decision in Raghunath Das's case, all the High Courts[7] except the Madras High Court veered round to their old view, viz., that the sale was without jurisdiction and therefore void. The Madras High Court, however, still continued to hold that the sale was only voidable and not void[8] distinguishing Raghunath Das's case on the ground that it was a case under the old Code which contained no provision similar to that contained in the present sub-R. (2); and that in view of the recognition in the present sub-R. (2) of the Court's discretion in the matter of issuing notice there was no longer any question of want of jurisdiction.[9] The matter, however, came up before a Full Bench of the same Court which finally laid down that a sale held under the circumstances mentioned above was void for want of jurisdiction and not merely voidable.[10]

Thus it may now be taken as well settled that in cases of a total omission to issue a notice under the rule the sale is absolutely void and not merely voidable. It is immaterial whether the property sold is immoveable or movable.[11] Nor is it material whether the purchaser is the decree-holder himself[12] or a stranger.[13]

However, the only object of the rule is to give the person concerned an opportunity to show cause against execution. Consequently, if, though no notice is served, he appears and contests the application[14] or if he was served with a notice under R. 66 and was thus aware of the application pending against him[15] the object of the rule is achieved and the proceedings are valid. It has been held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh that the omission to issue notice under this rule does not render the sale in execution of a mortgage decree void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction to sell the property is derived from the decree itself and not by reason of the notice.[16]

6. Notice to wrong person.—In Malkarjun v. Narhari[1] their Lordships of the Privy Council held that if a notice is, as a fact, issued but served on a wrong person and, on the objection of the latter, the Court decides that he is the right legal representative, it acts only in the exercise of jurisdiction and the sale is only voidable. In such cases the proper legal representatives are equally bound by the execution proceedings though they were not parties thereto.[2] But if the decree-holder was aware of the proper legal representatives and deliberately gets notice served on a wrong person and there is no adjudication by the Court as to who is the legal representative, the sale will be void.[3]

7. Irregular service of notice.—The notice issued under this rule must be in accordance with law and must satisfy the requirements laid down in sub-R. (1).[1] Thus a day must be specified for the appearance of the person to whom the notice is issued[2] allowing sufficient time to enable him to come and oppose the application[3] and the notice must be signed by the Judge or other officer.[4]

But an irregularity in the service of notice is quite different from an omission to issue notice. It will not make the subsequent proceedings void.[5] The judgment-debtor or the legal representative will not be precluded from setting up his defence of objections at a later stage.[6] The irregularity may also furnish a ground for avoiding a sale under R. 90.[7]

8. Objection as to notice when may be taken.—Since the question of the issue of notice is one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court, an objection that no notice was issued is entertainable at any time even in appeal[1] but not, if it is likely to take the other side by surprise.[2]

But an irregular or insufficient service of such notice is only an irregularity and an objection based on the ground of non-service or insufficient service should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity.[3]

9. More than one notice, if contemplated by the rule.—The provisions of the rule as to notice is not confined to the first execution application. It extends to every subsequent application also.[1] The only exception in the latter case is that contained in the proviso,[2] viz.:—

> (1) If on a prior execution application an order has been passed against the judgment-debtor, no notice will be necessary on a subsequent execution application presented within one year after that order though more than one year might have elapsed from the date of the decree.[3]
> (2) If on a prior execution application execution has been ordered to issue against the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor, no notice will be necessary for an execution application presented within one year of that order though more than one year might have elapsed from the date of the decree.

Consequently, if the subsequent execution application is presented more than one year after such last order, notice is necessary.[4] It is, however, unnecessary that the order should be a subsisting one.[5]

But the rule will apply only to a fresh application for execution. Where the proceedings are but a continuation of a prior execution case, no notice of such proceedings is necessary.[6] Acting on this principle the High Court of Madras has held that where properties have been attached in a prior execution application and the application has been dismissed leaving the attachment substing, a subsequent application for sale of the property will not require a notice under this rule.[7]

10. Remedy when property has been sold without notice under this rule.—When a sale is held without the issue of a notice under this rule, the party aggrieved will be entitled to have the sale declared void and will be further entitled to claim damages.[1] This he may do by means of an application under S. 47.[2] See Note 61 to S. 47. As to the period of limitation for such applications, see Note 88 to S. 47 and the undermentioned cases.[3]

11. Date of the decree.—The period of one year is to be computed from the date of the decree capable of execution. Thus, if the decree of the first Court is affirmed or modified in appeal, the date of the decree is the date of the appellate decree. But if the appeal is dismissed for default, the date of the decree is that of the decree appealed against.[1]

Where a decree provides for the payment of money in instalments, the period of one year should be computed from the date of the decree and not from the date of default in payment of the instalment.[2]

12. Notice when not necessary.—The principle underlying the mandatory provision of the rule is that the interests which would be affected by the execution should be sufficiently represented and that an opportunity should be given for showing cause, if any, against the execution. A notice should, therefore, be insisted on only to the extent necessary for that purpose. Therefore, in cases falling under cl. (a) of sub-R. 1, no notice need be issued to a judgment-debtor who has no interest in the property against which execution is sought.[1] And in cases falling under clause (b) of sub-R. 1, it is enough if notice has gone to an adult legal representative capable of representing the estate, notice to the other legal representatives is not essential.[2] Nor is any notice essential where the legal representative is already a party on the record though in another capacity.[3]

13. Notice and Limitation.—By virtue of Cl. 5 of column 3 of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act of 1908, a notice issued under this rule will be a step-in-aid of execution in the case of decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts. For this purpose it is not necessary that the application on which the notice was issued should be a bona fide application.[1] Nor is it material that the application was defective or irregular.[2] Or that it was not actually served.[2-a] But it is necessary that the notice should have been issued on an application which was not time-barred.[3] On the question as to the date from which the period of three years is to be computed there was a conflict of views under the Limitation Act of 1877, the High Courts of Allahabad[4] and Bombay[5] holding that time should be computed from the date when the Court ordered the notice to issue, the Calcutta and Madras High Courts holding, that it should be computed only from the date when the notice was actually issued.[6] The word "issuing" which occurred in Cl. (6) of Art. 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 corresponding to Art. 182, cl. (6) was changed into the word "issue" in the Act of 1908 and it was held by the High Court of Bombay that the effect of the change was to give effect to the Calcutta and Madras view.[7] Under the Act of 1908 it was held by all the High Courts except the High Court of Allahabad and by the Chief Court of Oudh that it is the date of the issue of the notice, that is the starting point of limitation.[8] The Allahabad High Court, and, following it, the Oudh Chief Court were, however, of opinion that the new Act did not make any change in the law. They therefore held the same view as that of the Allahabad High Court before the Act of 1908.[9]

The Limitation Act of 1908, Art. 182, has now been amended by Act IX of 1927 by which clauses 5 and 6 of the Article has been amended and substituted as follows:—

Cl. 5. "(Where the application next hereinafter mentioned has been made) the date of the final order passed on an application made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution, or to take such some step-in-aid of execution of the decree or order, or".

Cl. 6 "(In respect of any amount recovered by execution of the decree or order, which the decree-holder has been directed to refund) the date of the last-mentioned decree, or, in the case of an appeal therefrom, the date of the final decree of the appellate Court or of the withdrawal of the appeal".

Under the present Act, as amended, therefore, the time is to be computed from the date of the final order passed on such an application. Where no notice has been issued at all a mere order for issuing notice will not, however, be a step-in-aid of execution.[10]

In respect of decrees of Chartered High Courts the limitation for execution is prescribed in Art. 183 of the Limitation Act. The said article makes no specific mention of a notice under this rule, but it contains a provision that such decrees may be executed within 12 years from the date when they have been "revived". The term "Revivor" has nowhere been defined. It was introduced on the basis of the English Common Law Practice (which prevailed in the Supreme Courts of India) under which, if a writ of execution was not served out within a year and a day it was necessary to revive the decree by a process known as Scire Facias. Till then the decree will be in a "dormant" condition. It will have to be "revived" so as to be made executable. The "revivor" therefore, consists in getting a declaration recorded that execution is intended to be enforced under the decree.

The question, therefore, is whether a notice under this rule will operate as a "revivor". In this connection it has been held that an order for execution made after the issue of a notice under this rule will operate as a revivor.[11] It is important to note that to constitute a revivor the following three conditions must be satisfied, viz.:—

(1) There must be an application for execution. An application for transmission of decree is not enough.[12]

(2) There must be an order for execution passed on the application. The mere fact that an application has been made and notice has been issued to the judgment-debtor is not enough.[13]

(3) The said order for execution should have been passed after the issue of a notice under this rule.[14] If there were several judgment-debtors and notice under this rule was issued to only one or some of them there will be a revivor only against them and not against the other judgment-debtors.[15] O.21, R.22, Notes 13—16.

14. Court executing the decree.—The rule provides that the notice shall be issued by "the Court executing the decree." The expression will include the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution. In cases, therefore, where the decree is transferred for execution, the transferee Court can, and in fact is, the only Court competent to issue the notice.[1]

But an application to execute against the legal representatives has to be made to the Court which passed the decree.[2] In such cases, therefore, the application will be made to the Court which passed the decree but notice under the rule will be issued by the transferee Court.[3]

15. Revivor of decree by notice to one judgment-debtor.—Vide under Note 13. supra.

16. Sub-R. 2.—The mandatory character of the rule is not in any way abrogated by sub-R. (2).[1] The sub-rule only gives a discretion to the Court to dispense with the notice under certain circumstances. If such notice is dispensed with, the reasons should be recorded.[2] The Rangoon High Court is of opinion that the omission to record reasons is not a mere irregularity but a defect which goes to the very root of the proceedings and renders them void for want of jurisdiction.[3] The Bombay,[4] Calcutta,[5] Madras[6] and Oudh[7] Courts have, however, held that such omission will be a mere irregularity and that the proceedings will not be totally invalid merely by reason of the omission.

1. Scope of the rule.—If the person to whom notice has issued under R. 22, does not appear and show cause against execution, the Court is bound to order execution. Thereupon the person will be concluded and bound by the order and cannot go behind it.[1] If, however, the execution application is subsequently dismissed under R. 57 of this order, the dismissal has been held to have the effect of vacating the previous order for execution.[2]

Such objections should, however, go to the root of the executability of the decree,[3] and not merely formal or immaterial ones which do not prevent execution.[4] For, apart from considering whether the decree is executable or not, the executing Court cannot go behind the decree. See S. 38, Note 8.

In the absence of any such cause, the Court cannot refuse issue of process.[2] The fact that a previous execution application proved infructuous will not justify such a refusal.[3] invalid and its execution illegal.[1] Resistance to the execution of such a process will therefore constitute no offence.[2] O.21, R.24, Notes 2—6.

3. Delegation of authority to execute, if can be made.—The rule only says that the process shall be delivered to the proper officer to be executed. It is not necessary that the "proper officer" should himself execute the process,[1] and there is nothing to prevent his delegating a subordinate of his to execute the process.[2] But a process issued to a bailiff cannot be executed by a Nazir.[3]

4. "Arrest or attachment without warrant."—An officer effecting an arrest or attachment should have the warrant in his possession, otherwise the arrest[1] or attachment[2] will be illegal.

5. Shall be signed.—A process issued under this rule which is not signed by the judge is illegal.[1] If, however, any other officer of the Court is specially authorised in this behalf it is enough if it is signed by him.[2] Such authority should be in writing and kept in the Court.[3] If, however, such process is signed by a sheristadar "by order" the presumption will be that he was authorised in this behalf,[4] and the onus of showing that he had no such authority will be on the party who denies the authority.[5]

6. "A day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed".—A warrant which does not specify the date on or before which it is to be executed is invalid and its execution is illegal.[1]

If such date is specified the process should be executed on or before that date; its execution later is illegal.[2]

If the time has been extended, the extended date should be specified; otherwise the execution of the process will again be illegal.[3]

ALLAHABAD.

Substitute the following for paragraph (2) in Rule 25:—

(2) Where the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the process, the Court may examine him personally or upon affidavit touching his alleged inability, and may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability and shall record the result.

MADRAS.

Amendment to Order 21, Rule 25 (2) of Schedule I:—

Insert the words "or cause him to be examined by any other Court" after the words "examine him".

Add the following proviso to Clause 2 of Rule 25 of Order 21, Schedule I:—

"Provided that an examination of the officer entrusted with the execution of a process by the Nazir or the Deputy Nazir under the general or special orders of the Court shall be deemed to be sufficient compliance with the requirements of this clause."

OUDH.

For the existing Rule 25 (2), substitute the following:—

"(2) Where the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the process, the Court may examine him personally or upon affidavit touching his alleged inability, and may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability, and shall record the result."

1. Scope of the rule.—Under S. 42 ante the Court executing a decree sent to it has the same powers in executing such a decree as if the decree had been passed by itself. But such Court cannot question the legality of the order under which the decree was sent to it for execution nor can it decide the question whether the decree was barred by limitation on the date of the order. See S. 42, Note 1, ante.

Such question can properly be dealt with only by the Court which passed the decree and, therefore, to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to such Court for an order in respect of the decree for execution thereof, the Court to which a decree is sent for execution may order stay of execution under this rule.[1]

Thus the executing Court may order stay of execution:—

(i) To enable the judgment-debtor to get the decree amended;[2]

(ii) to enable him to show that the decree is satisfied,[3] or is not existing;[3-a]

(iv) to enable him to get the decree passed against him set aside on the ground that it was obtained by fraud[5]

(v) for deciding if the decree is barred[6].

An order for stay of execution under this rule can only be passed on the application of the judgment-debtor and no stay can be granted on the application of third parties or of the decree-holder.[7]

Under sub-R. (3) of this rule, the Court may impose conditions or require security, as it thinks fit, before directing stay of execution.[8]

Under S. 265 (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act VI of 1908 the provisions of the Code relating to stay of execution apply to proceedings referred to in that section.

2. Appeal.—See "Stay of execution". Note 44 to S. 47 ante.

An order directing security under sub-R. (3) is not an order determining the rights of parties and is not therefore appealable as a decree under Ss. 47 and 96.[1]

O.21, R.29, Notes 1—2.

1. Scope of the rule.—If a suit by a judgment-debtor is pending in a Court against the holder of a decree of that Court, the execution of the decree may, under this rule, be stayed until the disposal of the suit.[1] The object of this rule is twofold:—

(i) To enable the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder to adjust their claims against each other, and

(ii) to prevent a multiplicity of execution proceedings.[2]

But the execution Court has no power, under this rule, to stay execution of the decree if, at that time, no suit is pending against the holder of the decree[3] or if the suit is against the decree-holder, but filed by third parties.[4]

If the execution of the decree has been carried out and the decree-holder has obtained possession of the property, the Court has no power under this rule to order restitution of such property.[5]

The mere pendency of a suit in which the decree-holder is a party is not a ground for stay of execution; such stay can be granted only on sufficient grounds being made out.[6] Thus the pendency of a suit for administration of the estate of the mortgagor is no ground for the stay of execution of the mortgage decree.[7] It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that if the suit against the decree-holder is for a declaration that the decree is satisfied by an uncertified adjustment out of Court, no stay of execution of the decree can be granted under this rule.[8]

2. "Such Court."—The Court in which the suit is pending has power to stay execution of the decree under this rule, only if the decree is a decree of that Court.[1] Such power can be exercised by it even if the decree has been transferred for execution to another Court,[1-a] But if the judgment-debtor's suit is pending before the transferee Court, that Court has no power, under this rule, to stay execution of the decree.[2]

The words "decree of such Court" include also the decree passed on appeal from the decree of that Court.[3] See S. 37 ante.

O.21, R.29, Notes 2—6.

The words "such Court" refer only to the Court and not to the judge presiding over the Court. Where there are two judges attached to the Court, and the suit is pending before one judge and the decree is sought to be executed before the other, the judge before whom the suit is pending, has power under this rule to stay execution of the decree.[4]

3. "Until the pending suit has been decided."—The Calcutta High Court has held in the undermentioned case[1] that these words should be interpreted to mean "until the claim in the pending suit has been finally decided after an exhaustion of all rights of appeal and not merely after a decree has been passed by the Court in which the suit is pending." But this view has been dissented from in a recent Calcutta case[2] approving of an earlier view of the Punjab Chief Court,[3] wherein it was held that the Court may stay execution, pending appeal, under its inherent powers though not under this rule.

4. Execution of award if can be stayed under this rule.—An award filed into Court under S. 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act of 1899 is enforceable as a decree of the Court under S. 15 of that Act. But S. 15 does not enact that the award, when filed, is to be deemed to be a decree of the Court.[1] Nor does it give any "power to turn such an award into a judgment".[2] Therefore, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the provisions of this rule cannot apply to stay execution of an award.[3] The Calcutta High Court has held that the words "enforceable as a decree" mean that all the provisions relating to execution of decrees such as O. 21, R. 16 (transfer of decrees)[4] and O. 21, R. 50 (execution by or against firms[5]) are applicable to the execution of awards as well.

5. Inherent power to stay execution.—See Note 3 supra.

6. Appeal.—See Note 44 to S. 47, supra. An order directing security, to be given is not appealable as it does not determine conclusively the rights of the parties; but the High Court may, if the discretion is not judicially exercised. interfere in revision.[1]

1. Scope of the rule.—The words "every decree for the payment of money" have been substituted for the words "every decree or order directing a party to pay money" which occurred in S. 254 of the old Code. It was held under the old Code that an order directing a party to refund money wrongly drawn out by him in land acquisition proceedings, could be enforced under that section.[1] The same procedure will apply under this Code in view of the provisions of S. 36, ante.

Under clauses (4) and (5) of S. 36 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909, the Insolvency Court is authorised to order payment of money or delivery of property by strangers to the official assignee where their liability to the insolvent is established on enquiry. Clause 6 of S. 36 of that Act enacts that such orders shall be executed in the same manner as decrees for the payment of money or for the delivery of property under the Civil Procedure Code.

2. Decree for the payment of money.—A decree under which maintenance is payable periodically at a certain rate is a decree for money.[1]

See also Note 6 to S. 73.

3. As an alternative to some other relief.—See Notes to O. 20, R. 10.

4. Option as to mode of execution.—It is for the decree-holder to decide how he should execute his decree for the payment of money, whether by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, or by attachment and sale of his property. While the Court has discretion to refuse execution against the person and property simultaneously under R. 21, supra, it cannot compel the decree-holder to adopt any particular mode of execution.[1] A decree for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act is a decree "for the payment of money" and the decree-holder has the right to ask for personal execution against the judgment-debtor, notwithstanding that he has also the right to sell the tenure in arrears.[2]

5. Detention in civil prison.—See Note 14 to S. 145.

6. Attachment and sale.—The words "attachment and sale" in this rule must be taken together and not distributively. Therefore, an attachment is a necessary preliminary to a sale.[1] As to what property can be attached, see S. 60 and as to whether absence of attachment is a material irregularity or not, see notes to R. 90, infra.

This rule applies only to cases of decrees for money which do not affect any specific immoveable property. Thus, where a consent decree provided that if a certain sum of money is not paid by a certain date, some specific immoveable property should be sold, no attachment is necessary under this rule.[2]

See also Note 4 to S. 60.

7. Rule not exhaustive of modes of execution.—The words "may be executed" in this rule show that it does not purport to be exhaustive of the modes of execution of money decrees. See also O. 21, R. 11. Therefore, rateable distribution of assets is a mode of execution of a decree for the payment of money.[1] Though S. 51 prescribes the appointment of a receiver as one of the modes of execution, nothing is mentioned about it in this rule, since the subject is dealt with in O. 40 infra.[2] Execution of a money decree by ejectment of a tenant is a method provided by S. 61 of the Oudh Rent Act in addition to the modes prescribed by this Code.[3]

Synopsis.

1. Legislative changes.
2. Scope of the rule.
3. Decree for specific moveable property.
4. Seizure of property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor.
5. Alternative damages—Sub-Rule (2).

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "or for the recovery of a wife" which occurred in S. 259 of the old Code after the words "share in a specific moveable" have been omitted in this rule. The reason is that the wife is not a chattel and cannot, therefore, be delivered to her husband. See Notes to R. 33, infra.

2. Scope of the rule.—This rule does not apply to a case where the property sought to be seized is not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, but in the custody of a third party.[1] The words "specific moveable" in this rule do not include money and therefore a decree for money cannot be executed under the provisions of this rule.[2]

In order to enable a person to obtain delivery of specific moveable property by suit and to enforce the decree by the stringent methods prescribed in this rule, the plaintiff must allege and prove facts which give him a right to compel the delivery of the specific moveables under S. 11 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877).[3]

An order under S. 36, Cl. (5) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909) for delivery of any property be executed in the manner specified in this section.

3. Decree for specific moveable property.—A decree for possession of three-fourths of a person's estate consisting of moveable and immoveable property is a decree that can be executed under this rule so far as the moveable property is concerned.[1]

4. Seizure of property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor.—It has been held in the undermentioned case[1] that R. 58, infra is applicable not only to attachments in execution of money decrees, but also to seizures under this rule.

5. Alternative damages—Sub-R. 2.—O. 20, R. 10 provides that the decree, in a suit for moveable property, should state a certain amount of money as an alternative, if delivery of the chattel in dispute cannot be had. This rule provides that if the goods are capable of delivery they must be delivered and that if they are not, then the assessed damages should be paid.[1] Where a decree is passed as provided by O. 20, R. 10 the decree-holder cannot execute

Illustration.

A, a person of little substance, erects a building which renders un-inhabitable a family mansion belonging to B. A in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property, declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building. The Court is of opinion that no sum realizable by the sale of A's property would adequately compensate B for the depreciation in the value of his mansion. B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution-proceedings.

3. In sub-Rule (3), the word "shall" has been substituted for the word "may".
4. The words "or if made has been refused" are new.

Amendment after 1903.

The words "in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights specific performance of a contract or for an injunction" have been newly inserted by Act XXIX of 1923. See Note 4, infra.

2. Scope of the rule.—A decree which does not contain any direction to the defendant to do or to refrain from doing any act, but is merely a declaratory one cannot be executed under this rule.[1]

3. Decree for specific performance.—As to the cases in which specific performance can be decreed see Ss. 12 to 30 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). In a suit for specific performance of a contract of sale, the passing of the decree and the payment of money, if any, transfers the ownership.[1] It has been held by the High Court of Patna that the Court executing a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale is competent to grant possession of the property to the decree-holder even though no relief for possession was either asked for in the plaint or awarded by the decree.[2] See also O. 2, R. 2, N. 16, supra.

4. Restitution of conjugal rights.—A decree for the restitution of conjugal rights passed under the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865) is not executable under this rule, since S. 36 of that Act provides a remedy in substitution of the remedy under this rule.[1] But such a decree between Hindus or Mahammedans can be enforced under this rule.[2]

A wife is not a chattel and cannot, therefore, be delivered as such in execution under the previous rule or this rule.[3] A suit for recovery of a wife must, therefore, be treated as a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights.[4] It was held in the undermentioned cases[5] that where a wife disobeyed a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights passed against her, the decree could be enforced by her imprisonment or by the attachment of her property or by both. But since the amendment of this rule by Act XXIX of 1923 referred to in Note 1 ante such a decree can be enforced only by the attachment of the defendant's Property. See also Notes to R. 33, infra.

5. Form of decree for restitution of conjugal rights.—In a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights against the wife and other defendants who prevent her from going to her husband, the decree should declare the husband's right and direct that the other defendants to refrain from preventing the plaintiff's wife from returning to him.[1] Where they do not obey the decree, execution can proceed against them under this rule.[2]

Where, in a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights, the plaintiff's mother-in-law who was impleaded as a defendant in the suit, was directed to refrain from preventing the plaintiff's wife from returning to him, it was held that her action in merely permitting her daughter, who was of age, to reside in her home after decree, did not justify the attachment of her property under this rule.[3]

6. Decree for injunction.—This rule applies to cases where a party is directed to do some act, as well as to cases where he is directed to abstain from doing an Act.[1] The High Court of Madras has expressed an obiter dictum in the undermentioned case[2] that an interim injunction may be enforced under this rule read with S. 36, ante.

As to whether a decree for injunction can be executed against vendees from the defendant and against the legal representatives of a deceased defendant see Note 18 to S. 50, ante.

Under the old Code it was held that disobedience to an order directing the defendant to render accounts within a particular time was disobedience to an order "requiring the performance of a particular act" within the meaning of S. 260 and consequently was punishable under that section.[3] But under the present rule those words have been omitted and an order requiring the defendant to furnish accounts is not an injunction within the meaning of this rule and therefore, the disobedience of that order cannot be dealt with under this rule.[4]

7. Opportunity of obeying the decree.—Before allowing execution under this rule against a judgment-debtor, the Court should see if he has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and whether he has wilfully failed to obey it.[1] If he has had such an opportunity, then execution may issue against him without giving him a further opportunity to obey the decree and the Court is not bound to issue notice calling upon him to obey the decree.[2]

Where an application for enforcing a decree under this rule has been dismissed on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no opportunity of obeying the decree, a second application after such opportunity has been given is not barred.[3]

8. Sale of property—Sub-Rule (3).—This rule is a highly penal one and must be construed strictly. When a sale is ordered under sub-R. (3) the following three conditions must exist:

(a) a valid original attachment,

(b) application, within one year of the attachment, by the decree-holder, and

(c) lapse of one year from date of attachment.[1]

Thus where an order of attachment was made on 27-6-1908 and was carried out on 20-7-1908 and no application for sale was made before 20-7-1909, it was held that the attachment ceased to exist and the order for sale was, therefore, set aside.[2] A sale held under sub-R. (3) cannot be set aside under O. 21, R. 89, sub-R. (1) even where the execution of the decree under which the sale took place is restrained by an injunction granted subsequent to the sale in a separate suit.[3]

9. Disobedience of order for injunction or specific performance.—Where a defendant has wilfully failed to obey a decree for injunction or for specific performance passed against him, the decree may be enforced by his detention in the civil prison or by the attachment of his property or by both.[1]

O.21, R.32, Note 9.

But the Court has no power to order the defendant to execute a security bond for obeying the decree.[2]

Where a decree requires the plaintiff to do certain acts necessary for the enjoyment of his property and restrains the defendant from interfering with it, the defendant is bound to give the plaintiff reasonable facilities for doing it and the refusal to do so can be punished under this rule.[3]

Under the old Code, a Court, in executing a decree which directs a defendant to do a particular act, had no power to have the thing done by an officer of the Court, when the defendant failed to obey the decree, inasmuch as it was not one of the modes of execution prescribed by S. 260.[4] But now under sub-R. 5 of this rule the Court has got the power to direct the act to be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or by some other person appointed by the Court at the expense of the judgment-debtor.[5] The Court is, however, not justified in ordering the police to interfere in the matter, or in appointing a commissioner to see that the decree-holder performs without obstruction the acts required to be done.[6]

Where, after a decree for injunction has been passed, the defendant does not obey it, the plaintiff's remedy is by execution under this rule and not by a separate suit.[7] The reason is that a separate suit would be barred by S. 47.

The words "the act required to be done" in sub-R. (5) mean the act that has to be done to enforce the injunction granted by the decree.[8] Thus, where a decree directs a wall to be demolished as being an obstruction to a right of way and is so demolished in execution of the decree, but the judgment-debtor erects another wall at a different place obstructing the right of way, the remedy of the decree-holder is a fresh suit for injunction.[9]

10. Effect of procedure under this rule.—The provisions of this rule are intended to punish the defendant for disobedience of the decree and are not intended to be a satisfaction of the decree so as to prevent the decree-holder from taking further steps. Thus, where a decree for possession of a certain plot of land and for the demolition of a house situate thereon, was passed, and the decree-holder had received some compensation under this rule by the attachment and sale of the house on the land, it was held that he could still enforce his right to the possession of the property.[1]

11. Limitation.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that disobedience to an injunction is a contempt of Court and can be punished, therefore, at any time and that the provisions of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application to enforce the order under this rule.[1] But the High Court of Madras has held that Art. 182 cannot apply from the very nature of the provisions therein but that the decree-holder may enforce his decree by an application made within three years of each successive breach of the injunction and that the application is governed by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act.[2] The decree-holder, however, is not obliged to take action in regard to every petty infringement on pain of allowing the decree to become inoperative after three years and depriving him of the fruits of his decree, if a serious infringement of it were afterwards made.[3] The Chief Court of Lower Burma has, on the other hand, held that the application to enforce the decree under this rule is governed by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[4]

Synopsis.

1. Amendments after 1908. 2. Scope of the rule.

Decree disallowing imprisonment—High Court whether will interfere. See note 2, F.-N. (1).

1. Amendments after 1908.—(1) The words "against a husband" in sub-R. (1) after the words "passing a decree" have been newly inserted by Act 29 of 1923.

(2) By the same amending act the words "shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule" have been substituted for the words "shall not be executed by detention in prison."

(3) The words "and the decree-holder is the wife" after the words "under sub-R. (1)" occurring in sub-R. (2) have been omitted by Act XXIX of 1923, because the rule as amended applies only to cases of decrees against husbands.

2. Scope of the rule.—Before the amendment of this rule by Act XXIX of 1923 it was held that the tendency of modern legislation is against sending women to jail in civil matters and therefore, ordinarily, a Court passing a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights against a wife, should direct, in the exercise of its discretion under this rule that the decree shall not be executed by the detention of the wife in civil prison.[1] In view of the amendment of R. 32 ante under Act XXIX of 1923 a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights can no longer be executed by imprisonment, whether the decree be against the husband or the wife. See Note 1 to R. 32, ante.

(2) The Court shall thereupon cause the draft to be served on the judgment-debtor together with a notice requiring his objections (if any) to be made within such time as the Court fixes in this behalf.

(3) Where the judgment-debtor objects to the draft, his objections shall be stated in writing within such time, and the Court shall make such order approving or altering the draft, as it thinks fit.

(6) The Court, or such officer as it may appoint in this behalf, shall cause the document to be registered if its registration is required by the law for the time being in force or the decree-holder desires to have it registered, and may make such order as it thinks fit as to the payment of the expenses of the registration.

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The word "document" has been used in this rule instead of the word "conveyance" in the old Code.

2. Sub-Rule (6) is new. See Note 5, infra.

2. Decree for execution of document.—A decree directing a defendant to execute a document in favour of the plaintiff is executable in the manner provided by this rule, on the failure of the defendant to obey the directions given in the decree.[1] Where the judgment-debtor makes any alteration in the draft submitted to the Court, he could not be compelled to execute the document, but the proper procedure is to act under this rule.[2]

The Registrar of a High Court can, if directed by the Court, execute a document: but he cannot enter into any covenant on behalf of the judgment-debtor.[3] The title of the decree-holder is complete only after the execution of the document: till then there is only an inchoate right capable of being completed.[4]

A British Indian Court cannot, under this rule, direct a party to convey by a document, property which is outside its jurisdiction.[5]

Where a decree directed a defendant to endorse certain promissory notes to the plaintiff and the defendant failed to do so and in the meantime the promissory notes were barred by limitation, it was held that a suit for compensation for failure to carry out the terms of the decree is not maintainable and that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was by way of execution under this rule.[6]

3. Compromise decree for execution of document.—Where a compromise decree directs the plaintiff to execute a document in favour of the defendant in respect of properties which are the subject-matter of the suit, the defendant can enforce the decree under this rule.[1] execution of a decree is binding on his son.[1] The reason is that sub-R. (5) provides that such a document shall have the same effect as if it had been executed by the party himself. O.21, R.34, Notes 4—8.

5. Registration.—Even under the old Code the High Court of Allahabad held that where a document required to be registered under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, it must be registered even though executed by a Court acting under this rule.[1] Sub-R. (6) gives legislative recognition to the above mentioned decision.

6. Lis pendens.—Action taken by the Court in executing a decree under this rule is a proceeding in the suit and therefore a transfer of the property in dispute made by the judgment-debtor after the date of the decree but before the proceeding under this rule, will be affected by the doctrine of Lis pendens[1].

7. Limitation.—An application under this rule is an application for execution of the decree and is, therefore governed by Art. 182 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908.[1]

8. Appeal.—Under O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (i) an appeal lies against an order passed under this rule, on an objection to the draft of a document or of an endorsement: but a second appeal is prohibited by S. 104.[1]

1. Legislative changes.—

Sub-Rules (2) and (3) are new.

2. Scope of the rule.—This rule and R. 36, infra point out the mode of executing decrees for possession of immoveable property. Rules 95 and 96 of this order provide for the mode of delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser of the properties purchased by him in a Court sale. This rule corresponds with R. 95 and R. 36 corresponds with R. 96. The procedure for delivery of possession is the same in both sets of rules.[1]

Where property is delivered to the decree-holder in execution of his decree for possession, the decree is satisfied and, therefore, a second application for possession on the ground that he was dispossessed by the judgment-debtor, is not maintainable.[2] But a subsequent application will lie when the first application has been ineffectual.[3] Thus, where the decree-holder asked for delivery of the immoveable property with standing crops, and he was given delivery of the land only and not of the crops, he can apply again for effective possession of the land and of the crops.[4] Where, however, a decree-holder allows his decree to get time-barred without executing it, and the defendant continues in possession, a second suit for possession is not maintainable.[5] O.21, R.35, Notes 2—3.

A delivery of possession in execution of a decree has not the effect of dispossessing a third person (not a party to the suit), who was previously in possession and was not present when the delivery took place.[6] But it will be operative as an ouster or dispossession of the third person if it takes place in his presence and adversely to his claim.[7]

Where delivery of possession is made under this rule, the delivery must be deemed to have been made, not of the land alone, but of all things attached to it.[8]

An order for delivery of possession, should not, ordinarily, be made ex parte.[9]

This rule applies to proceedings under the following Acts,[10] but not to the following proceedings.[11]

3. Delivery of possession—Symbolical and actual.—This rule provides that where the property is in the occupation of the judgment-debtor or some one on his behalf, possession shall be given, if necessary, by removing the judgment-debtor or any person bound by the decree and placing the decree-holder (or the auction-purchaser in cases coming under R. 95, infra) in occupation of the same. But if the property is of such a nature that the judgment-debtor cannot be in actual possession of it, as, for instance, where the property is in the possession of a tenant, then delivery should be effected by the officer of the Court by going through the process prescribed in R. 36, infra and proclaiming to the occupant of the property that possession has been given to the decree-holder (or auction-purchaser in cases coming under R. 96).[1] The former kind of delivery is called khas or actual possession, while the latter is called symbolical or formal delivery of possession. Where the property is capable of immediate actual possession, possession must be delivered under sub-R. (1) and there can be no symbolical possession in such a case as between the parties to the decree.[2] The term "symbolical possession" is applied where delivery is made under sub-R. (2) of this rule and Rr. 36 and 96 infra.[3]

A decree-holder who has been given symbolical possession, is entitled to apply again under this rule to be put in actual possession, if he is entitled to it,[4] unless he deliberately accepts such symbolical possession and does not repudiate it.[5] In the latter case, his remedy is to file a separate suit.

4. Effect of symbolical possession.—The distinction between the effect of the delivery of symbolical possession as between parties to the suit and as against third persons, is important with reference to the question of limitation applicable to suits for actual possession by decree-holders or auction-purchasers who have obtained only symbolical possession.

The effect of delivery of symbolical possession in execution in cases where such possession alone can be delivered is the same as the actual transfer of possession from the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder; that being the only means by which, as between the parties, the Court can effectuate and carry out its own decree. Where, therefore, subsequent to this delivery the judgment-debtor dispossesses the decree-holder and remains in possession, such possession would be adverse to the decree-holder only from the date of such dispossession.[1]

1. J obtained a foreclosure decree for possession on 16th May, 1864, against the mortgagor and took formal possession in execution on 30th January, 1873. When attempting to take possession J was prevented by one R who had purchased the property from the mortgagor in 1865. J filed a suit for actual possession against R within 12 years of the date of formal possession. It was held that the delivery of symbolical possession had the effect of interrupting R's adverse possession inasmuch as he was a person bound by the decree, and that his possession after such delivery is a fresh act of trespass giving rise to a new cause of action. Juggobandhu v. Ram Chunder, (1880) 5 Cal. 584 (F.B.).

2. M purchased immoveable property belonging to D, the defendant, in Court auction in execution of a decree against him on 21st August, 1880. Symbolical possession was delivered to M on 14th July, 1884. M filed the present suit for possession on 29th May, 1895, against D who remained in actual possession since the date of the auction purchase. D contended that the suit was barred by limitation inasmuch as he was in possession for more than 12 years prior to suit. It was held that a fresh period of limitation must be computed from the date of delivery of symbolical possession and that therefore, the suit was in time. Mangli Prasad v. Debi Din, (1897) 19 All 499.

But the delivery of symbolical possession has no such operation as against third persons who are not parties to the decree.[2]

"A suit might be brought, and a decree obtained, by a person who has neither title nor possession, against another person, who has neither title nor possession; and if the delivery of symbolical possession in such a suit were to constitute actual possession as against the true owner, who had been in actual possession for many years, and who was no party to the suit, it would operate most unjustly."[3]

Now suppose that symbolical possession is given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been delivered. What is its effect upon limitation? There is a conflict of opinion on this question. On the one hand it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta,[4] Lahore,[5] Madras[6] and Patna[7] and by the Chief Court of Lower Burma[8] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[8-a] that the delivery of such possession amounts to delivery of actual possession so far as the judgment-debtor and his representatives are concerned, and that if after that date the judgment-debtor continues in possession, his possession became that of a trespasser giving rise to a fresh cause of action. They proceed on the view that though actual possession might have been taken, still, as it was obtained through Court and by process of law, and as the judgment-debtor must be deemed to have been present at the proceedings relating to the taking of possession, it is not open to him to say, that the whole proceeding should be taken as a nullity, and that the plaintiff should be treated as one who never obtained possession at all. The High Courts of Allahabad[9] and Bombay[10] have, on the other hand, held that where the judgment-debtor is in possession and the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser is entitled to actual possession, he cannot get anything less than that and if he does not get actual possession, he cannot rely upon symbolical possession; for the law does not allow a person who is entitled to actual possession to get only symbolical possession.

6. Joint possession—Undivided share.—Sub-R. (2) does not confer on Courts a new power of granting decrees for joint possession. Such decrees were given before this Code was enacted and sub-R. (2) merely defines the manner in which such a decree is to be executed.[1] A person who is entitled to possession of immovable property jointly with others is not merely entitled to a decree declaring his rights in the land, but also to a decree for joint possession; and it is immaterial whether he was originally in possession and was subsequently dispossessed or whether he had never been in possession at all.[2] But the Court has a discretion in granting such a decree and the discretion must be exercised in accordance with the principles of justice, equity and good conscience.[3] O.21, R.35, Notes 6—8.

Under the old Code it was held that a decree for joint possession may be executed by putting the plaintiff in actual possession of a portion of the property.[4] The difficulty which arose in giving such delivery of joint possession has now been removed by the enactment of sub-R. (2), prescribing the mode in which such delivery should be made.[5] The delivery of joint possession under this rule is merely a symbolical transaction.[6]

Whenever it is a question of giving effective possession of an undivided share in immoveable property to an auction-purchaser under a decree, the provisions of R. 95, infra, may be read with sub-R. (2) of this rule.[7]

7. Delivery of possession to agent.—Delivery of possession can be made to a person who is orally authorised by the decree-holder.[1]

8. Affixture of copy of warrant.—The provisions of this rule, and of Rr. 36 and 96, infra imperatively require that a copy of the warrant for delivery of possession should be affixed in some conspicuous place on the property, the object of the provision being that co-sharers and tenants may know that possession has been transferred to the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser as the case may be. Therefore, the failure to comply with the procedure laid down in those rules is fatal to the delivery, which is no delivery at all in the eye of the law, and cannot be the basis for a fresh suit for possession.[1] But where the parties concerned had actually come to know of the proceedings taken to give symbolical possession, it must be presumed that there had been a substantial compliance with the requirements of the rules.[2]

It must also be asumed that a process recorded as served through Court was served with all the formalities required by law and the burden of proof lies on the person asserting the contrary, to prove that the formalities, such as the fixing of copy of the warrant, had not been complied with.[3]

9. Removal of person bound by decree.—The words "any person bound by the decree" in this rule include the judgment-debtor as well as any person who may be held under law as bound by the decree.[1] Therefore, if the property for which a decree for possession has been made is in the occupancy of a person claiming under a title created by the defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit, actual possession under sub-R. (1) must be given to the decree-holder,[2] by removing, if necessary, the person bound by the decree and who refuses to vacate the property.[3] As to cases in which a party is bound by the decree according to principles of lis pendens, see S. 52, Transfer of Property Act and the undermentioned cases.[4]

10. Use of force in giving possession.—Where a person bound by a decree for possession of immovable property refuses to vacate or deliver possession of the property, a reasonable degree of force may be used in removing such person.[1] But the removal by force of a person other than the one bound by the decree is an offence punishable under S. 323 of the Indian Penal Code.[2]

11. Resistance to delivery of possession.—Resistance to a warrant for delivery of actual possession by a person in possession who is not a party to the decree and who is not bound by it is not an offence under S. 186, Indian Penal Code.[1]

See also Notes to O. 21, R. 98.

12. Identification of land.—If in the course of the proceedings in execution of a decree for possession of land, it appears that the boundaries described in the plaint are no longer in existence, the Court can make an enquiry to ascertain the land decreed.[1] Where the plaintiff, who has obtained a decree for possession of land, describes the land as having a particular area and as lying within certain boundaries, the boundaries must prevail even if the land exceeds the area stated in the plaint.[2]

See also Note 3 to O. 7, R. 3 and O. 21, R. 94.

13. Break open—Sub-R. 3.—Though in the old Code there was no provision corresponding to this sub-rule, it was held that where the building or enclosure to be given possession of was locked by the judgment-debtor or some person claiming under him and bound by the decree, the officer of the Court had the power to break open the lock, and place the decree-holder in possession.[1]

1. Scope and applicability of the rule.—This rule applies only to a case where the property is in the exclusive possession of a person who is not bound by the decree and who is entitled to remain in possession; it does not apply to a case of joint holding which is covered by R. 35, ante.[1] Where the property which is the subject-matter of a suit for possession is in the possession of a tenant[2] or of a usufructuary mortgagee whose term has not expired[3] or in the possession of a person having a right of residence,[4] delivery of the property in execution should be made under this rule provided, of course, such person is not bound by the decree. But where a third person claims to enter on the land under certain contractual rights and has not derived title from the defendant in the suit, he cannot be regarded as a tenant against whom an order under this rule could be made.[5]

Delivery of symbolical possession under this rule does not pass the right to the crops on the land, where a third person not bound by the decree is in possession.[6]

2. Formal or symbolical possession.—See Notes to R. 35, ante.

3. Possession without the intervention of the Court.—A person who has obtained a decree for possession of immoveable property may take possession of such property otherwise than in execution and may rely, for the support of his possession, on the title vested in him under the decree.[1] Where after having obtained possession without the aid of the Court, he is subsequently dispossessed, he can maintain an action against the persons who have dispossessed him, although he has not taken out execution of his decree.[2]

4. Effect of delivery on criminal proceedings.—Where a short time before the institution of proceedings under S. 145 of the Criminal Procedure

(1) those made by transferees of decrees;

(2) those made more than one year after the decree; and.

(3) those made against the legal representatives of a party to a decree.

Where, after such preliminary notice the party does not show cause against execution, the Court is bound, under R. 24, to issue process for the execution of the decree. This discretionary power is provided only in respect of the execution of money decrees by the arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor. The classes of cases in which the discretion to issue notice can be exercised are indicated in the provisions of R. 40, infra. It has been held that it will be a proper exercise of discretion to order notice where the Court has reason to believe that the judgment-debtor is too ill for imprisonment.[3]

ALLAHABAD.

Add the following proviso to Rule 40 (5):—

"Provided that, in order to give the judgment-debtor an opportunity of satisfying the decree, the Court before making the order of committal may leave the judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court for a specified period not exceeding 10 days, or release him on his furnishing security to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance at the expiration of the specified period, if the decree be not sooner satisfied. When the Court sees fit to leave a judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court and the judgment-debtor does not pay the costs incidental to such intermediate custody, it shall be competent for the Court to require the decree-holder, on pain of his application for arrest being disallowed, to pay into Court such sum as the judge deems sufficient to cover such costs including fees for process-server, subsistence of the judgment-debtor and cost of conveyance, if any; and sums disbursed by the decree-holder under this proviso shall be deemed to be costs in the suit."

MADRAS. O.21, R.40.

Substitute the following for Rule 40:—

"40. (1) When a judgment-debtor appears before the Court in obedience to a notice issued under Rule 37, or is brought before the Court after being arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money, and it appears to the Court that an insolvency petition has been presented by or against the judgment-debtor or that the judgment-debtor is unable from poverty or other sufficient cause to pay the amount of the decree or, if that amount is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalment thereof, the burden of proving the inability to pay being on the judgment-debtor, the Court may upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and detention, or directing his release, as the case may be.

(2) Before making an order under sub-Rule (1), the Court shall take into consideration any allegation of the decree-holder touching any of the following matters, namely:—

(a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in any fiduciary capacity to account;

(b) the transfer, concealment or removal by the judgment-debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree;

(c) any undue preference given by the judgment-debtor to any of his other creditors;

(d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it;

(e) the likelihood of the judgment-debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree.

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub-Rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment-debtor to be detained in the Civil Prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security, to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance when required by the Court.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this rule may be re-arrested.

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub-Rule (1), it shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the Civil Prison:

Provided that, in order to give the judgment-debtor an opportunity of satisfying the decree, the Court before making the order of committal may leave the judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court for a specified period not exceeding ten days, or release him on his furnishing security to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance at the expiration of the specified period if the decree be not sooner satisfied.

When the Court sees fit to leave a judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court and the judgment-debtor does not pay the costs incidental to such intermediate custody, it shall be competent for the Court to require the decree-holder, on pain of his application for arrest being disallowed to pay into Court such sum as the Judge deems sufficient to cover such costs including batta for process-server, subsistence of the judgment-debtor and cost of conveyance, if any; and sums disbursed by the decree-holder under this proviso shall be deemed to be costs in this suit.

(5-A) During the temporary absence of the Judge who issued the warrant under Rule 37 or 38, the warrant of committal may be signed by any other Judge of the same Court or by any judicial officer superior in rank who has jurisdiction over the same locality, or where the arrest is made on a warrant issued by the District Judge, the warrant of committal may be signed by any Subordinate Judge or District Munsif, empowered in writing by the District Judge in this behalf.

(6) No judgment-debtor shall be committed to the civil prison or brought before the Court from the prison to which he has been committed pending the consideration of any of the matters mentioned in sub-Rule (2) unless and until the decree-holder pays into Court such sum as the Judge may think sufficient to meet the travelling and subsistence expenses of the judgment-debtor and the escort for the journey to and from the prison. Sub-R. (5) of R. 39 shall apply to such payments.

"Shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested." See Note 1, Pt. (2).

"Unable to pay." See Note 1, Pts. (3) and (4).

1. Scope of the rule.—Inability to pay the amount of the decree has been recognised under this rule as a ground for disallowing an application for arrest. But the inability must be a bona fide one as implied in sub-R. (2). An order releasing the judgment-debtor without considering the allegations of the decree-holder touching any of the matters referred to in sub-R. 2 is not proper.[1-a] The object of the rule is to prevent creditors from unduly harassing indigent debtors[1] but if no sufficient cause as required by this rule exists, the Court cannot refuse the decree-holder the right of arrest and detention.[2] The finding as to inability to pay must be based on evidence,[3] and the burden of proof of such inability rests on the judgment-debtor.[4]

A judgment-debtor committed to the civil prison will be deemed to be in unlawful detention if he is delivered to an officer other than the officer named in the warrant of committal issued under the last sub-rule, and will be entitled to be released from such custody.[5] Though in the case of a judgment-debtor against whom a warrant has been issued, sub-R. 1 in terms is applicable on his being brought under arrest, he is not precluded from surrendering to the Court before arrest and claiming the protection of this rule.[6]

2. "Poverty or other sufficient cause".—Inability to pay may arise from poverty or other sufficient cause. Where the object of the decree-holder is to harass a judgment-debtor, whose properties have all been sold in execution of decrees, and the amount can be realised from solvent co-judgment-debtors[1] or where the assets of a judgment-debtor cannot be readily called in, for no fault of his[2] the Court may, in its discretion, refuse arrest or detention and, in the latter instance, grant him a reasonable time to pay the amount.

Lunacy of the judgment-debtor has been held to be a sufficient cause under this rule for refusing arrest or detention.[3]

3. Insolvency.—In the absence of a protection order from the insolvency Court, the insolvency of a judgment-debtor is not necessarily a ground for release under this rule.[1] The Court is, however, bound to consider, under this rule, the question of his inability to pay, if pleaded, notwithstanding the want of a protection order.[2]

Prior to any enquiry under this rule, the Court must, under S. 55, sub-S. 4, inform the judgment-debtor that he may apply to be declared an insolvent[3] and the judgment-debtor must express his intention to do so also before the proceedings under this rule are terminated.[4]

4. Transfer, concealment, removal or any other act of bad faith.—The acts of bad faith contemplated by Cls. (b) and (c) of sub-R. 2, are akin to those dealt with in S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 55 to 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and Ss. 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920. Under Cl. (b), however, the alleged act must be subsequent to the suit in question and intended to defeat or delay the decree-holder in particular.[1]

One test of good faith is whether the transaction complained of is genuine or colourable.[2]

3. "Any other person."
4. "Any and what other property."
5. Production of books of account.

Circumstances necessary for examination. See Note 2, Pt. (1).

1. Legislative changes.—

"Order 21, R. 41, is an amplification of S. 219 of Act VIII of 1859, modified by S. 267 of Act X of 1877".[1] Under the former Codes the Court was also expressly empowered to act suo motu.

2. Scope and object of the rule.—The object of the rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution in cases where there is any difficulty or cause for delay in obtaining particulars of the judgment-debtor's property. An application under this rule can be made at any stage, though it should not be allowed if it is calculated to harass any person by personal examination when an order for examination or production is made ex parte. It is open to the Court to hear the objections of the respondent without an application by him.[1]

3. "Any other person."—The Court may order the examination of any person who is alleged to be a mortgagee in possession of the property of the judgment-debtor and if it finds such person not to be in possession, may order the attachment of the property.[1]

4. "Any and what other property".—The rule applies to every description of property of the judgment-debtor legally liable to be proceeded against in satisfaction of the decree.[1]

5. Production of books of account.—To prevent the judgment-debtor from defeating the decree-holder's rights, the Court may require the former to produce his books of account and leave them in Court custody.[1]

R. 42. [S. 255.] Where a decree directs an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or any other matter, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him has been ascertained, be attached, as in the case of an ordinary decree for the payment of money. O.21, R.42

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.
2. Attachment under a preliminary decree.
3. Enquiry into state of account in suits under S. 92 of this Code.

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule is analogous to the provision of the Code relating to attachment before judgment and its object is to secure to the decree-holder the fruits of his decree. Although unlike O. 38, R. 5 this rule makes no specific provision for avoiding attachment by furnishing security it has been held that the Court will be justified in requiring security before acting under this rule.[1]

2. Attachment under a preliminary decree.—An attachment of the property of a judgment-debtor under a preliminary decree fixing his liability can be validly made under this rule pending enquiry as to the amount due.[1] But where the preliminary decree does not fix the liability but directs enquiry in order to ascertain the liability, this rule does not apply.[2] An operative decree obtained after the death of a defendant, by which the extent and quality of his liability, already declared in general terms, are for the first time ascertained, cannot bind the representatives of the deceased, unless they were made parties to the suit in which it was pronounced."[3] To such a case the present rule can have no application.

3. Enquiry into state of account in suits under S. 92 of this Code.—This rule applies also to the case of trustee against whom a decree has been passed in a suit under S. 92 of this Code, with a direction to take accounts of the trust moneys.[1]

LAHORE.

The rule was numbered as sub-Rule (1) and the following further proviso and sub-Rules (2) and (3) were added:—

"and provided also that, when the property attached consists of live-stock, agricultural implements or other articles which cannot conveniently be removed and the attaching officer does not act under the first proviso to this rule, he may at the instance of the judgment-debtor or of the decree-holder or of any person claiming to be interested in such property leave it in the village or place where it has been attached—

(a) in the charge of the person at whose instance the property is retained in such village or place, if such person enters into a bond in the Form No. 15-A of Appendix E to this Schedule with one or more sufficient sureties for its production when called for; or

(b) in the charge of an officer of the Court, if a suitable place for its safe custody be provided and the remuneration of the officer for a period of 15 days at such rate as may from time to time be fixed by the High Court be paid in advance; or

(c) in the charge of a village lambardar or such other respectable person as will undertake to keep such property, subject to the orders of the Court, if such person enters into a bond in Form No. 15-B of Appendix E with one or more sureties for its production.

(2) Whenever an attachment made under the provisions of this rule ceases for any of the reasons specified in Rules 55, 57 or 60 of this order, the Court may order the restitution of the attached property to the person in whose possession it was before attachment.

(3) When property is made over to a custodian under sub-Clause (a) or (c) of Clause (1), the Schedule of property annexed to the bond shall be drawn up by the attaching officer in triplicate, and dated and signed by:—

(a) the custodian and his sureties.

(b) the officer of the Court who made the attachment.

(c) the person whose property is attached and made over.

(d) two respectable witnesses.

One copy will be transmitted to the Court by the attaching officer and placed on the record of the proceedings under which the attachment has been ordered, one copy will be made over to the person whose property is attached and one copy will be made over to the custodian."

Rules 43-A to 43-D—

"43-A. (1) Whenever attached property is kept in the village or place where it is attached, the attaching officer shall forthwith report the fact to the Court and shall with his report forward a list of the property seized.

(2) If attached property is not sold under the first proviso to Rule 43 or retained in the village or place where it is attached under the second proviso to that rule it shall be brought to the Court-house and delivered to the proper officer of the Court.

(3) A custodian appointed under the second proviso to Rule 43 may at any time terminate his responsibilities by giving notice to the Court of his desire to be relieved of his trust and delivering to the proper officer of the Court the property made over to him.

(4) When any property is taken back from a custodian, he shall be granted a receipt for the same.

provide for its maintenance and, if he fails to do so and if it is in charge of an officer of the Court, it shall be removed to the Court-house.

Nothing in this rule shall prevent the judgment-debtor, or any person claiming to be interested in such stock, from making such arrangements for feeding the same as may not be inconsistent with its safe custody.

(2) The Court may direct that any sums which have been expended by the attaching officer or are payable to him, if not duly deposited or paid, be recovered from the proceeds of property, if sold or be paid by the person declared entitled to delivery before he receives the same. The Court may also order that any sums deposited or paid under these rules be recovered as costs of the attachment from any party to the proceedings.

43-C. When an application is made for the attachment of live-stock or other moveable property, the decree-holder shall pay into Court in cash such sum as will cover the costs of the maintenance and custody of the property for 15 days. If within three clear days, before the expiry of any such period of 15 days the amount of such costs for such further period as the Court may direct be not paid into Court, the Court, on receiving a report thereof from the proper officer, may issue an order for the withdrawal of the attachment and direct by whom the costs of the attachment are to be paid.

43-D. Any person who has undertaken to keep attached property under Rule 43 (1) (c) shall be liable to b proceeded against as a surety under S. 145 of the Code and shall be liable to pay in execution proceedings the value of any such property wilfully lost by him."

MADRAS.

Substitute the following rules for Rule 43 of Order 21, Schedule I:—

"43. (1) Where the prop rty to be attached is moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of ke ping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once; and

Provided also that, when the property attached consists of live-stock, agricultural implements or other articles which cannot conveniently be removed and the attaching officer does not act under the first proviso to this rule, he may at the instance of the judgment-debtor or of the decree-holder or of any person claiming to be int rested in such property leave it in the village or place where it has been attached—

(a) in the charge of the person at whose instance the property is retained in such village or place, if such person enters into a bond in the Form No. 15-A of Appendix E to this Schedule with one or more sufficient sureties for its production when called for; or

(b) in the charge of an officer of the Court, if a suitable place for its safe custody be provided and the remuneration of the officer for a period of 15 days at such rate as may from time to time be fixed by the High Court be paid in advance.

(2) Whenever an attachment made under the provisions of this rule ceases for any of the reasons specified in Rule 55 or Rule 57 or Rule 60 of this Order, the Court may order the restitution of the attached property to the person in whose possession it was before attachment.

43-A. (1) Whenever attached property is kept in the village or place where it is attached, the attaching officer shall forthwith report the fact to the Court and shall with his report forward a list of the property seized.

(2) If attached property is not sold under the first proviso to Rule 43 or retained in the village or place where it is attached under the second proviso to that rule, it shall be brought to the Court-house and delivered to the proper officer of the Court. O.21, R.43. Note 1.

43-B. (1) Whenever attached property kept in the village or place where it is attached is live-stock, the person at whose instance it is so retained shall provide for its maintenance, and, if he fails to do so and if it is in charge of an officer of the Court, it shall be removed to the Court-house.

Nothing in this rule shall prevent the judgment-debtor or any person claiming to be interested in such stock from making such arrangements for feeding the same as may not be inconsistent with its safe custody.

(2) The Court may direct that any sums which have been expended by the attaching officer or are payable to him, if not duly deposited or paid, be recovered from the proceeds of property, if sold, or be paid by the person declared entitled to delivery before he receives the same. The Court may also order that any sums deposited or paid under these rules be recovered as costs of the attachment from any party to the proceedings."

N.-W. F. P.

Add the following further proviso to Rule 43:—

"Provided further that when the attached property consists of live-stock or articles which cannot conveniently be removed, and the attaching officer does not act under the first proviso to this rule, he may leave it in the village or place where it has been attached in the charge of a village lambardar or such other respectable person as will undertake to keep the property, subject to the orders of the Court, if such person enters into a written bond for its production.

Any person who has so undertaken to keep attached property may be proceeded against as a surety under S. 145 of the Code and shall be liable to pay in execution proceedings the value of any such property wilfully lost by him."

Property outside jurisdiction of Court—Procedure. See S. 38, Note 6 also R. 46, Note 9, F.-N. (1).

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule deals with the mode of attachment of all moveable property except (a) agricultural produce and (b) property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, for both of which provision is made in Rr. 44 to 46, infra.

The attachment is legally effected only by actual seizure.[1] As to the procedure for the custody and maintenance of such property as live-stock see the rules framed under this Code by the various High Courts and the undermentioned cases.[2]

O.21, R.43, Notes 2—6.

2. "Moveable property."—See Notes on Ss. 2 (13) and 16.

3. "Actual seizure."—Unlike a prohibitory order under R 46, attachment by actual seizure involves a change of possession from the judgment-debtor to the Court.[1] But actual seizure does not always imply the doing of something which would bring the property into physical contact with the person attaching.[2] Any overt act short of direct physical apprehension, sufficient to pass possession to the Court amounts to actual seizure, as for example the affixing of the Court seal to the outer door of a warehouse containing the property to be attached,[3] or in the case of an attachment of cattle already tied and secured, the announcement on the spot by the attaching officer of his intention to attach.[4] The seizure by a peon of the attaching officer is valid if done in the presence and under the instructions of such officer.[5] Continuance of attachment necessarily involves continuance of Court custody. If such custody is once lost, there can be no further attachment without a fresh seizure.[6]

4. Effect of wrongful attachment.—See Note 23 to S. 60.

5. "Shall be responsible for the due custody thereof."—This rule deals only with the liability of the attaching officer so far as the Court is concerned. It does not affect in any way the liability of a surety who expressly takes charge of the attached property either to the Court or to the decree-holder.[1]

Attaching officers have been authorised by rules to leave the attached property in the custody of the judgment-debtor or other person. See rules by the various High Courts. Rule 93 of the Calcutta High Court General rules and Circular orders (civil) and also R. 122 of this order passed by the Allahabad High Court.

6. Security bond to produce attached property.—On the question whether liability under such a security bond is enforceable in execution or by a separate suit see S. 145, Note 4.

BOMBAY.

After Rule 44 of Order 21, the following shall be inserted, namely:—

44-A. Where the property to be attached is agricultural produce a copy of the warrant or the order of attachment shall be sent by post to the office of the Collector of the District in which the land is situate.

Synopsis.

1. Attachment of agricultural produce.

1. Attachment of agricultural produce.—Agricultural produce whether standing crop[1] or severed from the soil is moveable property. Unlike other moveable property agricultural produce of either description cannot be attached by actual seizure as provided in R. 43. The custodia Legis in the case of agricultural produce on attachment is only symbolical and is not validly created unless the rules of affixture herein provided are strictly complied with.[2]

This rule, like the preceding one applies only when the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor and not of a third party.[3]

Provisions as to agricultural produce under attachment.

R. 45. [New.] (1) Where agricultural produce is attached, the Court shall make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient and, for the purpose of enabling the Court to make such arrangements, every application for the attachment of a growing crop shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court in this behalf either in the order of attachment or in any subsequent order, the judgment-debtor may tend, cut, gather and store the produce and do any other act necessary for maturing or preserving it; and if the judgment-debtor fails to do all or any of such acts, the decree-holder may, with the permission of the Court and subject to the like conditions, do all or any of them either by himself or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and the costs incurred by the decree-holder shall be recoverable from the judgment-debtor as if they were included in, or formed part of, the decree.

(3) Agricultural produce attached as a growing crop shall not be deemed to have ceased to be under attachment or to require re-attachment merely because it has been severed from the soil.

(4) Where an order for the attachment of a growing crop has been made at a considerable time before the crop is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered, the Court may suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may, in its discretion, make a further order prohibiting the removal of the crop pending the execution of the order of attachment.

(5) A growing crop which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be attached under this rule at any time less than twenty days before the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered.

Local Amendments.

BOMBAY.

The following words shall be added to sub-Rule (1) of Rule 45 of Order 21, after substituting a semi-colon for the full-stop:—

"and the applicant shall deposit in Court at the time of the application such sum as the Court shall d em sufficient to defray the cost of watching and tending the crop till such time." O. 21, R. 45.

LAHORE.

Add the following proviso to sub-Rule (1) of Rule 45:—

"and with every such application such charges as may be necessary for the custody of the crop up to the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered shall be paid to the Court."

RANGOON.

O. 21, Rr 45-A and 45-B:—

Deposit, disbursement and refund of watching fees for attached moveable property.

45-A. (1) Before issuing a warrant for the attachment of moveable property which it will be necessary to place in charge of one or more peons, permanent or temporary, the Court shall satisfy itself that the attaching decree-holder has produced a receipt in Form 15-A. Appendix E from the Bailiff that he has paid in cash as process fees under Rr. 17 (1) (e) (ii) (2) of the Process Fees Rul s not less than Rs. 10, for each person whom the Bailiff considers should be employed.

(2) In sending the warrant for execution to the Bailiff, the Court Clerk shall certify at the foot of the warrant that the receipt granted by the Bailiff for the necessary fees has been fil d in the record. The Bailiff shall then endorse on the warrant the name of the process-server to whom it is issued for ex cution. If a temporary peon is employed for the custody of the attached property, the process-server shall state in his report of the attachment the name of the temporary peon employed and the date from which his duties commenced.

(3) At the time of granting the receipt in Form 15-A, for payments made by the decree-holder as required by such sub-Rule (1), the Bailiff shall state in the lower portion of the form the date on which the fees paid will be exhausted, warning the decree-holder that the property will not be kept under attachment after that date, unless further fees are paid before that date. If the further fees required are not paid, the attachment shall cease as soon as the period for which fees have already been paid expires. In such a case the amount paid prior to the cessation of the attachment shall not be allowed to the attaching decree-holder as costs.

(4) The payment of fees under sub-Rule (1) shall be made in cash to the Bailiff and the amount shall be at once entered in Bailiff's Register No. II. The Court Clerk shall on receipt of the Bailiff's acknowledgment (Form 15-A) file it in the record and make an entry to that effect in the diary.

(5) Temporary peons employed for the custody of attached property shall be remunerated at the rate provided for in Rule 15 of the rules regarding process-serving establishments, provided that the total remuneration disbursed shall in no case exceed the amount of the process-fees actually paid under the foregoing sub-rules. Permanent peons shall be presumed to be remunerated at the same rate as temporary peons but if the services of the former are utilized, the fees paid shall be credited direct into the Treasury to "Process-servers' Fees", "XVI-A, Law and Justice"—"Courts of Law"—"Court-fees realized in cash".

(6) The remuneration of temporary peons employed to take charge of attached property shall be paid direct by the Bailiff to them on the order of the Judge. Before passing such order, the Judge must verify the name of the payee from the report of the attachment and must satisfy himself that the amount proposed to be paid does not exceed the amount of the fees deposited with the Bailiff, or, if any payments have already b en made in the case of the unexpended balance of such deposits and that all amounts previously drawn have been disbursed to the proper persons.

(7) When the order has been signed by the Judge, the money shall be disbursed by the Bailiff at once to the peon or peons concerned, whose acknowledgment of receipt shall be taken in Bailiff's Register II. If, however, the amount has been transferred to Bailiff's Register I, the Bailiff shall draw the amount necessary for payment from the Tr asury as if it were a repayment of deposit and shall then disburse the amount due to the peon or peons concerned, whose acknowledgment of receipt shall be taken in Bailiff's Register I.

(8) When the attachment is brought to a close or has not been effected, if the Judge finds, at the time of calculating the amount paid in and properly chargeable for peons, that the total amount of the fees actually paid under sub-Rules (1) and (3) exceeds the total amount that is chargeable for peons including the amount of the last payment, he shall direct that the excess be refunded to the payer.

(9) The Judge shall in all cases in which a refund is to be made, issue to the Bailiff an order, a copy of which shall be placed on the record, to make such refund. If a sufficient portion of the amount paid by the decree-holder to pay such refund is in the hands of the Bailiff, that officer shall make the refund in the ordinary way prescribed in his Register II for re-payments. If the amount has been credited into the Treasury, he shall prepare a bill for the amount to be refunded in the prescribed Treasury Form and shall lay it before the Judge for signature with the record of the case in the same way as a bill for the remuneration of temporary peons. Before signing the refund order, the Judge must satisfy himself that the amount is available for refund by examining Bailiff's Register I and the record. The Bill when signed by the Judge will be given to the payee, with instructions to present it for payment at the Treasury or sub-treasury.

45-B. (1) In addition to the fees payable before a warrant issues for the attachment of moveable property under Rule 45-A, the Bailiff shall require the attaching decree-holder to deposit a sum of money sufficient to cover the cost of attachment other than the pay of peons employed to take charge of it, for such period as the Bailiff may think fit.

Charges incurred in connection with custody and conveyance of attached moveable property and feeding and tending of live-stock.

Explanation.—The costs in question might be, for example:

(a) rent of building in which to store attached furniture,

(b) cost of conveying the attached property from the place of attachment to Court or to a secure place of custody,

(c) costs of feeding and tending live-stock,

(d) cost of proceeding to the place of attachment to sell perishable property.

(2) If the attaching decree-holder fails to comply with the Bailiff's requisition, the warrant shall not be issued.

(3) Sums thus deposited shall be entered in the Bailiff's Registers I and II and any repayments thereof shall be made according to existing orders. A receipt for such sums shall be granted by the Bailiff in Form 15-A, Appendix E.

(4) In the receipt given for the sums deposited, the Bailiff shall state the period for which such sums will last, and if the attaching decree-holder does not deposit a further sum before the expiry of such period, the attachment shall cease when the sum deposited is exhausted.

(5) The officer actually attaching the property, shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, give the debtor, or, in his absence, any adult member of his family who may be present, the option of having the attached property kept on his premises or elsewhere, on condition that a suitable place for its safe custody is duly provided. The option so given may be subsequently withdrawn by order of the Court. Where the attached property consists of cattle these may be employed, so far as is consistent with Rule 43, in agricultural operations.

(6) If no such suitable place be provided or if the Court directs that the property shall be removed, the officer shall remove the property to the Court, unless the property attached is a growing crop, when Rule 45 applies. Whenever live-stock is placed at the place where it has been attached, the judgment-debtor shall be at liberty to undertake the due feeding and tending of it under the supervision of the attaching officer.

(7) Whenever property is attached, the officer shall forthwith report to the Court and shall with his report forward an accurate list of the property seized.

(8) If the judgment-debtor shall give his consent in writing to the sale of property without awaiting the expiry of the term prescribed in Rule 68, the officer shall receive the written consent and forward it without delay to the Court for its orders.

(9) When property is removed to the Court it shall be kept by the Bailiff, on his own sole responsibility, in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot, from its nature or bulk, be conveniently kept on the Court premises or in the personal custody of the Bailiff he may, subject to the approval of the Court, make such arrangement for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical.

(10) If there be a cattle-pound maintained by Government or any local authority in or near the place where the Court is held, the Bailiff shall be at liberty to place in it such attached live-stock as can be properly there kept, in which case the pound-keeper will be responsible for the property to the Bailiff and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description.

(11) Whenever property is attached, and any person other than the judgment-debtor shall claim the same, or any part of it, the officer shall nevertheless, unless the decree-holder desires to withdraw the attachment of the property so claimed, remain in possession and shall direct the claimant to prefer his claim to the Court.

(12) If the decree-holder shall withdraw an attachment or if it shall cease under sub-Rule (2) or (4), the Bailiff's officer shall inform the debtor or, in his absence, an adult member of his family that the property is at his disposal.

(13) If any portion of the deposit made under sub-Rule (1) or (4) remains unexpended, it shall be refunded to the decree-holder in the manner prescribed for such refunds in sub-Rule (9) of Rule 45-A. Any difference between the cost of attachment of movable property (other than the costs referred to in Rule 45-A) and the sums deposited by the attaching decree-holder shall, unless the difference is due to the fault of the Bailiff, be recovered from the sale-proceeds of the attached property, if any, and if there are no sale-proceeds, from the attaching decree-holder on the application of the Bailiff. If there is still a deficiency, the amount shall be paid by Government.

O.21, R.45, Note 1.

1. Shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut and gathered.—The attachment of agricultural produce does not prevent the judgment-debtor from doing or continuing all necessary acts of husbandry with respect to the crop or produce. In fact, the Court is bound, under this rule, to make proper arrangements for the custody tending, cutting, gathering, storing, maturing and preservation of the produce either at the instance of the judgment-debtor, or if he neglects to perform the acts of preservation, at the instance of the decree-holder or otherwise. The attached property continues to be in the possession of the Court during the process of husbandry.

To enable the Court to make the necessary arrangements, an application for attachment must state the time at which the crop is likely to be ready for harvest. If the application is made a considerable time before the harvest, the Court may postpone attachment and prohibit the present removal of the produce.

O. 21, R.46. Attachment of debt, share and other property not in possession of judgment-debtor.

R. 46. [S. 268.] (1) In the case of—

(a) a debt[2] not secured by a negotiable instrument,

(b) a share[11] in the capital of a corporation,

(c) other movable property[12] not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in, or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

(i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court;

(ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon;

(iii) in the case of the other movable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

(2) A copy of such order shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of the court-house and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt, to the debtor, in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other movable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same[13]. O.21, R.46, Note 1.

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) of sub-rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

1. Attachment of debt, share, or other movable property—General.—There is a broad distinction between the attachment of movable property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, and the attachment of debts (other than negotiable instruments), shares in a corporation or other movable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor; in the former case the attachment is effected by actual seizure while in the latter case it is done by a prohibitory order.[1]

A debt, in order to be attachable under this rule must be due solely to the judgment-debtor[2] and should be described with reasonable certainty in the application for attachment.[3] The Court, cannot, on an application under this rule, direct the garnishee (judgment-debtor's debtor) to pay the amount into Court: it can only pass a prohibitory order as mentioned in the rule.[4] It is, however, open to the garnishee to deposit the amount of the debt in Court and thereby obtain a valid discharge.[4-a] But in the case of dispute as to the title to the amount in deposit, the Court must decide the question before ordering payment to the decree-holder.[5] Rules 58 and 63 of this order are applicable to attachments hereunder.[6]

2. "Debt" meaning of—Annuity, monthly allowance, or money due in instalments.—See Notes 7, 14 and 22 to S. 60 and also the undermentioned case.[1]

3. Salary, whether a debt.—See Notes 16 and 17 to S. 60. A pay or pension in private service becomes due on the last day of the month even though it is not paid till the first of the next month and can be attached on the last day of the month.[1]

4. Attachment of mortgage debt.—A mortgage debt due under a simple mortgage is a "debt" within the meaning of this rule and can be attached by a prohibitory order.[1] Such attachment carries with it the security of the immovable property without any further attachment of the property itself; the purchaser of the mortgage interest in execution is entitled, therefore, to sue for the sale of the mortgaged property for the debt.[2]

A usufructuary mortgage in which there is a covenant to pay is also a "debt" which can be attached under this rule.[3] But a purely usufructuary mortgage without any liability to pay the mortgage amount is not a "debt" at all and cannot be attached under this rule.[4] Such a mortgage should be attached under R. 54 as immovable property.[5] See also Note 4 to S. 16.

5. Attachment of decrees.—See R. 53, infra.

6. Attachment of debt already paid by cheque.—Payment of a debt by delivery of a cheque extinguishes the debt. There is, therefore, no debt that can be attached in the hands of the garnishee where the latter has delivered a cheque for the debt to the judgment-debtor, even though the latter had not cashed the debt.[1]

7. Procedure where garnishee denies debt.—Under sub-R. 3 a garnishee may, at his option, pay the amount of the debt into Court. But the Court has no jurisdiction to compel the garnishee to do so[1]; nor can the Court proceed against him or his property for the recovery of the amount,[2] though the Court, in practice, calls on him to pay.[3] In case the garnishee denies the debt, it is not the duty of the Court to enquire and decide if the debt is due.[4] The only course in such cases is either to have a Receiver appointed for the collection of the debt or to sell the debt notifying the fact of denial.[5] An order so appointing a Receiver or for sale does not, however, debar the garnishee in a suit on the debt, from setting up the defence that no debt is due.[6] It has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that a decree-holder who has attached future rents is not thereby entitled to sue the tenants for the amount of the rent due without his being duly appointed a Receiver for the purpose.[7]

8. Set-off by garnishee of cross-debt.—The garnishee is entitled to a set-off in respect of any cross-debt due to him from the judgment-debtor, at the date of the attachment[1] or of the sale.[2]

9. Procedure where garnishee resides outside jurisdiction.—"In its essential elements a garnishment proceeding is a proceeding by the defendant in the suit against the garnishee in the name and for the benefit of the plaintiff . . . wherever the garnishee could be sued by the defendant for the payment he may be charged as garnishee on account of it.[1]" If, therefor, the garnishee resides outside the jurisdiction of a Court and the debt is also payable outside its jurisdiction no prohibitory order can be made against the garnishee[2] unless specifically provided for by the Code.[3]

A garnishee submitting, in the first instance, to a prohibitory order in ignorance of the want of jurisdiction, may, however, refuse to abide by it subsequently.[4]

As to attachment of property outside jurisdiction, see Note 7 to S. 39.

10. Procedure where garnishee admits liability but does not pay.—See Note 7 above. See also the undermentioned cases[1] under that rule as regards the procedure to be followed in Rangoon.

11. Attachment of share.—An attachment of shares in a corporation is made in the form required by Cl. (ii) of sub-R. (1) and by sub-R. (2) of this rule.[1]

12. Attachment of other moveable property.—A judgment-creditor does not, by virtue of his judgment, get a right to the property of the judgment-debtor in his hands or in the hands of a third party, and his remedy is not by way of suit but by attachment and sale in execution.[1] But, where a property in the possession of another is declared to belong to plaintiff, the proper remedy for its recovery is by a suit and not in execution.[1a]

Attachment of agricultural produce not in the possession of the judgment-debtor is covered by the rule.[1b] Unpaid purchase money due to the judgment-debtor is movable property attachable under this rule.[2] Where money was deposited by a judgment-debtor with a Railway Company as security for the due performance of his duties as a servant of the Company, an attachment of such deposit is subject to all the rights of the Company on the deposit, though the interest, if any, payable to the judgment-debtor on the deposit amount may be made available to the decree-holder by virtue of the attachment.[3]

13. Service of prohibitory order.— A prohibitory order under this rule must be duly served on the garnishee.[1]

14. Effect of non-compliance with sub-R.(2) —Want of affixture of the order as required by sub-R. (2) is fatal to the validity of the attachment and a bona fide assignee from the judgment-debtor after such attachment acquires good title.[1]

15. Notice to debtor.—Under sub-R. (2) a copy of the prohibitory order shall be sent to the debtor. When it is not so sent, the attachment is ineffectual and the garnishee remains liable to pay the debt to the judgment-debtor.[1] A notice to the judgment-debtor is, however, not a condition precedent to the validity of the attachment.[2]

16. Effect of attachment.—An attachment under this rule prohibits the creditor from collecting the debt, but does not prevent him from suing on the debt,[1] nor is the attachment a bar to a contest of non-liability by the

garnishee.[2]

The attaching decree-holder gets no higher rights in the debt than what the judgment-debtor could give him at the date of the attachment and any disposition of the debt by the judgment-debtor prior to attachment binds the decree-holder,[3] nor can a decree-holder compel the judgment-debtor to create larger rights for him.[4] If, on the day of attachment, there was no debt and the attachment was raised, a subsequent accrual of a debt does not by itself revive the attachment.[5] But where a debt existed at the time of attachment, the attaching decree-holder is not precluded from realising the debt by the fact of the debt having been subsequently paid to the judgment-debtor by the garnishee.[6]

A prohibitory order under this rule is a process in execution, and money deposited in Court under sub-R. (3) is "assets" within the meaning of S. 73 of the Code.[7] When there are attachments of more Courts than one of varying grades, the garnishee acting under sub-R. (3), is bound to deposit the money in the Court of the superior grade on the analogy of S. 63.[8]

As against an Official Assignee, in bankruptcy, the attaching decree-holder obtains rights in the property attached, only on complete realisation by him before vesting.[9]

17. Inherent power of Court to pass prohibitory orders in proper cases.—Even in cases not strictly governed by O. 21, R. 46 a prohibitory order can be passed under the inherent powers of the Court, where the ends of justice require it to be done.[1]

Disbursing officer or judgment-debtor outside the Court's jurisdiction—Effect. See Note 1, Pts. (1) and (2).

1. Attachment of salary of public officer, etc.—Under the old Code the salary of a public officer or of a railway servant or of a servant of a local authority could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree.[1] As this led to considerable inconvenience and needless expense, this rule has been newly enacted to provide for such cases; the salary of this class of judgment-debtors, can now be attached under this rule whether they, or the disbursing officers reside within such local limits, or not.[2] The distinction between this rule and R. 52, infra is, that the latter refers specifically to property actually in the hands of public officers, while the former provides for the anticipatory attachment of salaries.[3]

This rule has no application to the attachment of salaries of judgment-debtors in private service. Such salaries are attachable only as debts after they fall due.[3-a] The wages of domestic servants[4] or monies due to railway contractors[5] are not salary or allowances, within the meaning of this rule. The attachment of salaries or allowances at the disposal of the disbursing officer is not invalid by reason merely of the fact that the sanction of the superior authority is necessary before the money is actually disbursed.[6] O.21. R.48, Notes 1—3.

Attachment under this rule can be made also by the Court to which a decree is transferred for execution.[7]

2. Sub-R. (2) and S. 64, Explanation —Salary attached under this rule is "assets" within the meaning of S. 73 of the Code, and successive attaching decree-holders are entitled to rateable distribution thereof. There is no inconsistency between the explanation to S. 64 and sub-R. 2 of this rule. The latter provision only lays down what the officer concerned should do.[1] See also Note 13 to S. 64.

3. Sub-R. (3).—The effect of this sub-rule is that any sum paid by a disbursing officer in contravention of this rule can[1] and should be[2] recovered directly from the Government or the railway company or the local authority, as the case may be. But no order for recovery thereof can be made without bringing the Government[3] or the railway company or the local authority on the record as a party.

Decree against firm—Receiver holding assets—What is proper order. See Note 1, F.-N. (2).

1. Attachment of partnership property.—This rule and the next deal with the mode of execution affecting partnership property. Execution can be taken against any partnership property only on a decree passed against the firm or against all the partners thereof as such.[1] Where the decree is only against an individual partner, the property of the partnership cannot be attached but an order creating a charge on the interest of the judgment-debtor in the partnership can be obtained, with or without the appointment of a Receiver.[2] The provisions of this rule are closely modelled on S. 23 of the English Partnership Act, Ss. 53 and 54, Vict., Ch. 39.

O.21, R.49, Notes 2—5.

2. "Against the partners in the firm as such."—These words do not occur in S. 23 of the English Partnership Act. The introduction of these words in this rule makes it clear that a decree against partners as such is on the same footing as a decree against the firm for the purposes of this rule.

3. Decree against individual partner.—The holder of a decree against an individual partner gets no higher rights in execution than what a voluntary assignee of a partner of his share in the partnership gets under such assignment. Such an assignment "does not, as against the other partners, entitle the assignee during the continuance of the partnership, to interfere in the management or administration of the partnership business or affairs, or to require any accounts of the partnership transactions, or to inspect the partnership books, but entitles the assignee only to receive the share of profits to which the assigning partner would otherwise be entitled, and the assignee must accept the account of profits agreed to by the partners."[1]

"In case of a dissolution of the partnership whether as respects all the partners or as respects the assigning partner, the assignee is entitled to receive the share of the partnership assets to which the assigning partner is entitled as between himself and the other partners, and, for the purpose of ascertaining that share, to an account as from the date of the dissolution.[2]

4. Direct accounts.—See Note 3 above.

5. Order under this rule and insolvency.—An order under this rule charging the interest of the judgment-debtor in partnership property is not a "transaction" protected by S. 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act or by S. 55 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.[1]

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule should be read with the provisions of O. 30, infra; the latter deals with the procedure in suits instituted by or against firms, while this rule deals with the mode of execution of decrees, which have been obtained against firms in the firm name.[1]

O.21, R.50. Notes 1—3.

As will be seen in Note 1 to O. 30, R. 1 a decree against a firm in the name of the firm has the same effect as a decree against all the partners. It can, therefore, be executed against the whole of the Partnership Property[2] [sub-R. 1, Cl. (a)]. It can also be executed against anyone or more of the partners personally,[3] (i.e., against their person or their personal property) though, before this is done, certain conditions have to be satisfied and a certain procedure has to be followed as prescribed by this rule. Thus it can be executed personally against any person coming under clauses (b) and (c) of sub-R. 1[4] inasmuch as, in such cases, it may safely be presumed that the person proceeded against knows of the suit and that his liability as a partner is, in some way, established.[5] The decree can also, with the leave of the Court be executed personally against any other person as being a partner of the firm (sub-R. 2).[6]

It is not necessary that the decree-holder should proceed against the property of the partner before applying for execution against his person.[7]

As regards execution against a dissolved firm see O. 30, R. 3, Note 2 and the undermentioned case.[8]

2. "Where a decree has been passed against a firm."—See O. 30, R. 6, Note 4.

3. Award.—An award can be validly passed against a firm[1] as well as against individuals, and when the award against a firm is filed in Court under the provisions of the Arbitration Act 1899, it is enforceable as a decree of the Court, and the provisions of O. 21, R. 50 apply thereto.[2] But though an award when filed in Court is on the same footing as a decree of Court, the proceedings before the arbitrators up to the stage of the passing of the award do not constitute 'a suit' for the application of the provisions of O. 30 (See Note 11 to O. 30, R. 1). Consequently, the service of any notice or summons by the arbitrators on an alleged partner of the firm, is not service within the meaning of sub-R. 1 so as to enable the decree-holder to take out execution against the person of such partner without the leave of the Court. Before ordering execution of an award, the Court will, therefore, have to determine in every case whether the alleged partner is liable as a partner or not, and grant or refuse leave under sub-R. 2.[3]

O.21, R.50, Notes 3—5.

Leave may be granted also by the Court to which the decree on an award, is sent for execution.[4]

4. "Against any person who has appeared."—See Notes on Rr. 3 and 5 to 8 of O. 30.

Where an alleged partner refuses a summons sent to him under O. 30, R. 3 he must be deemed to be "individually served" and if he fails to appear, execution can proceed against him under sub-R. 1, Cl. (c) without any leave of the Court.[1] The words "or who has been adjudged to be a partner" in sub-R. 1 evidently provide for a case where the person served on behalf of the firm denies that he is a partner, and the plaintiff asks for an issue being raised in the suit, as to whether the services on him is good service or not.[2] See Notes to R. 8, O. 30.

5. Execution against persons other than those referred to in sub-R. 1 —sub-R. 2.—It has already been seen in Note 1 above, that execution of a decree against a firm can be taken against the property of the partnership as well as personally against the partners referred to in Cls. (b) and (c) of sub-R. 1 and that, as against an alleged partner not referred to therein, the leave of the Court is a condition precedent to an order for execution. The principle of the distinction is that, in the case of persons who cannot in law be fixed individually with the knowledge of the suit against the firm, an opportunity must be given to them to dispute the liability under the decree.[1] See also sub-R. 4.

Ordinarily, a decree is binding on the executing Court and no question of the liability of the judgment-debtor under the judgment can be allowed to be raised in execution. But as, in the case of a suit against a firm, the decree is passed on service of summons in an extremely technical form as set forth in

O. 21, R. 50 Note 5.

O. 30, R. 3 and as each partner is not necessarily a defendant in the suit, and is not required to be served with the summons in the suit before the decree is passed, it is provided specifically in sub-R. (2) read with sub-R. (4), that in the case of persons not served in the suit, their liability under the decree, when disputed, may be heard and determined in execution.[2]

The liability may be disputed not merely on the ground that the alleged partner is not really a partner, but also on any other appropriate ground of defence. See Notes 3 and 4 to R. 8, O. 30 and the cases cited therein and also the undermentioned case.[3]

When the liability is decided in favour of the decree-holder and leave is granted, the effect is, that the decree against the firm, which was executable or had been executed[4] against the property of the firm or against the persons referred to in Cls. (b) and (c) of sub-R. (1), becomes also executable personally against partners not served in the suit. Accordingly, an application for leave under sub-R. (2), is only ancillary to an application for execution, and will not be barred by reason of its being made beyond three years from the date of the decree so long as the decree itself is otherwise kept alive according to law.[5] Though the words "may apply" occur in sub-R. (2), it has been held that no separate application for leave is necessary as the application for execution itself implies a prayer for leave.[6]

In the case of a Hindu son, when the Court finds under sub-R. (2) that the son is not a partner, the application against him under O. 21, R. 50 as such must be disallowed, and the decree-holder left to remedies otherwise available to him.[7]

Order 30, R. 2 provides that in a suit by a firm the plaintiff shall declare on demand by the defendant the names of all the partners constituting the plaintiff firm. Where in such a suit the defendant makes a counter claim against the plaintiff firm and succeeds, the persons so declared as partners cannot be proceeded against personally without an adjudication of liability against them under sub-R. (2).

The reason is that O. 21, R. 50 is not controlled by O. 30, R. 2.[8]

As regards execution under sub-R. (2) in case of death of a partner see Note 14 to R. 1, Note 2 to R. 3, and R. 4 of O. 30 and the undermentioned case.[9]

O.21, R.50, Notes 5—7.

As to the power of an executing Court to grant leave see Note 3 above.

6. Determination of liability under sub-R. (2) operates as a decree.—In the case of persons referred to in Cls. (b) and (c) of sub-R. (1) they can be deemed to be parties to the decree by reason of service of summons or admission or adjudication as partners. The proceedings in execution as against them fall under S. 47 of the Code and an order therein will be a decree under S. 2, sub-S. (2).[1] But a person not coming under Cls. (b) and (c) of sub-R. (1) cannot be considered to be a party to the decree as the very fact of his being a partner or of his liability to the decree is allowed to be put in issue under sub-R. (2) for determination. The proceedings as against him under sub-R. (2) cannot fall under S. 47, nor is the determination one in the suit, having arisen only after decree. Hence it is not a decree. In order, however, to confer a right of appeal which does not otherwise exist, from such adjudication sub-R. (3) lays down specifically that the order shall have the force of a decree.[2] It may also be noted that sub-R. (4) requires a summons to be served, and sub-R. (2) prescribes that the issue of liability be tried, as in a suit. Where, however, the partner is ex parte and there is no trial and determination of the liability, the order granting leave ex parte does not have the force of a decree.[3] An application to set the ex parte order aside is not governed by Art. 164 of the Limitation Act as the said article applies only to decrees.[4]

An order having the force of a decree under sub-R. (3) is governed by Sch. I, Art. 1 and not Sch. II, Art. 11 of the Court Fees Act.[5]

An order under this sub-rule amounting to a decree bars the re-opening of the same matter in any subsequent application for leave against the same person.[6] The order having the force of a decree will not, however, make the proceedings a suit within the meaning of S. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act.[7] But the fact that the proceedings are not proceedings in a suit will not bar a reference to the High Court of Bombay from an appeal decided by the Resident of Aden in a matter under sub-R. (2).[8]

7. Sub-R. (4).—Where a decree-holder against a firm claims to execute the decree against a partner not coming within Cls. (a) and (b) of sub-R. (1), i.e., a partner who was not served in the suit, he has to apply under sub-R. (2) for leave to execute the decree against such partner[1] and for this purpose, a summons to appear and answer the application should be issued to such part-

The object of this is to give the partner an opportunity of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so.[2] The summons referred to in this sub-rule is not the summons sent in the suit against the firm but means a notice or summons to appear and answer the application for leave to execute under sub-R. (2).[3] O.21, R.50, Notes 7—9.

Attachment of negotiable instruments.

R. 51. [S. 270.] Where the property is a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court and held subject to further orders of the Court.

[1877—S. 270; 1859—S. 238.]

Synopsis.

1. Attachment by actual seizure.

1. Attachment by actual seizure.—An attachment of a negotiable instrument whether in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not, should be made only by actual seizure. Unless this is done, there is always a danger that third parties may bona fide become possessed of it, and, if a prohibitory order is held to be a valid attachment, they would be prejudiced by such an order of which they may know nothing.[1] A prohibitory order is, however, sufficient attachment as against the debtor or the promisor.[2]

1. Scope of the rule.—This rule deals with the attachment of property in the custody of a Court or of a public officer. The property sought to be attached must, however, belong to the judgment-debtor. Thus, Government promissory notes standing in the name of the judgment-debtor in a bank, but which have been declared to belong to another, cannot be attached under this rule.[1]

The Court has no discretion to refuse to order attachment in cases under this rule.[2] The circumstance that one decree-holder has attached the property is no ground for preventing another decree-holder of the same judgment-debtor from attaching the same property.[3]

Where a decree-holder seeks to attach money of the judgment-debtor already deposited in Court, it is necessary that he should put in an execution application in his suit to that effect, and give notice to the judgment-debtor.[4] The attachment is to be made by issuing a notice to the custody Court, to hold the property subject to the orders of the Court issuing the notice.[5] Where the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same, the High Court of Lahore has held, that it would be a meaningless formality to issue a precept to itself requesting it to hold the property subject to its own orders.[6] O.21, R.52, Notes 1—3.

2. Property in the custody of the Court or the public officer.—The rule permits of attachment of property not merely in the custody of Court but also of property in the custody of public officer, such as moneys in the hands of the Official trustee[1] or insured letters addressed to the judgment-debtor lying in the custody of the post office.[2] Revenue, or interest or dividends payable, in future can also be attached under this rule.[3] For definition of the word public officer see S. 2 (17), ante. As to assets in the hands of the Collector in execution, see the following.[4] The word custody in the rule means actual custody.[5]

3. Property in the hands of a receiver.—Moneys in the hands of a receiver must be regarded as being in the custody of the Court and can be attached under his rule.[1] Leave of Court is, however, necessary before such attachment can be levied, of property in his hands. The present rule does not affect the prevailing practice as to the necessity of obtaining leave in such cases.[2]

Where a Receiver is appointed for the assets of a partnership in a partnership suit, the practice on the original side of the High Court of Bombay has been, to pass a charging order against the assets held by the receiver, on the application of an attaching creditor. By virtue of such order the receiver is bound to deal with the charge as per order of the Court issuing the same.[3] Where a receiver is appointed in a suit for administration of the estate of a deceased but no decree is passed, it has been held that the Receiver appointed in the suit ought not to be directed to pay a judgment-creditor who has obtained an attachment under this rule.[4]

O.21, R.52, Notes 4—6.

4. Property in the hands of the Official Assignee.—The Official Assignee is a public officer coming within the definition of S. 2, cl. (17) sub-cl. (d) of the Code. The amount in his hands payable by way of dividend to the judgment-debtor can be attached under this rule.[1]

5. Anticipatory attachment.—The rule applies only to attachment of property actually in the hands of the Court or the officer and not of property expected to reach the hands of such Court or officer.[1]

6. Determination of questions of title and priority—Proviso.—Under the proviso to this rule, a question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, is to be determined by the custody Court and not by the attaching Court.[1] Thus where Courts B, C and D have in execution of decrees obtained by X, Y and Z respectively, successfully attached a fund in the custody of Court A, it is the latter Court that has to determine the priority between X, Y and Z. It has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras that X is entitled, as being the first attaching decree-holder, to priority over the claims of Y and Z, and that the custody Court A is not entitled to award a rateable distribution among X, Y and Z.[2] The reason given is that S. 73 does not, in terms, apply to such cases inasmuch the decree-holders have not applied to Court A for execution of their decrees before the receipt by it of such assets, and that there cannot be any rateable distribution of property apart from S. 73, on equitable grounds, among any other class of decree-holders than those specified in S. 73. The High Court of Calcutta has, on the other hand, held that attachment does not create any title in the attaching creditor and that the custody Court is bound to apply the rules of justice, equity and good conscience and distribute the fund attached rateably amongst the attaching decree-holders.[3] The question has arisen in the High Court of Bombay with reference to the attachment of funds in the hands of a receiver appointed in a partnership action. In the undermentioned case Farran, J held that one of several creditors cannot, by attachment obtain priority over the other creditors and that a Court of equity will refuse permission to attach except on terms which ensure equality among all the creditors.[4] A contrary view was taken by Mirza, J., in the cases cited below[5] following the Madras Full Bench case. The same High Court has also in a recent case held that a creditor who has obtained a charging order in his favour is entitled to priority over other non-attaching creditors.[6]

Where X obtains a decree in Court B and in execution thereof attaches a fund in Court A and, before the transfer of the fund to Court B to the account of X's suit, other decree-holders have applied for execution to the Court B, the matter falls within S. 73 and X and other decree-holders will be entitled to rateable distribution.[7]

The order passed under the proviso is not an administrative but a judicial order binding on the parties.[8] The enquiry under the proviso is of the same nature as an investigation of claim proceedings and a suit lies to set aside the order passed therein[9] unless the determination of the question is one falling under S. 47.[10]

7. Effect of attachment under this rule on any previous attachment.—A files a suit against B and attaches before judgment certain moveable properties belonging to B. The attached property being perishable is sold and the proceeds are kept in Court. C who has obtained a decree against B attaches the amount in Court deposit under the provisions of this rule. If, at that time A has not obtained a decree in his suit and applied for execution thereof, C will be entitled to apply the amount attached in satisfaction of his decree and the prior attachment before judgment obtained by A will confer no right in his favour so as to affect the right of C.[1] But if A has actually obtained a decree and applies for execution at the time of C's attachment, different equities would arise and both A and C will be entitled to share the proceeds rateably between themselves.[2]

8. Step-in-aid.—Where an attachment is effected under this rule of moneys lying to the credit of the judgment-debtor in the treasury, and more than three years after the attachment an application is made for payment of the amount attached, the latter application is not one for execution but a step-in-aid of the prior execution application and is not barred.[1]

1. Legislative changes.—

1. In sub-Rule (1), the words "or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge" have been newly added.
2. In Clause (b) (ii) of the same sub-rule the words "or his judgment-debtor" are new.
3. Sub-Rules (2), (3) and (6) and Clause (a) of sub-Rule (1) are new.

2. Scope of the rule.—This rule makes a distinction, for the purposes of attachment between decrees for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, and other decrees. Where a decree of the former class is attached the mode of realisation of the attached decree is by execution thereof.[1-a] The holder of the decree sought to be executed is conferred the power of executing such attached decree and for that purpose the rule declares that he should be deemed to be a representative of the holder of the attached decree.

In the case of other decrees sub-R. (4) prescribes the manner of attachment thereof. But the rule is silent as to how they should be realised after attachment. Such decrees should therefore be sold after attachment by Court auction as being "other saleable property of the judgment-debtor" under S. 60.[1]

The rule applies to attachment of decrees whether made before or after judgment.[2] It does not apply to a case where the creditor of a mortgagee attached the deposit made in Court by the mortgagor to redeem the property before sale in execution.[3] For the attachment and the subsequent execution of decrees of Civil Courts in execution of certificates issued under the provisions of certain Local Public Demands Recovery Acts, see the undermentioned provisions.[4]

3. Decree for money.—A decree for the payment of money is not attachable as a debt under R. 46, but should be attached under this rule.[1] The following have been held to be money decrees attachable as such under this rule:—

O.21, R.53, Notes 3—3-a.

1. Decree for mesne profits[2] whether ascertained or unascertained.[3]
2. Decree for arrears of rent.[4]
3. A certificate as to deficiency of price granted under R. 71 of this order.[5]
4. Decree in a suit for dissolution of partnership though part of the assets of the partnership are immovable properties.[6]

But the rule applies only to cases where the right attached is expressly settled by the decree. Thus a right to recover mesne profits by way of restitution by reason of reversal of the decree in appeal cannot be attached.[7]

As noticed in Note 2, after attachment under this rule, the money decree should be executed and not sold (see also Note 9, infra).

3-a. Decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge.—In the absence of these words under the Old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage was or was not a money decree and as to the mode of execution of such a decree after attachment. The High Courts of Allahabad[1] and Calcutta[2] held that it was not a money decree and that it should be sold after attachment. The High Court of Madras[3] on the other hand held that it was a money decree which should be attached and executed under the corresponding S. 273. The conflict has been set at rest by the Legislature by giving effect to the Madras view. Under the present rule such decrees are placed on the same footing as money decrees.[4] In the case of a decree for maintenance charging immovable property also, the proper course for the decree-holder is to apply for execution, and not for the sale of the decree attached.[5]

If, however, in contravention of the provisions of this rule, a decree for money or a mortgage decree for sale, if sold and not executed, after attachment, the sale cannot be regarded as a nullity which confers no rights on the purchasers. The rule is merely one of procedure and ought not to be given a scope which will interfere with the substantive rights of creditors conferred by S. 60 of the Code.[6]

4. Other decrees.—A decree relating to immovable property is not itself immovable property. Such a decree should therefore be attached only under this rule and not under the next rule.[1] Thus a decree for possession of immovable property[2] or a preliminary decree for partition[3] or a decree for foreclosure[4] should be attached under this rule. As pointed out in Note 1, such decrees should be sold after attachment, and cannot be executed.

5. Decree passed by the same Court.—In the case of a decree for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by the same Court, the attachment is made under sub-R. 1, Cl. (a) by order of the Court. In the case of other decrees, the attachment is made under sub-R. 4 by the issue of a notice to the holder of the decree sought to be attached prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way.

6. Decree passed by different Courts.—An order of attachment under this rule, by Court X, of a decree passed by Court Y can be made either by Court X or by the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution.[1]

After receiving notice of attachment under this rule, the Court whose decree is attached has no jurisdiction to proceed with the sale ignoring the order. The sale in such a case is void.[2]

7. Effect of attachment.—The effect of attachment of a decree under this rule is to stay execution of the attached decree until the conditions mentioned therein happen. The decree is not permanently rendered incapable of execution by reason of the attachment, nor is the decree-holder's interest destroyed.[1] "The judgment-creditor" as pointed out by Maclean, C.J., "still had an interest in the decree which he had obtained and the attachment order did not prevent him from presenting the decree with a view to execution."

O.21, R.53, Notes 7—9.

The addition of the words "or his judgment-debtor" in sub-R. (1), Cl. (b) gives legislative recognition to the right of the holder of the decree attached, to apply for execution after attachment.[2]

The rule mentions only the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor as having the right to apply for execution after attachment. But can a transferee of the decree whose transfer is prior to attachment apply for execution of the decree after attachment under this rule? The High Court of Madras in its carlier decisions[3] held that the words "his judgment-debtor" do not include a transferee from the judgment-debtor and that the remedy of the latter is only to prefer a claim under R. 58 of this order and have the attachment raised before he can apply for execution. In a later decision[4] however, it has dissented from such a view and held, that the transferee is entitled to execute the decree notwithstanding the subsequent attachment inasmuch as his rights are prior to the attachment and R. 16 confers a right of execution in his favour. The High Court of Rangoon[5] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[6] have also held that a transferee stands in the same position as his transferor, and is entitled to apply for execution. The High Court of Patna[7] has gone a step further and held that a transferee of the decree even after attachment is entitled to apply for execution by virtue of R. 16. The reasoning of the Patna High Court is that in the case of money decrees, the present rule does not prohibit a transfer of the decree during the pendency of the attachment, and the general prohibition contained in S. 64 does not apply to the specific provision in this rule. But the right of the assignee to execute the decree in such a case, is subject to the right of the attachers just as the assignor's right would be.[8]

8. Stay of execution—Sub-R. (1).—The object of the stay is to prevent the holder of the attached decree from realising and taking away the fruits of that decree.[1] But the stay is not an absolute stay but a limited one and, as already noticed, does not prevent the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor from executing the attached decree.[2]

9. Execution of attached decree—Sub-R. (2).—Under sub-R. (2) the attaching decree-holder is entitled to apply for execution of the attached decree. He can take the necessary steps for the realisation of the proceeds of the attached decree and apply them in satisfaction of his decree.[1]

10. Representative—Sub-R. (3).—Sub-R. (3) makes it quite clear that once a decree has been attached by another decree-holder, the latter becomes a representative of the holder of the attached decree and is entitled to take out execution in the same way as the original holder thereof could have done[4]. See also Note 25 to S. 47.

Thus where in execution of a decree obtained by A against B, a decree which B holds against a company in liquidation is attached, the Court will direct the liquidator to recognise A as the representative of B and allow him to prove for the decree debt in the name of B and to receive and apply dividends payable to B in satisfaction of A's decree debt.[2]

The attaching decree-holder is entitled to take moneys deposited by the judgment-debtor and certify payment.[3] Moneys brought into Court by the judgment-debtor become forthwith available for the satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed and the interest ceases to run from the date of the attachment.[4] The attaching creditor has the same remedies as his judgment-debtor and can also proceed against any sureties for the decree amount.[5] If the decree is attached after execution sale but before confirmation, it has been held that the attaching decree-holder is entitled to apply for confirmation of sale in his favour.[6]

11. Adjustment of attached decree—Sub-R. (6).—As pointed out by their Lordships of the High Court of Madras in a recent Full Bench[1] Cl. 6 of the rule provides an exception to the General rule embodied in S. 64 of the Code, and is a special case of the application of the well-known principle of justice and equity intended for the protection of parties to a bona fide transaction. After the judgment-debtor under the attached decree receives either through Court or otherwise notice of the order of attachment, any payment or adjustment by him to his decree-holder will not be recognised by the Court.[2] But if such judgment-debtor should, in ignorance of the attachment, have made any payment or adjustment it should be regarded as a payment or adjustment properly made under the decree to the rightful person.

The rule prohibits an adjustment between the judgment-debtor under the decree attached and the decree-holder thereof and not an adjustment between the attaching decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.[3]

If an application for execution by the attaching decree-holder is struck off for default, it has been held that the attachment is not put an end to and the judgment-debtor cannot therefore make any payment to his decree-holder. The provisions of R. 57 of this order do not apply to a default on the part of the attaching decree-holder.[4]

12. Step-in-aid.—An application for execution of a decree under attachment by the attaching decree-holder is a step-in-aid of execution of the decree within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.[1]

Property outside jurisdiction. See Note 7. See S. 39, Shrotriyam villages—Mode of proclamation. See Note 10, Pt. (2).

1. Attachment of immoveable property—General.—The rule deals with attachment of immoveable property. The word "attachment" in S. 64 of the Code means, so far as immoveable property is concerned, an attachment effected in the manner provided for by this rule.[1] An attachment is a necessary preliminary to execution proceedings[2] and the object of the rule in prescribing a particular way of notifying the attachment is as pointed out by Mahmood, J., in Ganga Din v. Khushali[3] "to give notice to the judgment-debtor not to alienate his property and to the public not to accept any alienation from him." See Note 2 to S. 64, ante.

As already pointed out in R. 53 above, a decree, though relating to immoveable property, is not itself immoveable property, and cannot be attached as such under this rule but only under R. 53.[4]

This rule extends to attachment of immoveable property under Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act VI of 1920. See S. 50.

2. Attachment of mortgage debt.—See Note 4 to R. 46.

3. Immoveable property.—See Note 4 to S. 16 ante for the meaning of the words "immoveable property". The following have been held to be immoveable property within the meaning of this rule:—

1. The equity of redemption in a mortgage.[1]
2. The life interest taken by a Parsee widow under her husband's will in the income of his immoveable property.[2]

3-a. Attachment of property belonging to Hindu co-parcener.—An attachment of the share of an undivided co-parcener in a joint Hindu family should be made in respect of his undivided share in the whole family property, and not of his share in each item of it.[1] Such an attachment has the effect of preventing the accrual of title by survivorship to the other members, in the event of the member whose share is attached, dying after attachment and before sale.[2]

4. Attachment when complete.—An attachment under this rule is not complete unless first, the order of attachment has been issued and secondly in execution of that order, the other formalities prescribed by the Code have been done.[1] See for a full discussion, Note 3 to S. 64, ante.

5. Proof of service of prohibitory order.—The mere writing of an order is not enough. It must be served on the judgment-debtor and he must have an opportunity of knowing that he is prohibited.[1] There is a presumption that official acts are regularly performed. Where it was found that the prohibitory order was duly served on the judgment-debtors, but that portion of the record which would show that the service was effected in the prescribed manner had been destroyed, it was held that the execution sale was not vitiated on that account.[2]

6. Proclamation of order of attachment.—A mere prohibitory order will not constitute a sufficient attachment so as to operate as a valid prohibition against any alienation by the judgment-debtor unless the proclamation described in the second part of the rule is carried out.[1] The publication of the proclamation as required by the rule, constitutes sufficient notice to the judgment-debtor.[2]

The proclamation is merely a ministerial act, and the delay on the part of the officer in effecting it, as for instance, where an attachment which was ordered before judgment, is not completed till after judgment, does not vitiate the proceedings.[3] As to the effect of the omission to publish the sale proclamation, see Notes to R. 90, infra.

7. Beat of drum.—A proclamation of attachment should be proclaimed by beat of drum at some place on, or adjacent to the property attached. The omission to have the drum beaten as required by the rule is a material irregularity which will vitiate the execution sale.[1]

O.21, R.54, Notes 8—11.

8. Affixing copy on conspicuous part of the property.—A copy of the proclamation order must be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property.[1] Where prima facie this is not done, it is a material irregularity which will afford a ground for setting aside the execution sale.[2]

9. Affixing copy in Court-house.—A copy of the proclamation of sale must, under R. 67, infra, read with this rule, be affixed on a conspicuous part of the Court-house and, under R. 68, the sale must take place only after the expiration of at least 30 days from the day on which it was so affixed.[1]

An omission to affix a copy of the attachment order in a conspicuous part of the Court-house is also a material irregularity within the meaning of R. 90.[2]

10. Affixing copy in Collector's office.—Where the property attached is land paying revenue to Government, the rule requires, in addition, that the order of attachment should be affixed in the Collector's office.[1] Rent payable in the case of enfranchised shrotriem villages in the Presidency of Madras is "Revenue" within the meaning of this rule and the procedure prescribed should be followed in attaching such properties.[2] Where a house stands on a site which is assessed to revenue, the property is still land paying revenue to Government and omission to affix a copy of the order in the Collector's office constitutes a material irregularity under R. 90, infra.[3]

11. Effect of attachment and re-attachment.—An attachment under this rule does not constitute dispossession of the party in actual possession.[1] Nor does it confer any interest or title in the property in favour of the attaching party.[2] As noticed in Note 5 to S. 64, ante, the effect of attachment is to restrain alienation by the judgment-debtor and any rights acquired by reason of a private transfer subsequent to the attachment are void against all claims enforceable under the attachment.[3]

A re-attachment of property ex majori cautela after decree does not imply an abandonment of the attachment obtained before decree.[4] See also Note 7 to S. 64. O.21, R.54, Notes 11—12.

12. Absence of attachment and irregular and invalid attachment.— Attachment is a step taken only in order to keep the property of the judgment-debtor intact and to enable the decree-holder to bring it to sale. Where, therefore, a sale takes place without the property sold having been attached, it is not a nullity and will not be set aside unless substantial loss or injury is proved to have resulted therefrom.[1] The absence of attachment is only an irregularity which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to sell.[2] Similarly any defect or error in the mode of attachment is only an irregularity which does not render the sale ipso facto void.[3] See Notes to R. 90, infra.

But as between the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser on the one hand, and an alienee from the judgment-debtor on the other, different equities come into operation.[4] As pointed out in Note 4, ante, a regularly perfected attachment is a condition precedent to a restraint on alienation after attachment so as to attract the provisions of S. 64.[5] A private alienation of property after an order of attachment which has not been carried into effect is valid unless proof is given that all the requirements of the rule have been complied with.[6]

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "or certified to the Court" are new.
2. The words "the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, etc.", have been substituted for the words "an order shall be issued . . . . for the withdrawal of attachment".

2. Scope of the rule.—On any of the three things mentioned in Cls. (a), (b) and (c) happening, the attachment is automatically deemed to be withdrawn. No express order is now necessary, as it was, under the old Code.[1]

The rule applies only where the decree is fully and entirely satisfied.[1-a] An attachment cannot be partially raised by consent of parties without an express order of the Court.[2]

O.21, R.55, Notes 2—4.

The words "amount decreed" mean, in the case of an instalment decree, the instalment which has become due and in respect of which the attachment has been made.[3]

A mere tender of money before the Judge is not sufficient to entitle the judgment-debtor to have the sale of properties stayed; the law contemplates that payment should be made in accordance with the rules and forms of the Court.[4]

It is the duty of the judgment-debtor to apprise the Court of the fact of satisfaction of the decree; otherwise, if the Court executes the decree in ignorance of the satisfaction thereof, the sale will not be held to be invalid on that ground alone.[5]

This rule applies to proceedings in respect of immoveables under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, see S. 210 (3) (b). [Bengal Act, VI of 1908, as amended by Bihar and Orissa Act, VI of 1920, S. 50 (1).]

3. "Attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn".—As has been seen already, an attachment will automatically cease on a payment made under Cl. (a). Where, therefore, by reason of such payment an attachment ceases, another decree-holder who has applied for execution against the same judgment-debtor, but who has not attached the properties, cannot have the property sold under the attachment that has ceased.[1]

Even under the old Code it was held that, on payment of the decree-amount into Court, the attachment became inoperative even though it was not formally withdrawn,[2] and that a private alienation after the attaching creditor had been satisfied would prevail against subsequent attachments.[3]

As to whether money paid under this rule is liable to rateable distribution, see Note 4 to S. 73, ante.

4. Revival of attachment.—The rule provides that the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn when the decree is set aside or reversed. But, if on second appeal, the reversal of the first appellate Court is, in turn, reversed and the original decree restored, the attachment will be revived and a sale can be ordered on the strength thereof.[1] See also Note 9 to S. 64.

"Striking off"—Effect. See Note 5, Pts. (2) and (3).

1. Scope and object of the rule.—This rule is new. There was no corresponding provision in the Code of 1882, enabling the executing Court to dismiss an execution application when the decree-holder was not diligent in prosecuting the same. The Court could not act under Chapter VII (now O. 9) or under S. 157 (now O. 17, R. 2) as those provisions applied only to suits. Nor could the Court apply those provisions by virtue of S. 647 (now S. 141), inasmuch as the judicial committee held in Thakur Prasad v. Fakirulla, [I.L.R. 17 All. 106 (P.C.)], that that section did not apply to execution proceedings. Hence, with a view to prevent the accumulation of execution applications from encumbering the files of the Courts and in order to show a better statistical return, the Subordinate Courts resorted to the practice of disposing them off by passing such orders as "Recorded" or "struck off" on such applications. Such a practice was not authorised by the provisions of the Code and, in spite of the fact that the High Courts condemned the same,[1] and although a Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad[2] pointed out that the Court could, under its inherent power, dismiss an application for the laches of the decree-holder, this unauthorised practice nevertheless persisted. Such disposals also led to further doubts and complications as to whether an attachment previously effected did or did not subsist after the passing of the order. It was held in several cases that the attachment was not necessarily put an end to by reason of the order "striking off" the application and that it was a question of intention depending on the circumstances of each case as to whether or not it subsisted.[3]

The present rule prescribes the procedure to be followed, where after attachment in execution, the application for execution cannot further be proceeded with, by reason of the decree-holder's default.[4] The object of the rule is— O.21, R.57, Notes 1—2.

(1) to put an end to the practice of disposing off execution applications by such orders as "application struck off" or "lodged";[5] and

(2) to remove the doubt that existed under the old Code as to the effect of an order of dismissal upon attachment, by providing in explicit terms that the attachment should cease upon the dismissal, irrespective of any question of intention.[6]

Under the present rule, the Court should not "strike off" execution applications for default of the decree-holder.[7] If it does pass such an order it will be deemed to be one of dismissal.[8]

The provisions of this rule have been held to have no retrospective effect and do not apply to orders passed before the coming into force of the present Code.[9]

2. "By reason of the decree-holder's default."—The default referred to by the rule is not confined merely to a default in appearance or in the payment of process fees, or in production of documents. It means failure to do what one is legally bound to do that is, to go on with the application and have the property sold.[1] Thus an omission to serve notice on the judgment-debtor as required by R. 66 of this order[2] or failure to furnish any information called for by the Court[3] amounts to a default within the meaning of this rule. Similarly if the decree-holder withdraws his application,[4] or requests the Court to strike it off,[5] or consents to an application for adjournment of the sale made by the judgment-debtor,[6] he thereby precludes himself from proceeding with the execution application and the Court can dismiss the same for default under this rule. But an omission to do anything which he is not under an obligation to do, such as not being present at the time of the sale or his failure to bid, at such sale, do not constitute a default and, therefore, a dismissal of the application for want of bidders at the sale will not have the effect of putting an end to the attachment under this rule.[7]

The default contemplated by this rule refers to a stage after the attachment and not before attachment. Applying this principle, the High Court of Madras has held in a case where, though there was an attachment, the parties as well as the Court were proceeding in ignorance of the attachment, as though there was none, the dismissal of the application at a stage when the Court thought that the attachment was yet to be effected, does not come within the scope of this rule.[8]

As to the effect of dismissal on a ground other than the default of the decree-holder, see Note 3.

3. Effect of dismissal of application.—Where an execution application is dismissed for default of the decree-holder under this rule, the attachment previously effected ceases forthwith.[1] No question of any intention arises, under the present code; a mistaken impression on the part of the decree-holder that the attachment continued notwithstanding the dismissal of the application or the fact that he prays for sale only of the attached property in a subsequent petition, will not have the effect of nullifying the imperative provisions of this rule.[2] The decree-holder can only apply for a fresh attachment and then to bring the property to sale, if he wants to proceed against that property.[3]

Where the Court passes an order "petition dismissed, attachment to continue" what is the legal effect of the direction regarding the continuance of the attachment? On the one hand, the High Courts of Calcutta[4] Madras[5] and the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur[6] have held that the direction is of no legal effect or consequence and that attachment ceases forthwith. The High Court of Allahabad[7] has, on the other hand, held that the order though not a proper one, cannot be treated as a nullity, having no effect upon the parties, but that it should be treated as an order adjourning the case sini die.

O.21, R.57, Notes 3—5.

The rule applies, in terms, only to cases of dismissal by reason of the decree holder's default. Where the dismissal is not due to the default of the decree-holder, the question whether the attachment ceases by reason of the dismissal, depends upon the circumstances of each case.[8] It has thus been held that where the dismissal is due to a mistake of the Court[9] or in consequence of an order of stay[10] or of injunction[11] passed by a competent Court, the attachment is not put an end to by reason of the order of dismissal. But the Court has power to direct even in such cases by an explicit order, that the attachment should cease even though there is no default on the part of the decree-holder.[12]

4. Dismissal of application by Collector.—Where execution proceedings are transferred to the Collector he has power to dismiss the execution application for default under this rule and upon such a dismissal the attachment ceases.[1]

5. Execution removed from file for statistical purposes.—As seen in Note 1, the Court should, under this rule, either dismiss or adjourn the application and not simply "strike it off." Even in cases to which the rule does not apply there is no provision of law authorising the Court to lodge an application or record it or strike it off from the file for what is commonly called statistical purposes.[1] The proper course in such cases is to adjourn the application and not to strike it off its file. Where the Court does, however, pass such an order as "struck off" or "recorded" or "closed" or "consigned to the record room" it would only amount to an adjournment sine die and the application will be deemed nevertheless to be pending.[2] The removal for statistical purposes is not a judicial determination and no fresh application is necessary to continue the same.[3]

O.21, R.57, Notes 6—9.

6. Responsibility of Sapurdar of attached property after dismissal for default.—A Sapurdar is responsible to the Court for the production of the property entrusted with him. He cannot escape liability by pleading that owing to the decree-holder's default the execution application was dismissed with the result that the attachment terminated under this rule and that therefore he handed over the property to the judgment-debtor.[1]

7. Revival of attachment when possible.—On the dismissal of an execution application for default, the attachment ceases. A revival of the execution proceedings, for instance, by an application for review does not operate to revive the attachment, so as to prejudice the rights of a third party in the property acquired in the meantime.[1] Thus if the judgment-debtor transfers the property after an order of dismissal under this rule, the transferee gets the property free from attachment.[2] But where there is no question of prejudice to third parties the attachment can also be revived.[3]

8. Attachment before judgment.—There is a conflict of judicial opinion as to the effect of an order of dismissal of an execution application under this rule upon attachment effected before judgment. The High Courts of Allahabad[1] and Calcutta[2] have held that the present rule applies only to cases where the property is "attached in execution of a decree" as the rule itself expressly states, and that consequently the dismissal of an execution application for default does not put an end to the attachment before judgment. A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras[3] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[4] have, on the other hand taken a contrary view. According to them, the words "any property attached in execution of a decree" should be construed as meaning "where property has been in a state of attachment in execution" and the decree-holder by electing to take the benefit of O. 38, R. 11 of proceeding to execute the decree without a fresh attachment is, in effect, asking the Court to treat the attachment as one in execution; the attachment before judgment therefore ceases upon the dismissal of the application for the execution. The High Court of Bombay[5] has accepted the view of the Madras Full Bench but held that the dismissal of an execution application in relation to Moveable property has not the effect of putting an end to an attachment of Immoveable properties.

9. Default in executing attached decree.—See Note 11 to R. 53, ante.

INVESTIGATION OF CLAIMS AND OBJECTIONS[1]. O.21, R.58.

R. 58. [S. 278.] (1) Where any claim is preferred[3] to, or any objection is made[3] to the attachment of, any property attached[7] in execution of a decree[2] on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment,[4] the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim[20] or objection with the like power as regards the examination of the claimant or objector, and in all other respects, as if he was a party to the suit:

Investigation of claims to, and objections to attachment of, attached property.

Provided[21] that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objection was designedly or unnecessarily delayed.

(2) Where the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection.

Postponement of sale.

1. Investigation of claims and objections.—Where property is attached in execution of a decree, it is possible that third parties, or even the parties themselves, have objections to such attachment being made. Where a party or his representative has any such objection, the question is one falling also within S. 47 and therefore, must be decided by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit.[1] The enquiry under that section is a full enquiry and the determination of the question after such enquiry is a decree. The remedy of the party aggrieved by the order is by way of appeal.[2] On the other hand, where a third party has a claim or an objection to the attachment of property attached in execution of a decree, there are two courses open to him. He may straightaway file a suit claiming the appropriate relief, or he may file an application under this rule to the Court executing the decree.

O.21, R.58, Notes 1—4.

He is not bound to prefer a claim or an objection under this rule.[3] The reason is that the remedy provided by this rule is a summary and concurrent remedy provided with the object of securing a speedy settlement of title raised at execution sales,[3-a] and, as has been seen in Note 63 to S. 9, ante, the existence of such a remedy does not bar a regular suit or other available remedy to the party aggrieved.[4] Where such third party prefers a claim under this rule the enquiry is only a summary investigation and not a full trial of the issues between the parties.[4-a] The party aggrieved by an order passed after such investigation should file a suit under R. 63 within one year thereof for setting aside the order. This rule and R. 63 do not apply to the Vizagapatam Agency Tracts.[5]

2. Attachment before judgment.—See Note 6 to R. 63.

3. "Where any claim is preferred or any objection is made".—The rule is very wide and comprises claims of third parties whether put forward by themselves, or on their behalf by the parties to the suit or their representatives.[1]

4. On the ground that such property is not liable to attachment."—The rule pre-supposes the existence of an attachment and the ground of the application is that the property is not liable to attachment.[1] Where there is no attachment at all an objection under this rule is incompetent.[2] Nor can the objector prefer an application under this rule merely on the ground that he has not been made a party to the execution proceedings.[3] It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the words "on the ground that such property is not liable to attachment" have reference merely to a case where an objection is made to an attachment and not to a claim preferred to the property.[4] The High Court of Madras has also held that it is open to a claimant to put forward his claim under this rule on the ground that the Court which passed the decree had no jurisdiction to pass it or that the Court which executes the decree has no jurisdiction to do so[5] or that the attachment made is not legal or valid.[6]

But it is not open to a claimant to attack the validity of the decree or the decree-holder's right to execute the same; it is thus not open to him to plead that the execution application is barred by limitation.[7]

5. Objections raised after sale.—The Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim under this rule after the execution sale has taken place.[1] The reason is that the attachment is ipso facto determined after the sale has taken place.[2] The Judicial Commissioners' Court of Nagpur has expressed the view that a claim can be preferred after Court-auction sale but before confirmation of the same.[3]

6. Burden of proof is on claimant to establish possession in himself.—R. 59 prescribes that the claimant must adduce evidence to show that on the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached. The burden of proof is therefore clearly upon the claimant or objector to establish possession in himself.[1]

7. Any property attached.—The rule applies to any property attached in execution of a decree. Thus it will include a claim to moveables,[1] or to a fractional share of the immoveable property attached,[2] or to a share of the moveables seized in execution.[3]

8. Claim to debts attached in execution.—The procedure laid down in this rule applies also to claims relating to the attachment of debts. A garnishee who has failed in his claim cannot, without filing a suit within one year from the date of the order against him, assert either as plaintiff or as defendant the right denied to him by that order.[1] O.21, R.58, Notes 8—11.

9. Claim to decree attached in execution.—The rule applies also to claims in respect of decrees attached in execution.

Where A obtains a decree against B for money and in execution thereof attaches a decree in favour of B, and C who had obtained before the attachment a transfer of the decree attached prefers a claim to the decree, his claim falls under this rule.[1]

10. Claim to property seized by receiver.—Where a Receiver in insolvency after adjudication of the judgment-debtor seizes properties as belonging to the insolvent, it is open to third persons to prefer their claims or objections, if any, to such property. But such claims fall under S. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and are triable by the insolvency Court,[1] although the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by this rule.[2] The decision of the insolvency Court on such claims can however be challenged by the aggrieved party only by way of appeal or otherwise as provided by the Insolvency Act itself; and not by way of a suit under R. 63.[3]

Where a property has been attached in execution of a decree the mere fact that, subsequently thereto, the judgment-debtor becomes an insolvent and his properties became vested in the Official Receiver or the Official Assignee, will not disentitle a claimant from preferring an objection under this rule.[4]

11. Claims to properties ordered to be sold under a mortgage decree.—As has been seen in Note 4, ante, proceedings under this rule are applicable only when properties have been attached in execution. Attachment is necessary in the case of money decrees and not in the case of mortgage decrees. Consequently the provisions of this rule do not apply to claims or objections relating to properties ordered to be sold under a mortgage decree.[1] The remedy of an objector in such a case is by way of a separate suit.[2]

Where, however, a mortgagee decree-holder erroneously applies for, and gets, an attachment effected on the properties and a claim is thereupon preferred and decided, the order on the claim will be conclusive within the meaning of R. 63.[3]

12. Claim to property attached in execution of rent decree.—S. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) expressly provides that the provisions of the Code, i.e., Rr. 58 to 63, as to claim cases shall not apply to a tenure or holding attached in execution of a decree for arrears of rent thereof. Hence no claims or objections can be filed under this rule in respect of the same.[1]

The rule applies to proceedings in execution of rent decrees under the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908.[2] This Act, unlike Bengal Tenancy Act, contains no provision excepting the applicability of this rule to proceedings thereunder.

Rr. 58 to 63 of the Code are made applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (Behar and Orissa Act VI of 1920) by S. 210, sub-S. 3, Cl. (b).

13. Who can prefer claim.—All persons who have some interest in, or are possessed of, the property attached can prefer a claim under this rule (see R. 59 below). There is a difference of opinion as to whether an application by a mortgagee praying that the sale may be subject to his mortgage is one falling under R. 66 or under this rule. See Note 2 to R. 62.

As to whether a usufructuary mortgagee can make a claim under this rule, see R. 62, infra.

14. Parties and representatives.—It has been seen in Note 46 to S. 47, that objections to attachment raised by parties or their representatives as representing third parties or as trustees, are really objections by third parties and do not fall within the scope of S. 47. Such objections will, therefore, have to be decided under the provisions of Rr. 58 to 63.[1] Thus a claim by the Karnavan of a Malabar Tarwad that the whole of the tarwad property is not liable to attachment in execution of a personal decree against him falls under this rule.[2]

15. Trustees and shebaits.—On the same principle a personal decree against a trustee or shebait does not estop him from asserting the claim of the beneficiary or of the charitable institution under this rule when the latter's property is attached in execution.[1] Thus where A, in execution of a decree for money against B personally, attaches and proceeds to sell property of which B alleges that he is in possession, not in his own right, but as shebait of a deity to whom the property has been dedicated, B's claim will fall under this rule.[2]

See also Note 46 to S. 47 and the cases cited therein.

16. Claim by Official Receiver or Official Assignee.—If the vesting order takes place before attachment, the Official Receiver can prefer a claim under this rule. But if the vesting order was subsequent to the attachment, then the claim of the Official Receiver does not fall under this rule, but is a statutory claim under S. 51 of the Provincial Insolvency Act which should be dealt with under S. 151 of the Code. Arts. 11 and 13 of the Limitation Act do not apply to the latter class of cases.[1]

O.21, R.58, Notes 17—20.

17. Claims by third persons.—The procedure under this rule applies, as has been seen in Note 1, ante, only to claims of third persons.[1] Pending suit by a creditor against his debtor's estate, the Administrator-General was authorised to collect the debts due to the deceased debtor. The creditor on obtaining decree in his suit attached a debt due to the deceased. It was held that the Administrator-General was entitled to make a claim under this rule and have the attachment raised.[2]

18. Claims by transferee of property from the judgment-debtor.—A transferee of property attached in execution of a decree is entitled to object under this rule to the attachment made subsequent to his transfer.[1] A simple mortgagee can also prefer a claim under this rule.[2] (See also Notes under R. 62.).

19. Assignee of decree from the judgment-debtor.—The transferee of a decree from the judgment-debtor can put in an application under this rule to remove an attachment of the decree made subsequent to the transfer.[1]

20. "Shall proceed to investigate the claim."—It is the duty of the Court to investigate a claim preferred to it under this rule,[1] unless it sees reason to reject it on the ground of delay. It ought not, without investigation, simply notify the claim in the sale proclamation,[2] although if the Court does pass such an order, it is not invalid and will be conclusive until set aside by a suit under R. 63.[3] Similarly the Court should not reject a claim without investigation merely on the ground that the question of possession or title is doubtful or complicated.[4]

O.21, R.58, Note 20.

As pointed out by Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment of the Board in Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Prasad (I.L.R. 15 Cal. 521 P.C.) "the Code does not prescribe the extent to which the investigation should go; and though in some cases it may be very proper that there should be as full an investigation as if a suit were instituted for the very purpose of trying the question, in other cases it may also be the most prudent and proper course to deliver an opinion on such facts as are before the subordinate judge at the time, leaving the aggrieved party to bring the suit which the law allows to him." It is not possible to define the amount of enquiry which constitutes an investigation. If the order purports to deal with the merits it must be taken that there has been an investigation.[5]

What is to be investigated is indicated by the next three following rules, viz., Rr. 59-61. The question to be decided is, whether on the date of the attachment, the judgment-debtor or the objector was in possession or where the Court is satisfied that the property was in the possession of the objector, it must be found whether he held it on his own account or in trust for the judgment-debtor.[6] The sole question to be investigated is, thus, one of possession.[7] Questions of legal right and title are not relevant, except so far as they may affect the decision as to whether the possession is on account of or in trust for the judgment-debtor or some other person.[8] To that extent the title may be part of the enquiry. But ultimate questions of trust,[9] or complicated questions like the benami nature of a transaction,[10] are not within the scope of the enquiry and are not intended to be gone into. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Sadasiva Ayyar in Ramaswami Chetty v. Mallappa[11] "in summary proceedings held in accordance with certain statutory provisions intended for speedy disposal of 'emergent' disputes, the Court may be prohibited from going into complicated questions of title or investigating complicated questions like fraud, trust and so on; while giving the party defeated in the summary enquiry, the right to have the whole matter and all the questions which are in dispute fully investigated in an ordinary regular suit. . . . The Court is bound to order release of the attached property if it finds possession in the claimant on his own account, even if there is title and disposing power remaining in the judgment-debtor."

The High Court of Allahabad has however held that it cannot be said that the Court acts without jurisdiction if it does not go into the question of possession but decides the claim on some other basis.[12] Similarly, where the claimant adduced no evidence as to possession,[13] or where the title of the claimant had been expressly negatived in a prior litigation to which he was a party,[14] it was held that the Court rightly decided the claim on the basis of title alone.

21. Proviso.—If the Court is of opinion that the application preferred under this rule has been designedly or unnecessarily delayed, it can refuse to investigate it. But if the Court does entertain the claim and investigate the same, it is bound to pass an order under R. 60 or 61. A dismissal on the ground of delay after investigation is illegal.[1]

An order rejecting a claim on the ground of delay has also to be set aside by a regular suit within one year from the date of the order. Otherwise the order is conclusive within the meaning of R. 63.[2] (See also Note 5 to R. 63.)

22. Dismissal for default.—See Note 4 to R. 63.

23. Effect of order—Res judicata.—An order passed on a claim petition disallowing the claim bars, on general principles of res judicata, a fresh application on the same grounds,[1] and is conclusive, between the parties, subject to the result of suit contemplated by R. 63.

But the order passed in a claim proceeding is only quoad the particular claimant or the particular property attached and cannot be regarded as a general decision enuring to the benefit of others who are not parties thereto.[2] Thus an order in favour of one of several decree-holders disallowing a claim cannot be availed of in favour of the other decree-holders who are not parties

O.21, R.58, Notes 23—24.

24. Appeal.—No appeal lies against an order allowing or rejecting a claim under this rule. The order is conclusive subject to the result of the suit contemplated by R. 63.[1] Under the special provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, such an order passed by an Assistant Collector, second class, is, however, appealable to the Collector, but the party aggrieved by the appellate order of the Collector is not barred from filing a suit under O. 21, R. 63.[1-a] There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an order dismissing a claim petition is a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such. According to the High Court of Madras it is a "judgment" and is appealable as such, and the period of limitation for the suit under R. 63 runs from the date of the appellate order.[2] The High Court of Rangoon has, on the other hand, held that the refusal of the summary remedy under O. 21, R. 58 leaves open the right of bringing a regular suit and have the question finally decided, and that it cannot therefore be a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 13 of the Letters Patent (Rangoon).[3]

Where the claim is one coming under S. 47, the order passed thereon is a decree and is appealable even though the objection was misdescribed as Evidence to be adduced by claimant.

R. 59 [S. 279.] The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached.

Synopsis.

1. The claimant or objector must adduce evidence.
2. "Some interest."
3. "Or was possessed of."
4. Limits of enquiry under Rr. 59-61. See Note 20 to R. 58.

Benami. See Note 20, Pt. (7) of R. 58, supra.
Onus of proof. See Note 1, Pts. (1) and (2).
Revision. See Note 25 to R. 58.

1. The claimant or objector must adduce evidence.—The burden is on the claimant to prove that on the date of the attachment he was in possession of the property attached.[1] If he proves that, then the burden of proving that he is not the owner or holds it in trust for the judgment-debtor is upon the decree-holder.[2]

2. "Some interest."—The claimant may raise an objection not only on the ground that he is in possession of the property attached but also on the ground that he has some interest in the property.[1] A beneficial interest is as much an interest within the meaning of the rule as a legal interest in the property attached.[2] The Chief Court of Burma[3] has held that a mortgagor without possession can prefer a claim on the ground that his interest in the property, viz., the equity of redemption cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree against the mortgagee in possession.

The rule does not mean that if the claimant establishes that he has some interest in the property he is entitled to succeed irrespective of the question of possession; nor does it imply that if he fails to establish the particular interest he sets up, his claim must be disallowed irrespective of the question of possession. In each of the cases mentioned in Rr. 60 and 61, the Court must determine the question of possession of the judgment-debtor and cannot base its decision merely on the question of validity of the claim or of title to the attached property. "Some interest" means such interest as would render the possession of the judgment-debtor, possession, not on his account, but on account of or in trust for the claimant.[4] O.21, R.59, Notes 2—4.

Release of property from attachment.

[1877—S. 280; 1859—S. 220. See S. 63.]

Synopsis.

1. Release of property from attachment—General.
2. Property in possession of third person.
3. Property in possession of judgment-debtor.
4. Partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person.
5. Effect of an order of release.
6. Appeal.
7. Revision. See Note 25 to R. 58.

1. Release of property from attachment—General.—A release from attachment can be made under this rule, only if the conditions prescribed in this rule are satisfied, namely:—

(1) That the property was not when attached in the possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him or in the occupancy of a tenant paying rent to him.

(2) That the property being in the possession of the judgment-debtor at such time, it was so, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of, or in trust for, some other person viz., the claimant.

(3) That the property was in possession of the judgment-debtor partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person.[1]

In the last case, the release is to be ordered to the extent to which the possession of the claimant is established[2]. In such a case the Court should define the share of the judgment-debtor and that of the claimant and sell only the former.[3]

An order of release should be unconditional.[4] It has been held by the High Court of Patna in the undermentioned case[5] that the Court has, apart from this rule, an inherent power to release property from illegal attachment in proper cases.

2. Property in possession of third person.—If it is found that the claimant was in possession and that such possession was on his own account, the claimant is entitled to an order of release under this rule,[1] notwithstanding the fact that the judgment-debtor may have some beneficial interest in, or title over, the property.[2] Thus in a case where the wife of the debtor claimed the Government securities attached by the creditor and proved that they were in her name, that she dealt with them as owner and that she had separate properties of her own, it was held that the claim should not be dismissed on the mere suspicion that she might be holding it for the benefit of her husband.[3]

3. Property in possession of judgment-debtor.—If the property is found to be in the possession of the judgment-debtor, then the attachment should continue unless it is established that such possession was on account of, or in trust for the claimant.

was not liable to attachment.[1]

The words "possession in trust for" means possession as servant, or agent having no right to possession on his own account,[2] i.e., possession of such a character as to be really the possession of the debtor.[3]

4. Partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person. —The High Court of Rangoon has held in the undermentioned case[1] that a mortgagee in possession is so partly on his own account, i.e., to the extent of his right as a mortgagee in possession, and partly on account of the mortgagor i.e., to the extent of the mortgagor's interest, and that the Court is bound to investigate into the claim of a mortgagor and order a release to the extent of his interest when the mortgaged properties are attached in execution of a decree against the mortgagee. See also Note 3 to R. 62.

Where in an objection preferred under this rule, the Court finds that the claimant has a half share in the attached moveable property, the proper course, according to the High Court of Calcutta, is to release the entire property, and to proceed by way of attachment under R. 47, ante.[2]

5. Effect of an order of release.—An order of release from attachment under this rule is only provisional and is subject to the result of the suit contemplated by R. 63. The attachment is merely suspended pending the result of the suit and if the decree-holder succeeds in the suit the attachment will revive. An alienation made in the interval cannot prevail against the claim of the attaching decree-holder who eventually succeeds in a suit brought by him under this rule.[1]

Disallowance of claim to property attached.

R. 61. [S. 281.] Where the Court is satisfied that the property was, at the time it was attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, the Court shall disallow the claim.

Synopsis.

1. Disallowance of claim.
2. Order without dealing with the question of possession.
3. Effect of order under this rule.
4. Appeal.
5. Revision.

1. Disallowance of claim.—Where the property attached is found to be in the possession of the judgment-debtor in his own account, or if the claimant is in possession as trustee for the judgment-debtor, the Court is bound to disallow the claim under this rule.[1]

2. Order without dealing with the question of possession.—As already pointed out in Note 20 to R. 58, the sole question to be considered in the investigation of a claim is the question of possession. But if the Court erroneously does not consider the question of possession, but decides it on some other ground, e.g., on the ground of title, the order cannot be considered to be one passed without jurisdiction and a nullity. It will be nevertheless conclusive unless set aside in a suit under R. 63.[1] But such an order can be revised by the High Court.[2].

3. Effect of order under this rule.—An order disallowing a claim under this rule is only provisional and if the defeated claimant succeeds in the suit filed under R. 63, his rights as on the date of attachment will be restored. If the Court auction sale takes place, the auction purchaser's rights will be subject to the result of the suit.[1]

1. Scope of the rule.—The rule is an enabling provision which empowers the Court to direct the continuance of the attachment subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of a person not in possession.

The question of the existence of a mortgage over the property attached, can be raised in two ways and at two stages in execution. One is, when the Court has to prepare the proclamation for sale by public auction. This is provided for in R. 66 of this order. That rule enacts, that the sale proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible, any encumbrance to which the property is subject after giving notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. The other stage is that provided for by this rule. The difference between the two provisions is very important. As pointed out by the Allahabad High Court in the case cited below[1] where properties are sold subject to a mortgage under this rule, the Court does so after being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage and sells only the judgment-debtor's right of redemption so that the purchaser does not acquire any greater rights than that of redeeming the mortgage. The order is conclusive as to the rights of the parties and if no suit is filed within the period of one year prescribed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act, the mortgagee or the purchaser as the case may be cannot either as plaintiff or defendant assert the right denied by that order.[2] In the case of a proclamation of sale issued under R. 66, the Court does not decide the question whether the mortgage subsists or not and the purchaser buys the property subject to such risks as the notice might involve; he is not precluded from questioning the validity of the mortgage.[3] The Chief Court of Oudh has in the undermentioned case,[4] held that there is no difference between an order passed under this rule and an order passed under R. 66 so far as the auction purchasers are concerned. It is submitted that that view is not correct.

The rule does not apply to claims arising in execution of a mortgage-decree.[5]

2. "Subject to mortgage."—Has the executing Court power to decide under this rule, the question of the truth or validity of the mortgage? In other words, if the Court rejects a claim of the mortgagee on the ground, the mortgage is not true, is he bound to file a suit under Art. 11 of the Limitation Act? Upon this point there is a conflict of judicial opinion. The High Court of Bombay[1] and the High Court of Allahabad in a case decided under the old Code[2] have held that the rule is only a provision enabling the Court to continue an attachment subject to a mortgage if it finds a mortgage exists and that the Court has no power to declare the mortgage invalid. The ratio of these decisions is that it is only where the Court is satisfied as to the existence of the mortgage, it can act under this rule, but that where it is not so satisfied, it can do nothing under this rule, but can only notify the mortgage under R. 66. The High Court of Allahabad in a case decided under the present Code,[3] the High Courts of Madras[4] and Rangoon[5] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[6] have, on the other hand, held that an order rejecting the claim of a mortgagee on the ground that the mortgage is not true or valid is an order which will be conclusive unless set aside in a suit under R. 63. As pointed out by Ashworth, J., of the Allahabad High Court, the expression "where the Court is satisfied" confers jurisdiction on the Court to come to a finding of fact as to the existence of the mortgage. Without such finding of fact it cannot be said to be satisfied about it. The rule, in effect, provides for two alternative or mutually exclusive orders. One is an order that, as the mortgage exists, the attachment shall be continued subject to it, and the other is that no mortgage shall be deemed to exist. The latter order, no less than the former, is contemplated by R. 63.[6-a] It may appear anamalous that an executing Court should thus be given power to decide as to the validity and existence of a mortgage in favour of a third party the value of which may exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. But as already pointed out in R. 58, Note 11 the mortgagee is not bound to prefer a claim. If he chooses to avail himself of the advantages of the speedy and summary remedy provided for in this chapter, he must suffer its disadvantages as well.[7]

3. Mortgage in favour of a person not in possession.—The rule refers only to the case of a claim of a mortgagee not in possession. Can a mortgagee in possession ask the Court to direct the continuance of the attachment subject to his mortgage? The High Court of Bombay[1] has held that a mortgagee in possession, is not in possession as trustee for the judgment-debtor but on his own account and that, therefore, he is entitled to a release of the attachment under R. 60 and not merely to an order directing the sale subject to his mortgage. The High Courts of Calcutta[2] and Patna[3] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh[4] while agreeing with the view of the Bombay High Court that he is entitled to a release under R. 60, have held that in cases where the intention of the decree-holder is to attach only the equity of redemption and not the whole property, the Court can order the continuance of the attachment of the equity of redemption alone. The High Court of Rangoon[5] has also held that the equity of redemption in a possessory mortgage can be attached and sold.

4. Notification of mortgage or charge.—See Note 1 above.

5. Effect of order under this rule.—The effect of an order under this rule continuing an attachment subject to a mortgage is, that the purchaser at the auction sale takes only the mortgagor's right of redemption.[1] But he is entitled to file a suit questioning the bona fides and validity of the mortgage within a year of the order.[2] If the Court disallows the claim of the mortgagee the order is conclusive against him unless he files a suit within one year to vacate the order.[3]

LAHORE.

The following rule shall be added after Rule 63:—

"63-A. (1) Where the property attached is a debt, the Court executing the decree shall investigate the claims of the judgment-debtor against the garnishee in respect thereto and may order the garnishee to pay the amount of the debt to the Court.

(2) The garnishee shall be deemed to be a party to the suit in which the decree was passed within the meaning of S. 47, and subject to the provisions of that section the orders passed by the Court as a result of such investigation shall be conclusive between the judgment-debtor and the garnishee and no separate suit relating thereto shall lie."

RANGOON.

The following Rules 63-A to 63-G shall be added after Rule 63, namely:—

"GARNISHEE ORDERS

Payment of debt into Court.

63-A. Where a debt has been attached under Rule 46, the debtor prohibited under Clause (i) of sub-Rule (1) of Rule 46 (hereinafter called the garnishee) may pay the amount of the debt due from him to the judgment-debtor into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

Notice calling on garnishee to show cause against payment into Court.

63-B. Where a debt has been attached under Rule 46, and the garnishee does not pay the amount of the debt into Court in accordance with the foregoing rule, the Court, on the application of the decree-holder, may order a notice to issue calling upon the garnishee to appear before the Court and show cause why he should not pay into Court the debt due from him to the judgment-debtor, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree together with the costs of execution. A copy of such notice shall, unless otherwise ordered by the Court, be served on the judgment-debtor.

Procedure when the garnishee fails to make payment into Court or disputes liability.

63-C. (1) If the garnishee does not pay into Court the amount of the debt due from him to the judgment-debtor, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree and the costs of execution, and if he does not appear in answer to the notice issued under R. 63-B, or does not dispute his liability to pay such debt to the judgment-debtor, then the Court may order the garnishee to comply with the terms of such notice, and on such order execution may issue against the garnishee as though such order were a decree against him.

(2) If the garnishee appears in answer to the notice issued under R. 63-B and disputes his liability to pay the debt attached, the Court, instead of making an order as aforesaid, may order that any issue or question necessary for determining his liability be tried as though it were an issue in a suit, and may proceed to determine such issue, and upon the determination of such issue shall pass such order upon the notice as shall be just.

Procedure when third person claims an interest in the attached debt.

63-D. Whenever in any proceedings under the foregoing rules it is alleged by the garnishee that the debt attached belongs to some third person, or that any third person has lien or charge upon or interest in it, the Court may order such third person to appear and state the nature and particulars of his claim, if any, upon such debt and prove the same if necessary.

Order of Court after hearing all interested persons.

63-E. After hearing such third person and any other person who may subsequently be ordered to appear, or in the case of such third or other person not appearing as ordered, the Court may pass such order as is provided in the foregoing rules, or make such other order as the Court shall think fit, upon such terms in all cases with respect to the lien, charge or interest, if any, of such third or other person as shall seem just and reasonable.

Payment by garnishee constitutes valid discharge.

63-F. Payment made by or levied by execution upon the garnishee in accordance with any order made under these rules shall be a valid discharge to him as against the judgment-debtor, and any other person ordered to appear under these rules, for the amount paid or levied although such order or the judgment may be set aside or reversed.

Costs of garnishee proceedings.

63-G. The costs of any application for the attachment of a debt or under the foregoing rules, and of any proceedings arising from or incidental to such application, shall be in the discretion of the Court. Costs awarded to the decree-holder shall, unless otherwise directed, be retained out of the money recovered by him under the garnishee order and in priority to the amount of his decree."

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "where a claim or an objection is preferred the party against whom an order is made" have been substituted for the words "The party against whom an order under Sections 280, 281 or 282 is passed". The result of the change is to widen the scope of the rule so as to include any order passed on an investigation of a claim.[1] See also Notes 4 and 5, infra.

2. Scope of the rule.—The rule gives a statutory right of suit to the party against whom an order is passed in the claim proceedings.[1] Such a suit has to be filed within one year from the date of the order as prescribed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act. If no suit is filed the order becomes conclusive, as to the rights asserted, in the objection proceedings.[2] The policy of the legislature is to secure a speedy settlement of questions of title raised in execution sales and the finding of the Court in the claim proceedings is a summary decision from which the suit allowed under this rule is in the nature of an appeal. The object of the legislature in prescribing a suit by way of appeal is to give the parties an opportunity of placing their respective cases fully before the Court because a summary investigation might not furnish sufficient material for a decision by an appellate Court.[3] In a suit filed under this rule, the Court is not restricted only to the question of possession and questions of title can be fully gone into.[4] O.21, R.63, Notes 2—3.

The object of the suit is to establish the right which has been negatived by the claim order[5] and is in substance to set it aside.[6] But there is no other restriction prescribed as regards the nature of such a suit, though the defeated party is placed at a disadvantage as regards the period of limitation for filing the suit.[7] Thus his right of suit under this rule is not, in any way, governed or qualified by the Proviso to S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act and a suit cannot be dismissed on the ground that a further relief than a mere declaration has not been asked for.[8] Similarly a suit under this rule by a defeated creditor impeaching, on the ground of fraud, a transfer by the judgment-debtor, need not be framed as a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors.[9] On the other hand, a plaintiff in a suit under this rule is not precluded from asking for other reliefs than a mere declaration of the right denied to him by the claim order.[9-a]

The order passed in the claim proceedings, as the rule itself says, is subject to the result of the suit.[10] The right restored to the parties on the termination of the suit is the right which they asked the Court to give a decision upon on the date of attachment, and the decision places the parties in status quo ante either by vacating or confirming the order.[11]

3. "The party against whom an order is made".—The rule does not speak of any party but only the party against whom the order is made[1] and the right of suit and the conclusiveness of the order in the absence of such suit is only with reference to such a party. A person who is not a party to the claim proceedings and against whom there is no order, is not affected by the order, although he may be interested in the property attached; nor is he bound to file a suit under this rule. Thus a judgment-debtor who is not, in fact, a party to the claim proceedings does not, in the eye of law, become such by reason solely of his being the judgment-debtor.[2] He cannot be regarded as a necessary party to the claim enquiry and it depends on the facts and circumstances of each case whether he was in fact a party.[3] In objection proceedings the contest is really between the decree-holder who asserts that the property is liable to attachment and the claimant who alleges that it is not in the actual or constructive possession of the judgment-debtor and therefore not liable to attachment. The order made in such a case is either that the property is released from attachment as not being in the possession of the judgment-debtor or the claim be disallowed. But such an order does not affect the right or title of the judgment-debtor to the property. The order is only conclusive between the claimant and the decree-holder who is proceeding against the property.[4] Hence a suit by the judgment-debtor against the successful claimant[5] or a suit by the defeated claimant against the judgment-debtor,[6] in cases where the judgment-debtor is not a party to the claim enquiry is not affected by the provisions of this rule and is not governed by the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act. But if the judgment-debtor was in fact a party to the claim, he is bound by the order passed therein and he can also file a suit under this rule in case the order is against him.[7]

A Hindu reversioner, whose right to the estate is contingent and accrues only after the death of the limited owner, is not bound to sue within one year by reason of his having preferred a claim unsuccessfully in execution of a decree against the widow. He is not debarred by reason of the claim order from filing a suit after the death of the widow.[8] ceedings whether with or without investigation. An order dismissing a claim for default is an order which comes within the purview of this rule.[1] But the rule does not take away the right of the claimant to have the order of dismissal for default set aside either under O. 9, R. 9 or under S. 151 of the Code.[2] See also Note 1 to O. 9, R 1. O.21, R.63, Notes 4—5.

5. Order refusing to investigate.—S. 283 of the old Code applied only to orders passed under Ss. 280, 281 and 282, and consequently it was held that an order passed without investigation rejecting a claim on the ground of delay was not an order contemplated by the section and hence the one year's rule of limitation would not apply to such a case.[1] Under the present rule, orders passed whether with, or without, investigation are placed on the same footing, with the result that, if the party against whom the order of rejection is made under the proviso to R. 58 does not file a suit within one year, the order becomes conclusive against him.[2] Thus an order passed on a claim, that the allegation of the claimant will be notified to the bidders as the petition was put in too late, has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras[3] to be a conclusive order against the claimant within the meaning of this rule.

But an order refusing to entertain a claim on the ground that the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain it, has, however, been held, not to amount to an order under this rule.[4] Thus an order saying "whatever right the defendant has will pass by the sale. The petition does not require any investigation. The claim put forward by the petitioner will be noted in the sale proclamation"[5] or an order "sale stopped. The claim cannot be investigated by this Court. Petition dismissed"[6] has been held not to amount to an order against the claimant under this rule. Similarly an order merely recording the objections by reason of the claimant withdrawing or not pressing his claim is not, according to the High Courts of Madras,[7] Bombay[8] and Rangoon[9] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,[10] an order negativing the claim and, therefore, is not an order against the claimant within the meaning of this rule. The proper order to be passed in such a case is to record on the petition "withdrawn" and not "dismissed" and even if the Court has stated that it is dismissed, the claimant is not affected by the order and is not bound to sue within one year from the date of the order.[11] A Full Bench of the Chief Court of Oudh[12] has, however, held that an order passed on a claim which is not pressed, and therefore dismissed, is conclusive against the claimant until set aside in a suit under this rule.

Where, after the filing of a claim, the execution petition itself is struck off for default and the claim petition is thereupon ordered to be closed, there is no order against the claimant so as to compel him to file a suit.[13]

The High Court of Calcutta[14] has held that the present rule and Art. 11 of the Limitation Act have no application to a consent order. The High Court of Madras[15] has, on the other hand, held that an order passed by consent, without objection, is an 'order against' the claimant or the decree-holder as the case may be, within the meaning of this rule. O.21, R.63, Notes 5—6.

6. Attachment before judgment.—The rule applies also to orders on claims preferred to property attached before judgment.[1] Hence a party aggrieved by reason of the dismissal of his claim in respect of an attachment before judgment is bound to file a suit under this rule, and the suit, if instituted, cannot abate by reason of the dismissal of the suit in which the attachment was effected.[2] But with regard to the period of limitation for such suits the question arises whether Art. 11 of the Limitation Act would apply to such a case. That article, in terms, applies only to an order on a claim preferred to, or objection made to the attachment of, property attached in execution of a decree. Therefore, if the claim is preferred and decided before decree, Art. 11 would not apply and the period of limitation to set aside the order would be governed by the residuary Art. 120. But where, after decree, the decree-holder applies for execution and a claim to the attachment is thereafter raised and decided in the course of execution, it has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras that Art. 11 would apply.[3] The reason is that an attachment before judgment becomes one in execution by virtue of the decree-holder's application for execution, and a claim preferred thereafter may be considered to be one preferred to property attached in execution of a decree.

Under O. 38, R. 9, the Court is bound to withdraw the attachment upon the dismissal of the suit. The reversal of the dismissal does not operate so as to revive the attachment. A fresh attachment is necessary and the objector is entitled to prefer a fresh claim in respect of such attachment and the period of one year should be counted from the date when such claim is rejected.[4] Under R. 13 of O. 38, a Provincial Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to attach immoveable property before judgment or to determine any claim or objection in respect of such an attachment.[5]

7. May institute a suit to establish the right which he claims.—An order in a claim proceeding is not conclusive; a suit may be brought to contest it within the period prescribed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act.[1] This right of suit cannot be defeated or affected by reason of the fact that the property has been sold away in Court auction.[2]

The suit contemplated by the rule is a suit to establish the right claimed in the enquiry,[3] that is, the liability or non-liability of the property attached to satisfy the decree under execution, and not the liability of third persons to satisfy the decree by the sale of their right, title and interest in the property.[4] The suit is in essence a continuation of the execution proceedings[5], though the scope of the enquiry is much wider. What is decided in the suit is the question of title and not merely the question of possession.[6] Suits brought under this rule are substantive suits and must be tried like any other suit, subject to the ordinary rules of procedure and evidence.[7] They are not limited by any special standard of evidence or law. The claimant may, if necessary, thrash out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense.[8]

In a suit by the decree-holder under this rule he must establish that on the date of the attachment the judgment-debtor had a subsisting right to the property and the suit must be tried as if it were a suit by the judgment-debtor himself for possession.[9] In a suit by a defeated claimant the discharge of the attachment order cannot properly be asked for. The claimant's remedy is to establish his title by a declaratory decree and to then carry the decree to the Court by which the order of attachment was issued and such Court is bound to recognise the adjudication and govern itself accordingly.[10]

8. Parties to the suit.—As already pointed out in the previous note, an attaching decree-holder, whose attachment has been raised at the instance of a claimant, is not bound to file a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors if he wants to impeach the transfer in favour of the claimant as fraudulent, under S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. Nor is he bound to implead the other creditors as party defendants.[1] Nor is the judgment-debtor a necessary party to such a suit.[2] It is enough if he impleads the successful claimant. It is not necessary even to implead any transferee from the successful claimant, as he is an alienee pendente lite.[3] O.21, R.63, Notes 8—9.

The right of suit of the decree-holder enures also to the benefit of the auction-purchaser. He can thus file a suit to declare the mortgage subject to which the attachment and sale took place is not true and valid.[4]

Where a defeated claimant files a suit under this rule the judgment-debtor is a necessary party, especially, if the objector seeks to establish his title both against the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder.[5] If the properties are sold away in Court auction, it is not necessary to implead the decree-holder. It is enough if the auction purchaser alone is impleaded.[6] The right of suit under this rule is not personal to the claimant; a transferee from the defeated claimant can also sue under this rule.[7]

9. Consequential relief if and when should be asked.—As has been seen in Note 2 above, this rule does not contain any limitation as regards the nature of the suit to be filed and does not exclude any particular prayer out of its scope.[1] The suit is of a comprehensive nature and the words "to establish the right" are wide enough to cover not only a mere declaratory suit but also one for consequential reliefs such as the recovery of the value of the property if it had been already sold[2] or for possession.[3] But the plaintiff is not bound to ask for a consequential relief. He may ask for a mere declaration and the suit cannot be dismissed as offending the proviso to S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act 1877.[4] If the defeated claimant asks for a bare declaration and succeeds, a subsequent suit for possession is not barred under O. 2, R. 2.[5]

10. Damages for wrongful attachment—If can be asked for under this rule.—A defeated claimant can, in a suit under this rule, claim damages for wrongful attachment,[1] or the value of the property if it had been already sold.[2] In order to sustain a claim for damages, it is not necessary for the claimant to allege and prove malice, or want of reasonable and probable cause, on the part of the decree-holder in resisting the claim.[3]

11. Suit not necessary if property is released from attachment.—When the attachment is withdrawn by the decree-holder himself subsequent to the claim order, the object of a suit is gained and the defeated claimant is not obliged to bring a suit.[1] As pointed out by Sir Charles Sargent, C. J., in Gopal Purushottam v. Bai Divali[2] "when the plaintiff withdrew his attachment, the parties were restored to the status quo ante. The object of the claim which was preferred by the defendant was, as contemplated by S. 278, Civil Procedure Code, to obtain the removal of the attachment, and when that attachment was removed by the judgment-creditor's own act....., there was no longer an attachment or any other proceedings in execution on which the order could operate to the prejudice of the claimant and, therefore, no necessity for bringing a suit to set aside the order."

On the same principle where the decree is satisfied or set aside or reversed or the decretal amount is paid into Court under R. 55 or where the attachment is voluntarily withdrawn by the decree-holder himself,[3] or the attachment is raised owing to the default of the decree-holder under R. 57 of this order[4], the same result follows namely that the parties are put back in the same position as they were in, before execution proceedings were lodged, and the claimant is not compelled to institute a suit within a year from the date of the claim order. When the attachment is raised the cause of action for the claim petition or for any suit founded upon an order in that claim also falls to the ground.[5] O.21, R.63, Notes 11—13.

But the withdrawal or raising of the attachment or the satisfaction of the decree should, according to the High Courts of Calcutta[6], Madras[7] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[8], have taken place within the period of one year prescribed by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act. The High Court of Lahore[9] has, on the other hand, held that it makes no difference whether the attachment is raised within or beyond a year after the order. It is submitted that the former view is correct. As pointed by their Lordships of the Madras High Court in Koyanna v. Dossy, I.L.R. 29 Mad 225 "to hold that the right of an unsuccessful claimant to bring a suit remains in a state of suspended animation for an indefinite period after the expiration of a year from the date of the order against him liable to be revived at any moment by the payment off of the amount of the decree, would lead to great inconvenience."

12. Claimant can pay money under protest.—If an objector fails in his claim, he is not obliged to file a suit. He may prevent the sale of the property attached by paying the decree-amount under protest and then sue the decree-holder for the recovery of the money so paid under compulsion.[1]

13. Other remedies open to a claimant or objector.—No appeal or review[1] lies from an order passed in a claim proceeding. The only remedy of the defeated party is to file a suit under this rule within the period of limitation provided by Art. 11 of the Limitation Act.[1-a] In the absence of such a suit he cannot either as plaintiff or as defendant, challenge the validity of the order in any matter or proceeding.[2] The mere fact that a suit has been filed against him within one year or that he has filed his defence within one year of the claim order does not affect the conclusiveness of the order.[3] It has been held in the undermentioned case[4] that a defeated claimant cannot also obstruct the auction-purchaser in delivery proceedings under R. 99 of this order.

The dismissal of a claim is however no bar to the claimant applying to set aside the Court-auction-sale after making the necessary deposit under R. 89 of this order as a person interested in the property sold.[5]

14. Objector can plead invalidity of attachment.—A defeated claimant or an objector suing under this rule is entitled to plead that there was no attachment or that the attachment effected was not legal. For instance, he can show that the executing Court had no jurisdiction to attach and therefore his rights are not affected in any way by the claim order.[1] In Muthia Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty[2] their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that, for purposes of Art. 11 of the Limitation Act, the property to which a claim is made must be property which has been de facto attached "unless there has been attachment, there can be no order made on an objection lodged to it, nor can any claim be made to the property so attached; and without such an order, there is no terminus a quo for the running of limitation, and with this the limitation itself is non-existent".

But an objector cannot question the legality or validity of the decree against the judgment-debtor on the ground that it is colourable or collusive.[3]

15. Limitation for suits under this rule.—Art. 11, Sch. 1 of the Limitation Act, IX of 1908, prescribes the period of one year from the date of the order as the time within which a suit has to be brought under this rule. "The policy of the Act is to secure speedy settlement of questions of title raised in execution sales and for that reason a year is fixed at the time within which the suit is to be brought".[1] The article applies to orders passed whether with or without investigation.[2] In the case of a minor, however, the period of limitation is subject to be modified by virtue of S. 6 of the Limitation Act and he can file a suit within one year after he attains majority.[3] As to whether this article applies to orders on claims preferred in respect of attachments before judgment, see Note 6, ante.

16. Subject to the result of the suit the order is conclusive.—As has been seen in Note 13 ante, an order passed in a claim proceeding is conclusive against the defeated party unless he brings a suit within one year from the date of the order. It is conclusive not only between the parties to the order[1]

but binds also their representatives in interest.[2] Thus the auction-purchaser is bound by an order against the decree-holder made under R. 62.[3] Conversely, the auction-purchaser is also entitled to plead in bar to a suit by the defeated claimant that the order rejecting his claim has become conclusive against him.[4]

But the conclusiveness of the order is subject to the result of the suit. In other words, the order is only a provisional one and is liable to be set aside by the decision given in the suit filed under this rule.[5] The effect of such a suit is to keep the execution proceedings pending till the decision of the suit. If the suit succeeds the proceedings continue. If the suit fails the proceedings fail simultaneously.[6] If after a claim order the successful claimant transfers the property in dispute to a third person, such transferee also takes it subject to the result of the suit by the decree-holder. If the decree-holder succeeds in the suit the attachment is revived, and the transferee cannot assert his rights against him.[7] In other words the transfer is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.[8] The same principle will apply where after the claim is rejected, the properties are sold in Court-auction; the auction-purchaser's right in such a case is subject to be defeated by the claimant succeeding in the suit.[9]

It has been seen in Note 23 to R. 58 that where one of several decree-holder obtains an order in his favour disallowing a claim, it cannot be availed of by the other decree-holders who are not parties to the claim. But where the same property is attached by different decree-holders in execution, and on objection by a third party, the attachment under all the decrees are raised, it has been held, that the success obtained by a single decree-holder in a suit under this rule enures also to the benefit of the other decree-holders who have not filed suits.[10]

17. Property in respect of which the order is conclusive.—The claim order is conclusive between the parties to the proceedings only as regards the particular property in dispute.[1] Thus where a claim was allowed and the decree-holder filed a suit under this rule and after the dismissal thereof applied for the arrest of the judgment-debtor or for the attachment of other properties of the judgment-debtor more than 3 years after his original application for attachment, it was held that the application for arrest was barred by limitation as it could not be considered to be a continuance or revival of the previous proceedings for attachment.[2] Where, however, the decree-holder succeeds in the suit and applies thereafter for proceeding with the execution originally started by him against the property, the application must be deemed to be a continuation of the previous proceedings and is not barred.[3]

18. Effect of decision in claim cases as to possession.—The claim order is conclusive as to the successful party's right to possession.[1] But the effect of the decision as to possession in other proceedings in which the question may again arise is not the matter to which the words "shall be conclusive" are directly addressed. Thus, if attachment is removed subsequent to the claim order and later another attachment is made the question of possession is a question of possession at a different date.[2]

19. Burden of proof in a suit under this rule.—In a suit brought under this rule the burden of establishing the right claimed is upon the plaintiff. In Jamahar v. Askaran[1] it was observed by Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C.J., that where the suit is by the defeated claimant he must show affirmatively that not only the ostensible but the real title also is in him. The burden is not discharged by merely pointing to the innocent appearance of the instrument under which he claims. He must show that they are as good as they look and this principle has been accepted by the various High Courts and applied in a number of decisions.[2] But in V. E. A. R. M. Firm v. Maung Ba Kyin, I.L.R. 5 Rang. 852 their Lordships of the Judicial Committee made the following observation: "They" (the defeated claimants-plaintiffs) "being the ostensible owners of the property under a duly registered deed and a deed of transfer, obviously the party claiming to attach the property for somebody else's debt, not their debt, but the debt of the original debtor, must show that the sale was a fraudulent one, and that could only be done in this case by showing utter inadequacy of consideration". Their Lordships then proceeded to examine the various items of consideration and upheld the transaction in favour of the plaintiffs. Does this observation change the law as regards the onus of proof? As pointed out by their Lordships of the High Courts of Madras[3] and Patna[4] the Judicial Committee did not consider the question of the burden of proof as such in the above case and the observation should be understood as applying only to the particular facts of the case before it. In Appadurai v. Vellayan Chettiar[5] it was observed that in cases under this rule the burden of proving the validity of the alienation is on the plaintiff. "The defendant however cannot escape the burden at some stage or other. If the plaintiff produces his deed and swears that it is genuine and for full consideration, and the defendants have nothing to say to the contrary, the plaintiff will succeed, and where the burden of the plaintiff is so light, it is scarcely worth arguing whether it is more correct to say that the burden is originally upon the defendants or upon the plaintiff. But where the defendant has something substantial to say to the contrary, the real burden must inevitably fall upon the plaintiff to establish the right which he claims".

In the case of a dismissal of a claim without investigation on the ground of delay, it has, however, been held that the burden is upon the defendant to show that the registered deed of transfer in favour of the plaintiff (defeated claimant) is fraudulent.[6]

20. Defence of fraudulent transfer by the judgment-debtor if can be raised in the suit.—In a suit by a defeated claimant under this rule, the decree-holder defendant can set up in defence that the transfer in favour of the claimant is voidable under S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. There is no bar to the setting up of such a plea in defence.[1]

21. Jurisdiction.—In a suit brought under this rule, where the sole question between the parties is whether the property attached is or is not liable to be attached and sold, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the amount of the decree, where the value of the property exceeds that amount. If, however, the value of the property is less than the decree amount, then the value for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property.[1]

But if the judgment-debtor is added as a party and a declaration of title as against him also is prayed for, then the suit should be valued as on the value of the property attached.[2]

The rule says nothing of the nature of the suit or the Court in which the suit is to be brought; this therefore depends on the nature of the claim and the right sought to be enforced. Art. 20 of the Sch. II of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act excludes a suit under this rule from the cognisance of the Court of Small Causes. Under Art. 23 of that Act suits under Art. 11 of the Limitation Act are also excepted from the cognisance of Courts of Small Causes. Hence a suit under this rule cannot be filed in a Provincial Small Cause Court.[3] An order passed in a claim petition in the Presidency Small Cause Court is however final under S. 37 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act XV of 1882 subject to the right of a new trial.[4]

22. Valuation of suit for Court-fees.—A suit for a declaration as to the liability or non-liability of the property to be attached is a suit to set aside a summary order and is chargeable with a fixed Court-fee under Schedule II, Art. 17, Cl. (1) of the Court-Fees Act.[1] But if the defeated claimant also asks for consequential reliefs then such reliefs have also to be valued and Court-fee paid thereon.[2] The test is what is the quantum of interest which the plaintiff wants to establish.[3]

23. Insolvency of judgment-debtor.—A suit under this rule by a decree-holder to set aside an order allowing a claim to an attachment effected before the insolvency of the judgment-debtor does not require the leave of the insolvency Court under S. 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.[1]

24. Effect of attachment on adverse possession.—The High Court of Madras[1] has held that an attachment does not arrest the running of limitation in favour of a person holding adversely to the judgment-debtor. The fact that such person prefers a claim under R. 58 before the expiry of the statutory period of 12 years, does not prevent him from pleading successfully that on the date of the suit, he has acquired a right by prescription. In the undermentioned case,[2] however, an opinion to the contrary was expressed by Mr. Justice Rankin. He observed "Attachment is not merely to take property into the custody of the Court, its main point is to crystalise the rights of the parties as at a given point of time. Until attachment, a judgment-creditor cannot litigate in his debtor's place to assert his debtor's rights while the attachment lasts no new interest can be created to defeat it." The observation is, however, obiter and the effect of attachment as such, on adverse possession, was not considered.

25. Costs.—According to the High Courts of Calcutta,[1] and Madras,[2] the Court cannot in a suit under this rule order the payment of costs incurred in the claim proceedings in favour of the successful party. The High Court of Rangoon[3] has, on the other hand, held that the successful party in the suit is entitled to the costs incurred in the claim proceedings. The reason given is that the defeated party has no right of appeal against the order and the suit under this rule being in the nature of an appeal, success in the suit will entitle him also to the costs of the miscellaneous proceedings under R. 58.

26. Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order on a claim or an objection preferred under R. 58. See Note 24 to R. 58. A decree passed in a suit under this rule is, however, appealable under S. 96.

27. Revision.—See Note 25 to R. 58.

Synopsis.

1 "Any Court executing a decree."
2. "May order."
3. "Attached by it."
4. Sale without attachment.
5. "Liable to sale."
6. Sale of property not belonging to the judgment-debtor.
7. "Such portion thereof as may be found necessary."
8. "Party entitled under the decree."

1. "Any Court executing a decree."—As to the power of an executing Court to order the sale of property situated outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, see S. 38, Note 6 and the undermentioned case.[1]

Where the same property is under attachment in execution of decrees of several Courts, the sale thereof must be ordered by the Court of the highest grade. But a sale by a Court of inferior grade is not a nullity. See S. 63 and the notes thereunder.

Rr. 64 to 73 are applicable to the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. See S. 210, sub-S. (3), Cl. (b) of the Act.

2. "May order."—The term "may" in this rule does not confer a discretion on the Court to order or refuse to order a sale; it is obligatory on it to do so when a valid application for such order and a valid attachment have been made.[1]

Where a sale in execution is set aside (for instance on the ground of fraud) and the purchaser who is not a party to the decree is dispossessed, he is entitled to compensation for the improvements made by him on the property. It is not necessary in such a case to inquire whether the auction purchaser believed in good faith that he was entitled to the property, the order of the Court under which the sale was held being itself a sufficient protection. At any rate the "good faith" required does not go beyond an honest belief (though it may be negligent), on the purchaser's part in the validity of his title. See General Clauses Act, S. 3(20).[2]

As to the effect of a reversal, or the setting aside of a decree, on the title of the auction purchaser at a sale in execution of such decree, see Note 13 to S. 144.

3. "Attached by it."—The rule contemplates that the property should be under attachment before its sale is ordered. Where a property has been attached, the attachment cannot be said to have come to an end by the mere fact that an order is passed releasing the property from the attachment, so long

O 21, R. 64, Notes 3—5.

Though the rule contains the words "attached by it" it has been held by the Madras High Court that it does not forbid a sale where the attachment has been made by another Court.[2]

4. Sale without attachment.—A property must be attached before it can be ordered to be sold under this rule.[1] If, however, it is sold in execution without there being a prior attachment what is the effect? There is a conflict of decisions as to whether the sale in such a case is one without jurisdiction or whether the absence of attachment amounts only to an irregularity. As to this, see S. 51, Note 4 and the undermentioned cases.[2]

5. "Liable to sale."—A Court has no jurisdiction under this rule to order a sale unless the property is "liable to sale". The Court is therefore bound to hear objections to the saleability of a property before it orders its sale.[1] A decree for money though capable of being attached is not liable to sale.[2] (See O. 21, R. 53.) But a debt can be sold under this rule.[3]

Suppose, in execution of a decree held by A against B, certain property belonging to B is sold and subsequently, C, the holder of another money decree against B seeks to attach and sell the same property. C is not entitled to do so, because, when the property is sold under A's decree, the title to the property passes to the auction purchaser and it ceases to be liable to sale under any other decree against B.[4] Suppose in the above illustration C had already attached the property at the time of its sale under A's decree and that this attachment was even prior to that under A's decree; still C cannot sell the property but can only claim a rateable distribution of the sale proceeds under S. 73 of the Code.[5]

O.21, R.64, Notes 6—8.

6. Sale of property not belonging to the judgment-debtor.—In England the execution of a decree for money is entrusted to the sheriff, an officer who is bound to use his own discretion, and is directly responsible to those interested, for the illegal seizure of goods which do not belong to the judgment-debtor. But in India warrants for attachment are issued on the application of the creditor who is bound to specify the property which he desires to attach and its estimated value. Hence the English doctrine that a judgment-creditor is not responsible for the consequences of a sale, under a judicial order, of goods illegally taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt,[1] does not apply in India. Where the decree-holder is liable to pay damages to the third party whose goods he has illegally brought to sale in execution of his decree,[2] these damages will include not only the price realised at the sale but also the amount by which such price falls short of the market value of the property on the date of the attachment.[3] Where on the application of a decree-holder and through his mistake his own property is sold in execution of his decree, as that of the judgment-debtor, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that the decree-holder will be estopped from claiming back the property from the auction-purchaser unless it is found that the latter was not in fact misled by such mistake.[4] The High Court of Calcutta has held a contrary view.[5]

7. "Such portion thereof as may be found necessary."—It is permissible under this rule to order the sale of a portion of the attached property.[1] Compare proviso to R. 17, ante.

8. "Party entitled under the decree."—Under this rule, the sale proceeds should be paid to the "party entitled under the decree to receive the same." The decree-holder is such a person. But the Court is not bound to order the payment of the purchase money to the decree-holder before the confirmation of the sale, though it may order such payment if it considers fit to do so. (See R. 92 post).

Where the Government has a claim against the judgment-debtor for Court-fees under a decree in a pauper suit, it is entitled to be paid the amount of the Court-fee out of the sale proceeds in preference to the decree-holder. The reason is that the claim for the Court-fees is a Crown debt and is entitled to precedence over all other creditors. The Government in such a case is "a party entitled under the decree to receive" the money within the meaning of R. 64; it need not attach the money before it can receive it.[2] (Cf. O. 33, R. 10.)

Local Amendment.

RANGOON.

In Order 21, the following shall be substituted for Rule 65:—

65. (1) Sales shall be conducted by the Bailiff or Deputy Bailiff but the duty may be entrusted to a process-server when the property is moveable property not exceeding Rs. 50 in value, and when, in the opinion of the Court, for reasons recorded in the diary of the case, the Bailiff or Deputy Bailiff cannot personally conduct the sale.

(2) Subject to the terms of the proviso to Rule 43 and of Rule 74, some one day in each week shall be set apart and regularly observed for holding sales in execution of decrees; and some well-known place in the vicinity of the Court-house or the public bazaar shall be selected for the purpose.

(3) Subject as aforesaid, and unless the Court is of opinion that for any special reason a sale on the spot where the property is attached or situated will be more beneficial to the judgment-debtor, all property whether moveable or immoveable attached in execution of the decree, shall be sold at the time and place selected. The day to be set apart, and the place selected for holding the sales, and any changes therein, shall be reported for the information of the High Court.

(4) The following scale is laid down as to the amount which may be deducted from the proceeds of the sale of property sold in execution of the decree, as the expenses of sale, and paid to the officer conducting the sale under the orders of the Court as his authorised commission. When the proceeds of sale do not exceed Rs. 500—5 per cent. Where they exceed Rs. 500 and do not exceed Rs. 5,000—5 per cent. on the first Rs. 500 and 2 per cent. on the remainder. Where they exceed Rs. 5,000—at the above rate on the first Rs. 5,000 and one per cent. on the remainder.

The calculation of the commission shall be on the whole amount realized in pursuance of one application for execution.

(5) Subject to the provisions of sub-Rule (13) of Rule 43-B, no further sum beyond this authorized commission and the cost of conveyance of property to the place of sale shall be deducted from the sale-proceeds.

Note:—As regards the travelling allowance of Bailiffs going out to sell property on the spot, see Rule 43 of the Burma Travelling Allowance Rules.

(6) When a sale of immoveable property is set aside under the provisions of Rule 92 (2) below, no commission shall be paid to the Bailiff for selling the property.

(7) No officer of a subordinate Court shall receive any larger commission or fee in respect of any sale of property (mortgaged or otherwise) held in execution or in pursuance of any decree or order of the Court directing or authorizing such sale than that allowed by sub-Rule (4) above.

(8) The gross proceeds of sales shall be entered in Register II and in Bailiff's Register I, and shall be paid into the treasury.

2. Sales by whom to be conducted.—Sales in execution are to be conducted by—

(a) an officer of the Court, or

(b) any other person whom the Court may appoint.

It is not, however, every officer that can conduct an execution-sale; but only an officer that has been appointed for the purpose.[1] The rule enables the Court to appoint a person who is not an officer of the Court (e.g., an auctioneer) to conduct an execution-sale.[2] Where the Court has directed a Bailiff to hold a sale, the mere fact that the bids were recorded by another person does not show that the sale was not conducted by the Bailiff.[3]

3. Sale to be by public auction.—See R. 76 below. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the Court, may for good reason order that the bidders shall be confined to a particular class or classes of persons.[1]

2. Sub-Rule (3) is new.

2. Object of proclamation.—A proclamation of sale is meant for the information of intending purchasers and not of the judgment-debtor.[1]

3. Nature of proceedings under this rule.—Are proceedings under this rule administrative or judicial in character? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. Three views have been expressed on the matter:—

(a) The proceedings under this rule are of an administrative and not of a judicial character. The leading case which lays down this view is Sivagami Achi v. Subramania Ayyar,[1] a decision under the old Code. The cases under the present Code which belong to this group have held that the view laid down in the above case is good law even under the present Code notwithstanding the changes therein.[2]

(b) The proceedings under this rule are of a judicial and not an administrative character.[3] These cases proceed on the view that the alterations in the rule under the new Code have the effect of making the action of the Court under the present rule, a judicial one. O.21, R.66, Note 3.

(c) So far as R. 66 requires a decision as to matters which are purely administrative in nature such as fixing the upset price and details of the sale proclamation the matter is administrative. In other words, where the order does not affect the rights, liabilities or equities of the parties to the decree, it is not a judicial order.[4] But where the order affects the rights, liabilities or equities of the parties it is a judicial and not an administrative order.[5]

Although, apparently, there is a conflict of decisions as set forth above, if the views expressed in the various cases are taken into consideration, there does not seem to be any real conflict if the actual decisions are taken into account. The great majority of them fall within the principles stated in paragraph (c) above. Thus, in all the cases cited as holding that proceedings under this rule are administrative and not judicial (para. (a) above) the orders in question did not affect the rights of the parties.[6] Similarly, in Narasimha Rao v. Subbarayudu,[7] which held that orders under this rule are judicial, the order in question was one affecting the rights of the parties.

It must also be noted that the opinion expressed in Kaveri Bai Ammal v. B. Mehta and Sons[8] suggesting that under the new Code proceedings under R. 66 are judicial and not administrative was obiter.

4. Delegation of the owner to settle proclamation.—It is the duty of the Court to settle the proclamation of sale itself. It cannot depute a Commissioner to do it and if it does so the sale will be invalid.[1]

5. "Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice."—The sale proclamation should be settled only after notice to the judgment-debtor.[1] It is the duty of the decree-holder to apply for issue of notice under this rule and to take the necessary steps to have it served on the judgment-debtor.[2] But such notice is required only where a proclamation of sale has to be drawn up. It need not be given where a fresh proclamation is ordered under R. 69 (2) on an adjournment of sale.[3]

The absence of a notice under this rule does not by itself vitiate an execution-sale. The defect is only an irregularity which may entitle the judgment-debtor to have the sale set aside on satisfying the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of the defect.[4] But where the Court has fixed a certain date for hearing the parties as to the valuation to be entered in a sale proclamation but fixes the valuation before such date the Court acts without jurisdiction.[5]

It has been held by the Lahore High Court that where notice has been given under R. 66 and the execution-proceedings are thus brought to the knowledge of the judgment-debtor, they are not vitiated by the absence of a notice under R. 22.[6]

A notice under this rule is to be served in the same manner as a summons. (O. 48, R. 2.)[7]

No notice is necessary before drawing up a sale proclamation in proceedings in execution of a rent decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act.[8]

O.21, R.66, Notes 6—7.

6. "Such proclamation shall state the time and place of sale": Time of sale.—The omission to state in the proclamation, the time of sale, is a material irregularity within the meaning of R. 90.[1] It is not merely enough to mention the day of sale; the hour of sale should also be stated.[2] Where a sale has been advertised to take place at a particular hour, but is actually held at an earlier hour, though on the same day, it has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta that no sale could be deemed to have taken place at all within the meaning of the Code.[3] According to the Chief Courts of the Punjab and Burma, however, such a sale is not a nullity but only an irregularity which, if material, would entitle the party interested to set aside the sale.[4] Where a sale has been advertised to take place at a particular hour but is held at a few hours later, it has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that the delay of a few hours is not a material irregularity within the meaning of R. 90.[5]

In the absence of any rules to the contrary, a sale held on a public holiday is not illegal or irregular.[6]

Place of sale.—The omission to state the place of sale in the proclamation[7] or the holding of a sale at a place different from that stated in the proclamation[8] is a material irregularity. The Code intends that a sale should ordinarily be held at some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale. Good and sufficient reasons ought to be shown for directing otherwise.[9]

7. "As fairly and accurately as possible."—It is the duty of the Court to use all possible materials before it in drawing up a proclamation of sale which will give such information about the property to be sold as may be given and as fairly and as accurately as possible. Where the presiding Judge has not availed himself of the materials b fore him, they being such as would have enabled him to avoid the trouble afterwards occasioned, the purchaser who has, in fact, been misled would have a remedy either for a proportionate refund of the purchase money or for a cancellation of the sale.[1]

8. Contents of sale proclamation.—See Notes 9—14, infra.

Under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) and the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913), a sale proclamation should contain certain particulars in addition to those specified in this rule. See Ss. 163 and 217 of the said Acts respectively.

9. Specification of property.—The Court is under a duty to ascertain definitely the property to be sold before entering it in the sale proclamation.[1] Where it erroneously directs the sale of the property of a stranger to the decree behind his back, he is entitled to sue to have the sale set aside.[2]

The rule requires that the property to be sold should be described in the sale proclamation as fairly and accurately as possible.[2-a] The description should be sufficient to identify the property.[3] The proclamation should also specify the judgment-debtor's interest in the property.[4] (See O. 21, R. 13.) Where owing to the Court's failure to make use of the materials before it, the area actually sold is less than that mentioned in the sale proclamation, the auction purchaser is entitled to sue to have the sale set aside or to claim a refund of a proportionate part of the purchase money.[5] Where, subsequent to the issue of a sale proclamation, a portion of the property is released from attachment, and, consequently, only a portion of the property mentioned in the sale proclamation is to be actually sold, it is necessary to issue a fresh proclamation.[6] which the property to be sold is liable.[1] The amount due on the encumbrances notified should also be mentioned.[2] The fact that any of the alleged mortgages is admitted or disputed may also be stated.[3] But the decree-holder is not required to inspect and peruse all the mortgage documents mentioned in the encumbrance certificate and notify any specially onerous conditions that may be included therein, such as, that the property cannot be redeemed without paying off mortgages on other properties of the debtor.[4]

It is competent to the encumbrancer himself to apply to the Court under this rule praying that his encumbrance should be notified in the sale proclamation.[5] A prior mortgagee who has been impleaded as a party to the suit on the puisne mortgage, in which his priority was not questioned, is not precluded from claiming under this rule that his mortgage should be notified in the sale proclamation.[6]

The rule authorises the Court to notify the existence of encumbrances on the property. It does not empower it to order that the sale should be subject to the encumbrances.[7] The notification of an encumbrance under this rule must be distinguished from an order under R. 62, ante, that the property be sold subject to a certain encumbrance. In the former case there is no adjudication as to the binding nature of the alleged encumbrance, while in the latter case there is such an adjudication. See notes 1 and 2 to R. 62. Where the decree itself directs the sale of the property subject to a certain encumbrance, the purchaser cannot challenge the validity of the encumbrance afterwards.[8]

The failure to notify encumbrances under this rule is a material irregularity which will vitiate the sale[9] though a person who has waived the irregularity cannot subsequently object to it.[10] Even though the fact that the sale is subject to a mortgage is mentioned in the sale proclamation, the sale will still be vitiated, if through the conduct of the officers conducting the sale, the purchaser is misled into believing that the sale is free from encumbrances.[11] As to the remedies of a party when an encumbrance is wrongly mentioned in a sale proclamation, see notes to Rr. 90 to 92, infra, and the undermentioned case.[12] O.21, R.66. Note 11.

The fact that a mortgage is not notified in the sale proclamation does not affect the binding nature of the mortgage as regards the property in the purchaser's hands.[13] Its enforceability does not depend upon the purchaser having notice of the mortgage. In the case of a charge however, it will not as a general rule be binding on the purchaser if he has no notice of such charge.[14] See S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. But a mortgagee may be estopped by his conduct from setting up the mortgage against a bona fide purchaser. Thus a decree-holder on whom a duty is cast by this rule to give full and true information, so far as it is known to him, will be estopped from setting up, as against the auction-purchaser, any mortgage in his own favour, which he has not mentioned in his application under this rule, and which does not appear in the sale proclamation,[15] provided the auction-purchaser has actually bought without notice of the mortgage.[16]

As to whether registration constitutes notice for the purpose of such estoppel, see the undermentioned cases.[17] (See also Transfer of Property Act, S. 3.) There is, however, no estoppel where the decree-holder has mentioned the mortgage in his application for an order for sale but through some mistake of the Court officers, it is not inserted in the sale proclamation.[18] The above rule of estoppel also applies to a judgment-debtor, as, for instance, where in a suit for rent, the mortgagee of the holding has also been impleaded as a defendant and he does not take steps to have his mortgage announced in the sale proclamation.[19]

Estoppel arises not only by failure of a party in his duty to have his mortgage entered in the sale proclamation, but also by any other conduct on the part of the person putting forward the mortgage which has misled the purchaser into believing that the alleged mortgage did not exist.[20] The rule of estoppel applies not only to setting up a mortgage against the auction-purchaser but also to other claims against him.[21]

12. Amount to be recovered.—The amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered should be entered in the proclamation of sale. The amount so entered should not be one exceeding that granted by the decree. Thus where the decree does not grant interest, the proclamation of sale should not include it.[1] Where the decree awards future interest, the interest should be calculated up to the date fixed for the sale.[2] The fact that in the application for execution under O. 21, R. 11 (2) ante, interest is calculated only up to the date of application is no bar to the interest being calculated in the sale proclamation up to the date fixed for sale.[3]

Where, at an execution sale, the decree-holder himself purchases the property and is placed in possession, and the sale is subsequently set aside and a fresh proclamation of sale ordered, it has been held that the mesne profits which the judgment-debtor is entitled to recover from the decree-holder for the period of his possession may be deducted from the decretal amount entered in the sale proclamation and that the matter is one to be decided in execution proceedings.[4] (Vide S. 144, Note 34, ante.)

When a sale is adjourned under R. 69 below and a fresh proclamation of sale is waived by the judgment-debtor, the sale on the adjourned date for the amount entered in the original proclamation is not irregular although the decree was partly satisfied when the adjournment was obtained. The reason is that where a sale is adjourned and the judgment-debtor waives a fresh proclamation the amount due on the date to which the sale is adjourned is never shown in the proclamation.[5]

O.21, R.66, Notes 12—14.

An incorrect statement in the sale proclamation as to the amount due under the decree does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to sell the property and the sale held under a proclamation containing such incorrect statement is not illegal.[6]

But when objection is taken to the correctness of the amount entered in the sale proclamation the sale should not be held before the objection is disposed of.[7]

13. Everything which the Court considers material, etc.—Cl. (c).—This clause does not mean that the Court is to give a detailed account of all matters connected with the property.[1] Thus it has been held that it is not necessary to specify the income from the property ordered to be sold.[2] But it is a material circumstance for the bidders to know that the property to be sold is the subject-matter of a pending suit by a defeated claimant.[3] For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.[4] Where a landlord brings to sale the holding of his tenant in execution of his decree against the tenant, his failure to specify the ordinary incidents of the tenure will not estop him from claiming to enforce them against the auction purchaser but he will be estopped from enforcing any unusual incidents of the tenure, unless he has notified them in the sale proclamation.[5] The reason is that, in the former case the auction purchaser may be presumed to have notice of the incidents while in the latter case he cannot be held to have such notice. See Note 11 above.

14. Value of the property.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether a Court is under a duty to state its own estimate of the value of the property to be sold in the sale proclamation. The High Courts of Madras[1] and Allahabad[1-a] have held that the Court is under no such obligation. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Patna[2] and Calcutta[3] and the Chief Court of Lower Burma[4] that it is the duty of the Court to enter in the sale proclamation its own estimate of the value of the property. Opinion in the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court is divided.[5]

Though, as seen above, the Calcutta High Court holds that it is the duty of the Court to enter in the sale proclamation its own valuation of the property to be sold, it has also been held by that Court that in exceptional cases, the Court will be justified in not attempting to give a valuation of its own and in confining itself to stating the values given by the parties.[6]

In any view the omission of the Court to give an estimate of value is a mere irregularity and does not by itself vitiate the sale.[7]

An undervaluation in a sale proclamation which is calculated to mislead possible bidders and prevent them from offering adequate prices or from bidding at all is a material irregularity within the meaning of R. 90 below.[8]

O.21, R.66, Notes 14—16.

The Court need not make an elaborate enquiry before fixing the value of the property.[9] The fact that the highest bid offered at the auction is far below the value stated in the proclamation is no evidence of fraud or material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.[10] Where the highest bid offered at the auction falls below the value stated in the proclamation, the Court has no power to dismiss the execution petition.[11] In fixing the value of the property, abwabs (illegal cesses) should not be taken into consideration.[12]

15. Effect of an order under this rule.—There is a material difference between an order under R. 63 and an order under the present rule. In the former case, if the party affected does not sue within 12 months to set it aside, it becomes conclusive against the person against whom it is made. In the latter case, it has no such effect.[1]

Where property is sold to a bona fide third party purchaser in execution of a decree in force at the time, a subsequent reversal, variation or amendment of the decree does not affect the validity of the sale.[2]

Where the property of a stranger is attached and sold, his failure to object thereto does not affect his rights inasmuch as, though the Code enables third parties to come in and object, they are not bound to do so.[3] See also Note 11 above.

16. Non-compliance with the provisions of this rule.—Non-compliance with the provisions of this rule renders a Court sale liable to be set aside on the ground of material irregularity.[1] If objection is raised by the judgment-debtor to anything stated in the sale proclamation, it is irregular for the Court to order the sale to be held pending disposal of the objection.[2] But the irregularity due to the non-compliance with the provisions of this rule can be waived and the person who has waived the irregularity is estopped from subsequently raising any objection in respect thereof.[3] Thus, a judgment-debtor, who in spite of a notice under this rule, or in spite of knowledge of the contents of a sale proclamation does not object at the proper time, cannot subsequently raise the objection.[4] But the judgment-debtor is not estopped where he was not aware of the facts to which he was bound to object, and where his failure to do so was due to a mistake for which he could not be held to blame.[5] A person may be held to waive irregularities in the sale proclamation by bidding at the sale.[6] But where the objection is to the want of jurisdiction to sell, there can be no estoppel by waiver.[7]

17. Verified statement to accompany application for order for sale.—Sub-R. (3).—The omission to file a verified statement amounts only to an irregularity and does not by itself vitiate the sale.[1] The verification need not be made by the decree-holder himself, but may be made by a person acquainted with the facts of the case.[2] (See also O. 6, R. 15.)

18. "Court may summon any person, etc."—Sub-R. (4).—A claim preferred in the course of an investigation under R. 66 in relation to immoveable property ordered by the decree to be sold cannot be treated as a claim under R. 58, because the latter rule applies only in cases where the property is attached.[1]

19. Form of proclamation of sale.—See Appendix E, Form No. 29.

20. Appeal.—An order under this rule is not one of the appealable orders under S. 104 or O. 43, R. 1.[1] Hence, the question arises whether orders under this rule are appealable as decrees under S. 47 read with S. 2.[2] This question depends on two further questions, viz.:— O.21, R.66, Note 20.

(a) whether proceedings under this rule are of an administrative or a judicial character, and

(b) whether orders under this rule amount to a determination of a question within S. 47.

The answer to these questions must depend on the particular order in question in each case. Thus, where an order under this rule does not affect the rights, liabilities or equities of the parties to the decree, it is not a judicial order; nor does it amount to the determination of a question within S. 47 and hence, no appeal lies from such an order.[2] On this principle no appeal lies from the following orders under this rule:—

(a) An order about the value of the property to be entered in the sale proclamation.[3]

(b) An order as to the sale of the properties in particular lots.[4]

(c) An order as to service of notice prescribed by the rule.[5]

(d) An order for the entry of certain encumbrances in the sale proclamation.[6]

Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir

O.21, R.66, Notes 20—21.

(e) An order fixing the place of sale.[7]

(f) An order fixing the upset price.[8]

(g) For other instances see the following cases.[9]

But, where the Court in addition to deciding matters which are purely administrative in nature, such as fixing the upset price and the details of the sale proclamation, decides questions affecting the rights of the parties, the order will be a judicial order and will also amount to a determination of a question within S. 47 and an appeal will lie from such an order.[10] Thus, where there are several judgment-debtors under a mortgage decree, an order that the properties of some of them should be sold first and the properties of the others should be sold only in the case of a deficiency occurring on such a sale, may be appealable as a decree as it determines the rights of the co-judgment-debtors inter se.[11] Similarly an order relating to the boundaries of the property to be sold comes within S. 47 and is appealable as a decree.[12] It has been held in some cases that irregularities in drawing up the sale proclamation are not irregularities in publishing or conducting the sale within O. 21, R. 90, and hence, an application by a judgment-debtor to set aside an execution sale on the ground of such irregularities comes within S. 47 and not under O. 21, R. 90, and that therefore an order determining such an application is one under S. 47 and appealable as a decree.[13]

A question of waiver of irregularities in the sale proclamation by the judgment-debtor on which the trial Court had found against him but which was not raised before the High Court on appeal cannot be raised by him before the Privy Council.[14] (See Notes to O. 41, Rr. 1 and 2.)

21. Revision.—It has been held by the High Court of Patna that the action of the Court under this rule is a judicial one and hence subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court.[1] It has been further held by that Court that the High Court can interfere under S. 107 of the Government of India Act, even if the action of the lower Court in such cases be held to be administrative.[2] But the High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision in a discretionary matter,[3] or where the applicant for revision has not been in any way damnified by the order complained against.[4]

22. Applicability of the rule of res judicata to proceedings under this rule.—The principle of res judicata applies to execution proceedings.[1] (See S. 11, Note 23.) The question whether the principle applies to proceedings under this rule depends on whether the proceedings are administrative or judicial, for, unless they are held to be judicial, the principle of res judicata cannot apply to them. (See S. 11, Note 100). The answer to this question depends on the particular order in question in each case. In so far as an order merely settles the details to be entered in a sale proclamation the proceeding is only administrative or ministerial and such an order cannot operate as res judicata,[2] nor is such an order a final order so as to operate as res judicata.[3] But if in proceedings under the rule, a final order affecting the rights of the parties is passed, such an order will be a final order of a judicial character and as such will operate as res judicata.[4]

The principle of constructive res judicata (S. 11, Expln. 4) also applies to execution proceedings.[5] (See S. 11, N. 23.) But it must be shown that the party sought to be barred has had clear notice of the nature of the claim made against him. (See S. 11, Note 23.) Thus it has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court[6] that where a notice is for the settlement of the terms of a sale proclamation, the judgment-debtor cannot be deemed, by absenting himself, to have attended and raised the question as to the liability of the property to be attached and sold in execution of the decree. Further, where the last execution case was dismissed for default, the judgment-debtor cannot be held to be barred by constructive res judicata from raising a contention which he failed to raise in such execution case.[7]

The principle of res judicata will not apply if the Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order in question, as, for instance, where the order was by a Civil Court for the sale of ancestral property of the judgment-debtor, which, under the law, could be sold only by the collector.[8] But, where, in such a case, the judgment-debtor to whom a notice is sent under R. 66 fails to appear and the Court upon the materials before it decides that the property is non-ancestral and orders its sale, the judgment-debtor cannot subsequently raise the objection as to jurisdiction,[9] for a decision as to jurisdiction is as much res judicata as a decision on any other point. (See S. 11, N. 73.)

A decision in the course of execution proceedings operates as res-judicata even in a subsequent suit between the parties.[10]

The principle of S. 11, Explanation 5 does not apply so as to preclude a Court executing a mortgage decree from directing that the properties should be sold in a particular order, merely because, the Court trying the suit was asked to embody an order to this effect in its decree but did not do so.[11] Because. it is conceived, in such a case, the decree does not decide that the properties should be sold in any particular order and the executing Court, has, in the exercise of its power to sell "the mortgaged property or a sufficient portion thereof" (see O. 34, Rr. 4 and 5) a discretion to direct the sale of the properties in any order it thinks fit. (Cf. also S. 11, Note 125.)

A decree-holder ought not to be allowed to take up inconsistent positions to the prejudice of the judgment-debtor. Thus, where, in execution of a mortgage decree, the decree-holder has caused to be sold properties not comprised in the mortgage and has all along been acting on the basis that the properties sold were comprised in the mortgage, he cannot be allowed to contend that they were not comprised in the mortgage and to bring to sale the properties that were comprised in the mortgage.[12]

23. Judgment-debtor dying pending execution.—Where a decree-holder attaches the undivided interest of his judgment-debtor in (Hindu) joint family property the latter's death before sale does not affect the decree-holder's right to proceed against his interest in the property in the hands of the surviving co-parceners.[1] (See also S. 64, Note 10). 2. Publication in the gazette or newspaper.—The Court has a discretion under this rule to direct the publication either in the gazette or in the newspaper or in both.[1] The want of correspondence between the advertisement in the gazette, and the schedule of the attached property in the sale proclamation, constitutes an irregularity which might be cured if the sale was regular in other respects.[2]

3. Division of property into lots—Sub-Rule 3.—Sub-Rule 3 is new and dispenses with the necessity of making separate proclamations for each separate lot, where the property is divided into separate lots for being sold.[1] If however the Court thinks that proper notice cannot otherwise be given, as for instance, where the lots are situate at such a distance from each other that there is no certainty of communication to persons interested in one of such lots of what is publicly done in the other, the Court can direct the issue of a separate proclamation for each lot.[2]

4. Non-compliance with the rule.—As already noticed under Rule 54 and notes thereunder an omission to comply with the requirements of sub-R. 2 thereof constitutes a material irregularity which would be a ground for setting aside the sale under R. 90 provided substantial injury is also proved.[1] The High Court of Madras has held, in the undermentioned case,[2] that, where the proclamation of sale was not published in the village where the lands were situate and the process server intimated at the village that the sale would be held at a place and by an officer different from those fixed in the proclamation, the procedure was not merely irregular but illegal. Synopsis.

1. Time of sale.
2. Non-compliance with the rule.

"Consent." See Note 1, Pt. (1).

1. Time of sale.—The rule provides that there should be an interval of thirty days in the case of immoveable property and fifteen days in the case of moveable property between the date of sale and the date of affixing the copy of the proclamation in the Court-house. The fifteen days rule does not however apply to a sale of moveables subject to speedy and natural decay (see proviso to R. 43). It is also open to the judgment-debtor to consent to have the sale before the prescribed time. But such consent should be express and in writing.[1]

See Ss. 68 and 69 of the Rangoon Small Cause Courts Act, VII of 1920 and S. 169 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for special provisions as to time of sale under the said Acts.

2. Non-compliance with the rule.—Omission to comply with the requirement of this rule does not render the execution sale a nullity. It only amounts to an irregularity and without proof of substantial injury resulting therefrom the sale will not be set aside.[1]

R. 69. [S. 291.] (1) The Court[2] may, in its discretion, adjourn[3] any sale[4] *here*under to a specified day and hour[7], and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reasons for such adjournment:

Adjournment or stoppage of sale.

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court.

(2) Where a sale is adjourned under sub-rule (1) for a longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation[8] under rule 67 shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor consents to waive[9] it.

(3) Every sale shall be stopped[10] if, before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered [11] to the officer conductiug the sale, or proof is given to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court which ordered the sale.

1. Legislative changes.—

(1) The words "Under this chapter" have been omitted under the present Rule. The effect of the omission is to make the rule applicable also to sales under mortgage decrees. See Note 4.

(2) The words "other than a sale by the Collector" have also been omitted as a separate provision has been made in Rule 70, infra.

2. Court—Meaning of.—The Court means the Court executing the decree and not a Court to which such Court is subordinate.[1]

3. May, in its discretion, adjourn any sale.—Under this rule the Court may, in its discretion, adjourn a sale to a specified day.[1] No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to when Court should grant an adjournment. It depends upon the circumstances of each case. See the following cases.[2]

O.21,R.69, Notes 3—7.

When an order adjourning the execution sale is passed by the Court but is not communicated to the Nazir, who, in ignorance of it, holds the sale, it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad[3] that the sale is a nullity. The High Courts of Calcutta,[4] and Madras[5] have, however, held that an execution sale after it has been stayed by the appellate Court and before the order of stay is communicated to the officer holding the sale is not a nullity and that it would, at best, be an irregularity which will not per se invalidate the sale without proof of substantial injury.

The officer conducting the sale is also empowered under the rule to adjourn the sale except where the sale is held within the precincts of the Court-house, in which case, leave of Court is necessary.[6]

4. Any sale.—This rule applies to the adjournment of any sale including a sale under a mortgage decree.[1]

5. Adjournment of sale of mortgaged property.—See Note 4, supra and Note 11, infra

6. Adjournment after partial sale.—The provisions of this rule do not apply to a continuous sale. Thus it does not apply where the sale is ordered to be continued from day to day and the property is kept on hammer in the hope of getting higher bids than those offered on the first day; no fresh proclamation is necessary in such a case even though the sale is adjourned and continued for more than seven days.[1]

7. Omission to adjourn the sale to a specified day and hour.—Where an execution sale is adjourned, the Court must specify the day and the hour to which it is adjourned.[1] Omission to do so amounts to a material irregularity.[2]

8. Fresh proclamation when necessary.—Fresh proclamation is necessary when the sale is adjourned for a longer period than seven days.[1] It is, however, open to the judgment-debtor, to waive a fresh proclamation. See Note 9, infra. O.21,R.69, Notes 8—9.

The omission to issue a fresh proclamation as required by the rule amounts to a mere irregularity and the sale will not be set aside in the absence of proof of substantial injury.[2]

9. Waiver of proclamation.—The judgment-debtor can waive the benefit of a fresh proclamation under this rule and, if he does so, he cannot, later on, object to the sale being irregular on that ground.[1] Such waiver does not, however, estop him from objecting to other irregularities.[2] As, for instance, the omission to specify the day and the hour of the sale,[3] or the omission to proclaim properly.[4]

A waiver of proclamation by one of several judgment-debtors does not bind the other judgment-debtors.[5] Nor does it prevent another attaching decree-holder from objecting to the sale on that ground.[6]

O.21, R.69, Notes 9—13.

The guardian ad litem of a minor judgment-debtor can waive a fresh proclamation on behalf of the minor under this rule.[7]

10. Stoppage of sale on deposit of debt and costs.—Any sale including a sale under a mortgage-decree can be stopped by the deposit of the decretal amount and the costs before the property is actually knocked down to the bidder.[1] But the words "debts and costs" mean the entire amount and not "the balance of the decree-debt and costs which would remain if, by a legal fiction, the sales of previous lots (not yet completed by the payment of the whole of the purchase-money) were taken as completed by treating the whole of the purchase-money as being actually paid up".[2]

11. Who can tender the amount.—The judgment-debtor or a transferee of the property from the judgment-debtor is entitled to tender the amount under this rule.[1] Where the sale is in execution of a mortgage-decree any person holding the equity of redemption[2] such as, a purchaser in execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage,[3] can tender the amount and have the sale stopped.

A payment made to prevent a sale in execution of a decree is not a voluntary payment whether made by the debtor or by a third person claiming the property.[4]

12. Sale on a date other than the one to which it is adjourned.—The High Court of Calcutta has held in the undermentioned case[1] that if the execution-sale does not take place on the adjourned date but is held on a subsequent date to which the sale has not been adjourned, it amounts to a material irregularity. But in a later decision[2] it has held that if the sale takes place on a day never fixed for it and of which the judgment-debtor has no notice, the sale is a nullity.

13. Withdrawal of bid.—A bid may be withdrawn before the property is actually knocked down to the bidder.[1] The death of the bidder revokes the bid.[2]

Rights of decree-holder and judgment-debtor on purchaser's default. See Notes 2 and 5, Pt. (5) and Note 6.

1. Application of the rule.—The rule extends to all auction sales in execution, whether of moveable or immoveable property.[1] It is a salutary provision intended to minimise the hardship resulting from the purchaser's default, and Courts should give effect to it unless the defaulting purchaser would be substantially prejudiced.[2] The rule applies to sales by the Collector under the Public Demands Recovery Act, (1 B. C. of 1895)[3] (see S. 8 of the Act); and to sales under the Agra Tenancy Act, III of 1926 (see S. 169 thereof); and to sales of immoveables under The Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (see R. 54, Notes above).

2. Failure of execution sale due to auction-purchaser's default—Rights of decree-holder and judgment-debtor.—Where an execution sale fails owing to the auction purchaser's default, the decree-holder is entitled to a re-sale of the property.[1] See O. 21, Rr. 77, 84 and 86. Where the price bid at the second sale is less than that bid at the first sale, the purchaser at the first sale is liable to make good the difference, and the present rule entitles the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court to enforce such liability. But the decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the defaulting purchaser. He may recover from the judgment-debtor the judgment-debt or the balance of it that may be due, and leave him to pursue his remedies against the auction-purchaser under this rule.[2] The judgment-debtor, may also, instead of proceeding against the auction-purchaser to recover the deficiency in price, apply under rule 90 to set aside the second sale if he can make out a case under that rule.[3] See also Note 13, infra.

O.21, R.71, Note 3.

3. Re-sale.—The rule applies to all re-sales made in consequence of the default of the auction purchaser, not only in the payment of the 25 per cent. of the purchase money under R. 84 or in the payment of the balance under R. 85,[1] but also in the payment of the poundage fee.[2] But the re-sale must be of the same property[3] and under the same decree.[4] The property must also be sold under the same description, and any substantial difference of description will disentitle the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to recover the deficiency under this rule.[5] Thus no deficiency can be recovered where

(1) encumbrances, not notified at the first sale were mentioned in the sale proclamation at the re-sale.[6]

(2) property, described as that of A at the first sale was described as that of B at the re-sale.[7]

But the rule that the re-sale must be of the same property as that put up for sale at the first sale, does not apply where the property has changed during the interval owing to natural causes or the change in the wording of the sale proclamation has been due to the purchaser's own default and conduct.[8]

Will a difference in the sale proclamations of the two sales which does not substantially prejudice the purchaser at the first sale absolve him from liability under R. 71? As to this question, it was observed by Wallis, C. J. in Venkatachalamayya v. Nilakanta[9] that R. 71 is a salutary provision which should be given effect to unless the defaulting purchaser would be substantially prejudiced.

The remarks of Kumaraswamy Sastry, J. in his judgment in the same case lend support to the same view. From the trend of the remarks made in the undermentioned cases the High Courts of Calcutta[10] and Bombay[11] seem to take a contrary view and to hold that substantial differences of descriptions in the proclamations of the two sales will entitle the defaulting purchaser to exemption under this rule, though he may not have been substantially prejudiced by the differences.

It has also been held by the Calcutta High Court that where a property was misdescribed in the proclamation of the first sale and the decree-holder was aware of the misdescription, he ought not to have had the property again proclaimed for sale under a description which he knew to be wrong and having done that, he could not make the defaulting purchaser answerable for the deficiency.[12]

The re-sale contemplated by this rule is a re-sale held according to law. Hence an auction purchaser who fails to pay the deposit required by R. 84 is not liable for the deficiency on re-sale unless the re-sale is held "forthwith" within the meaning of that rule.[13] But it has been held that R. 84 does not apply to a re-sale on the purchaser's default in paying the poundage fee and that such re-sale need not be held "forthwith".[14]

Suppose at a re-sale held on the purchaser's default, no bidders are forthcoming, is there a re-sale within the meaning of the rule and can the purchaser at the first sale be proceeded against for the price bid by him at that sale? On this question it has been held by the Madras High Court that there is a "re-sale" when the property is put up again for sale and that the defaulting purchaser should not be absolved from liability for want of bidders at the re-sale.[15] The Bombay High Court has, however, held that there is no re-sale of property if it is not knocked down to any bidder at the second sale and that R. 71 cannot apply to such a case.[16]

4. Power to order recovery of deficiency.—The power of ordering the recovery of deficiency is vested in the Court. The officer conducting the sale has no power to order the recovery of the deficiency.[1] Even in cases where the execution of a decree has been transferred to a Collector and the property has been sold by him, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to order the recovery of deficiency under this rule.[2] See S. 70, Note 2.

5. Procedure under the rule.—The Court may pass an order that the defaulting purchaser is liable for the deficiency but there is nothing in the rule which compels the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to obtain such an order before asking for execution against the auction-purchaser. The opinion expressed in the undermentioned case[1] that, without such an order, execution cannot issue against the auction-purchaser seems to be not warranted by the terms of the rule. The rule does not expressly provide for notice to the defaulting purchaser; but it is the duty of the Court, under general principles of law, to give him notice and hear and decide on his objections before it orders execution to issue against him.[2] O.21, R.71, Notes 5—7.

The proceedings under the rule are not more summary than proceedings to set aside an execution-sale.[3]

An order against the auction-purchaser under this rule can be passed only when re-sale has taken place. The Court has no power to order that a property should be re-sold and that the defaulting purchaser should pay the deficiency in price which may occur.[4] An order under this rule to the effect that the defaulting purchaser is liable for the deficiency, passed in favour of the decree-holder can be executed by the judgment-debtor, because the rule enables either of them to apply under it.[5]

6. Who may apply under this rule.—This rule entitles either the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder to apply for the recovery of deficiency from the auction-purchaser. By the term "decree-holder" is meant the decree-holder by whom the property was brought to sale. Other decree-holders are not included in the term although they may be entitled to rateable distribution under S. 73.[1] The decree-holder is entitled to enforce the defaulting purchaser's liability for the whole amount of the deficiency and is not bound to confine his application merely to the decretal amount that may remain outstanding.[2] Where an order has been passed in favour of the decree-holder to the effect that the auction-purchaser was liable for the deficiency but the decree-holder realises the balance of the decretal amount from the judgment-debtor and does not enforce the order passed in his favour, the judgment-debtor can execute the same against the auction-purchaser.[3] See also N. 10, Pt. (3).

7. By reason of the purchaser's default.—The "default" referred to in this rule includes default in paying the purchase-money, the deposit required by R. 84 or the poundage fee, see Note 3. The default must be that of a purchaser. Thus a bid lapses on a higher bid being made and where the highest bidder dies before the acceptance of his bid, the next highest bidder cannot be treated as the highest bidder for the purposes of this rule.[1] Similarly a bid can be withdrawn at any time before the property is knocked down to the bidder.[2] So also, it has been held that a bid lapses by too much delay in the acceptance thereof.[3] But a bid cannot be withdrawn after the property is knocked down to the bidder.[4] As to whether the Court's acceptance of the highest bid is necessary to complete the sale, see Notes to R. 84.

In an application under this rule, it is open to the auction-purchaser to raise any objections to the first sale which can be urged in an application to set aside a sale under O. 21,[5] because in such a case it is conceived his failure to complete the sale would be justified.

Irregularities in connection with the re-sale which are not shown to have been responsible for the comparative lowness of the price realised at the re-sale cannot be pleaded in defence to an application under this rule.[6]

8. Where defaulting purchaser is merely an agent.—A person who bids at a sale merely as an agent of another person is not liable under this rule.[1] See Contract Act, S. 230. But he will be liable if he bids without informing the officer conducting the sale that he is acting as agent of another. See Contract Act, S. 230. In such a case the mere fact that the judgment-debtor knows that the bidder is acting as agent of another will not absolve him from liability. The reason is that in Court sales, the contract is between the bidder and the Court which acts by virtue of a statutory authority and not as the agent of either the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor.[2] Where a person professes to bid as agent of another without the latter's authority, the latter is not liable under this rule[3] and the alleged agent is liable for damages.[4] See S. 235, Contract Act.

effect that the auction-purchaser is liable for the deficiency has the effect of a decree and can be attached as such, under O. 21, R. 53.[3] See also Note 16, infra. O.21, R.71, Notes 10—13.

11. Rateable distribution.—Money realised from the defaulting purchaser under this rule is "assets" within the meaning of S. 73, and is liable to rateable distribution.[1]

12. Nature of defaulting purchaser's liability for deficiency.—See Note 13 below.

13. Suit for deficiency on re-sale—Whether maintainable.—It has been seen in Note 62 to S. 9, ante that where two remedies are available under the law, one must not be taken as operating in derogation of the other, but that this general rule is subject to the qualification that where a right is created by statute and a method of enforcing the right, or of redressing the grievance caused in the exercise or enforcement of the right, is pointed by the statute creating such right, the general remedy of suit will be impliedly barred. The question, therefore, whether the right to claim deficiency from a defaulting purchaser can be enforced by suit depends upon the question whether such right is a common law right or a right created by the statute. It was held in the undermentioned case[1] of the Bombay High Court that the right to recover the deficiency under this rule is one created by the statute relating to the procedure, but the question in that case did not arise as to the maintainability of a separate suit to recover such deficiency. In a later case,[2] however, the same High Court has expressed the opinion that but for this rule a suit would have to be filed to recover such deficiency and that this rule enables the party aggrieved to make an application for that purpose. It would seem to follow from this that the remedy under this rule is only an alternative remedy which does not bar a separate suit. In Amir Bakhsha v. Venkatachala[3] an opinion was expressed by the Madras High Court that a suit will not be maintainable in such a case. There was no discussion, however, of the principles and the question that actually arose in the case was not whether a suit would lie. But in the undermentioned case[4] Wallis, C. J., observed as follows:—"By his failure to complete his purchase the purchaser commits a breach of contract and is answerable in damages to the Court or the persons on whose behalf it sells, viz., the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor". In Sitaram v. Janaki Ram[5] Mr. Justice Walsh of the Allahabad High Court expressed the view that the liability of the defaulting purchaser is not a contractual liability and that no suit would lie to enforce it. The Patna[6] and the Calcutta[7] High Courts have held that right to claim the deficiency is a common law right to recover the damages for a legal wrong done by the purchaser, that the R. 71 provides only a summary remedy for enforcing that right but that it does not bar the general remedy of suit. It is submitted that this last view is correct.

14. Insolvency proceedings.—The provisions of this rule apply to sales by the Court under the Provincial Insolvency Act so that where a re-sale is held owing to the first purchaser's default and a deficiency occurs on such re-sale, the deficiency is recoverable in execution.[1] But the rule does not apply to sales by the Receiver under that Act.[2]

15. Suit if lies to set aside order under this rule.—It has been seen that the position under this rule is, as if, a decree has been passed against the defaulting purchaser for the amount of the deficiency which the decree-holder or judgment-debtor is entitled to execute under the provisions of the Code relating to the execution of money-decrees. Hence, it follows that the remedy of a party aggrieved by an order under this rule is by way of appeal. (See N. 16, infra) and not by means of a separate suit to set aside the order.[1]

16. Appeal.—It is settled law that an appeal lies against an order deciding an application by a decree-holder or judgment-debtor under this rule against a defaulting auction-purchaser for the recovery of deficiency of price.[1] The reason is that inasmuch as this rule declares that the deficiency in price shall be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of decrees for the payment of money, the rule relating to appeals must be applied mutatis mutandis equally with any other of those rules.[2] O.21, R.71, Note 16.

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that no second appeal lies from an order determining an application under this rule, where the amount of deficiency does not exceed Rs. 500. The reason given is that no second appeal would have been maintainable if a decree had been actually passed for the deficiency in such a case and an order had been made determining an application for the execution of such decree.[3] But the Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view.[4] It is submitted that the Bombay view is correct.

As to the forum of appeal see the undermentioned case.[5]

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "subject to the provisions of Section 73" in sub-Rule (2) did not appear in the corresponding section of the old Code. See Note 6 below.

(2) The words "if he so desires" which occurred in the old Code, have now been omitted.

1-A. Applicability of rule.—The holder of a decree for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)[1] or the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913)[2] need not obtain permission of the Court under this rule. As to proceedings under Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, see notes under R. 54, ante.

2. Permission to bid.—A decree-holder cannot, under this rule, purchase property sold in execution of his own decree, without the express permission of the executing Court.[1-a] But the prohibition under this rule applies only to the decree-holder and not to the judgment-debtor,[1] or to a holder of a decree other than that under which the sale is to take place.[2] An assignee of decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi to apply for execution and he is not the holder of a decree within the meaning of R. 72; hence, he need not obtain the permission of the Court under this rule.[2-4] The decree-holder cannot get round the condition imposed by this rule, by bidding jointly with a stranger[3] or by availing himself of the bid of another.[4]

Leave to bid should be very cautiously granted.[5] In granting such leave the Court can impose any fit and proper conditions for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the judgment-debtor.[6] But the conditions imposed should not be too stringent,[7] and should not be construed too narrowly.[8] "The main question for the Court to consider is, whether it is to the advantage of everyone concerned, in order to obtain the highest price, that the plaintiff should be allowed to bid or not''.[9]

The principle of this rule governs also sales held by Collector under the Code.[10] But where the Collector is empowered, under rules, to grant only permission to bid, but not to order a set-off, the decree-holder desiring a set-off, should apply to the Court under this rule.[11]

Leave granted under this rule is binding on a superior Court acting under S. 63 of the Code.[12] Consequently sale proceeds validly set-off against the decretal amount cannot be ordered to be refunded and sent to the superior Court. See Note 8 to S. 63.

Where a decree-holder filed a petition asking for permission to bid, and no order was passed thereon, but the decree-holder was allowed to bid throughout the course of the sale, it was held by the High Court of Patna that it can be taken that the Court gave the required permission inasmuch as the failure to pass an order in writing was a mistake of the Court.[13]

Where the decree-holder is the receiver of the property sold in execution, permission obtained under O. 21, R. 72 without informing the Court that he is such receiver is not enough. A sale in his favour under such circumstances is liable to be set aside.[14]

3. "Where decree-holder purchases with such permission.—Leave to bid puts a decree-holder in the same position as an independent purchaser and the judgment-debtor is not entitled to demand a higher standard of fairness from the former than from the latter.[1] A decree-holder-purchaser accordingly is not bound to disclose circumstances within his knowledge and bearing on the sale any more than an independent purchaser.[2] The principle is the same with regard to the decree-holder-purchaser in a mortgage suit also. He does not stand in any fiduciary position to the mortgagor.[3] He is entitled to credit

4. Leave obtained by misrepresentation.—The Court has an inherent power to refuse to allow a sale to be confirmed if it is satisfied that the Court has been misled in granting leave to the decree-holder to bid.[1] But allegations of fraud of this character must be specific and the issue must be decided on a trial.[2]

5. Setting off decretal amount against purchase-money.—For the sake of convenience, sub-R. 2 allows the decree-holder, ordinarily, to set-off the purchase-money against his decree instead of paying the money into Court and drawing it out again. But this fact does not alter the substantial nature of the transaction, and the nominal receipt of the sale-proceeds, in cases where set-off is allowed, must be held to amount to the holding of assets by the Court, where the rights of rival decree-holders to share in such proceeds are concerned.[1] Sub-R. (2) accordingly provides that the right to set-off is subject to any claims for rateable distribution under S. 73 of the Code.[2] The claims of rateable distribution in such cases must, however, have been made before the conclusion of the sale inasmuch as on the date of the sale, the assets would be deemed to have been realised by the Court.[3] If, however, the amount of the bid exceeds the decree-amount, the claims under S. 73 may be made before the realisation of the excess amount by the Court.[4] Where the decree-holder-purchaser who is liable to share rateably with rival decree-holders in the sale proceeds fails to furnish the proportionate amount to the Court for distribution, a refund may be enforced by a summary process in execution instead of in a separate suit.[5]

O.21, R.72, Notes 5—8.

Under this rule, no order of Court is necessary prior to sale granting permission to set-off.[6] An application for set-off may be made even after fifteen days after sale.[7]

Where permission to bid has been granted on condition that there should be no set-off, the Court cannot subsequently allow a set-off.[8]

As to the exemption from making the deposit into Court, of purchase-money by a decree-holder-purchaser, see O. 21, Rr. 84 and 85 and notes thereon.

6. Amount due on the decree.—Where a decree-holder is allowed to purchase the property ordered to be sold on condition that he would purchase it in full satisfaction of the decree, he is not entitled to recover from the judgment-debtor any money that he, as a decree-holder, has to pay by way of poundage.[1]

7. Purchase without permission.—Although the leave of the Court is a condition precedent to the decree-holder bidding for, or purchasing the property, a purchase by him without such permission is not ipso facto void. It is valid until set aside in the manner provided by sub-R. 3.[1] A stranger or a person other than such as is specified in sub-R. (3), has no right to apply to have such a sale set aside.[2]

8. By himself or through another person.—A purchase by the decree-holder through another person on his behalf is not void, but is only voidable at the instance of the judgment-debtor or any other person interested in the sale.[1] But where a decree-holder was refused permission to bid, a purchase by him benami in the name of another was held to be an abuse of process of Court, and the sale was held invalid.[2] Similarly a purchase by the decree-holder in the name of another for a price lower than that at which the decree-holder was allowed permission to bid, was held liable to be set aside for fraud.[3] A purchase by the decree-holder's undivided son,[4] or undivided brother,[5] is presumably with joint funds and as such the purchase is for the decree-holder. A purchase by the decree-holder's pleader for himself is not invalid.[6]

9. The Court may, if it thinks fit, set aside the sale.—A purchase by the decree-holder in contravention of this rule being only voidable, it is within the discretion of the Court to set aside the sale on an application under sub-R. 3.[1] Where the conduct of the decree-holder in purchasing the property amounts to fraud,[2] or to an abuse of the process of the Court,[3] the sale will be set aside. Where the purchase was benami and for an inadequate price, the burden of proving that the sale is to be upheld is clearly on the decree-holder and it will not be a valid ground of objection that the judgment-debtor did not plead fraud or substantial injury.[4] In order that a sale may be set aside under this rule on account of the decree-holder's failure to obtain permission to bid it is not necessary to find that the judgment-debtor sustained substantial loss by the sale.[5]

An application to set aside a sale, under sub-R. 3, can only be made by the judgment-debtor or any other person whose interests are affected by the sale. A decree-holder entitled to rateable distribution is a person whose interests are so affected but the sons of a judgment-debtor who were not parties to the suit and on whom the decree would not be binding are not persons interested in the sale.[6] The fact of the confirmation of the sale is no bar for setting it aside under sub-R. 3.[7]

under sub-R. 3 being a bar thereto.[1]

12. Interest.—A decree is not satisfied until the sale in execution of it is confirmed,[1] and the decree-holder is entitled to claim interest, if the decree awards it, between the date of sale and the date of its confirmation.[2]

13. Appeal.—Under O. 43, R. 1 (j) an appeal lies from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule.[1] But there is no right of second appeal.[2] But an order granting,[3] or refusing,[4] leave to bid to the decree-holder is not appealable.

14. Limitation and step-in-aid of execution.—The effect of a decree-holder purchasing at an execution sale without the leave of the Court is to render the sale voidable and not void. Consequently a suit to set aside the sale under Art. 12 (a) of the Limitation Act must be brought within one year of confirmation of sale.[1]

On the question whether an application for leave to bid is a step-in-aid of execution, see Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act and the undermentioned cases.[2]

15. Bombay R. 72-A.—Rule 72-A passed by the Bombay High Court, as it originally stood, embodied a mandatory provision for fixing, in the case of a mortgagee decree-holder applying for leave to bid, a reserve price of not less than the amount of the principal, interest and costs due under the decree. It was, accordingly, held[1] that an execution sale to the mortgagee decree-holder without fixing the reserve price aforesaid and for less than the decree-amount was vitiated by material irregularity. The rule has since been amended giving power to the Court to dispense, if it thinks fit, with the condition relating to the reserve price.

It has been held that R. 72-A has no application to the Original Side of the High Court of Bombay and a mortgagee decree-holder purchasing for less than his decree-amount is entitled to recover the balance from the mortgagor or otherwise.[2]

1. Legislative changes.—

The words "or other person" are new.

2. "No officer or other person."—The introduction of the words "or other person" in the present rule extends the scope of the prohibition in the rule to all those, besides officers, who have anything to do with the machinery of the sale or have, directly or indirectly, any interest in the result of the sale.[1] A pleader engaged by a party to a suit[1-a] or the pleader's clerk[1-b] cannot be said to have a duty to perform in connection with the sale and is not therefore within the prohibition, and the introduction of the words "or other person" in the new Code does not change the law in this respect.[2] Judicial opinion has, however, been uniform that the conduct of a pleader engaged in the suit, in purchasing the property for himself, is open to grave censure, especially when the purchase is detrimental to the interests of his client.[3] In fact, the pleader will be guilty of professional misconduct in such cases.[4] See also Note 3 below.

3. Transfer of Property Act, Section 136.—Under S. 136 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), as it originally stood, "no judge, pleader, muktar, clerk, bailiff or other officer connected with Courts of justice can buy any actionable claim falling under the jurisdiction of the Court in which he exercises his functions".[1] The section as it now stands is wider in its scope

Synopsis.

1. Place of sale.—This rule makes special provision for the sale of agricultural produce. In other cases of moveable properties attached in execution, sales should ordinarily be held in some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale.[1] Where certain ornaments were attached in Belgaum and the judgment-debtor urged that they should be directed to be sold at Bombay on the ground that they would probably fetch a better price and it was found by the Court that a fair price could be had on the spot, it was held that there was no good and sufficient reason to depart from the usual practice.[2]

1. Sale of moveable property.—A sale of arms by a Nazir of the Court in execution of a decree is a sale by a public servant in the discharge of his duty and is therefore excluded from the operation of the Indian Arms Act, (XI of 1878) by S. 1, Cl. (b) of that Act.[1]

2. Payment of price.—Though sales should be conducted strictly according to this rule, still where, in execution of a decree for a large amount, the decree-holder purchased some moveable property of small value without the leave of the Court and filed into Court a receipt setting off the amount towards his decree, it was held in the undermentioned case that it might be treated as a cash payment.[1]

This rule gives the officer conducting the sale a discretion to allow the purchase-money to be paid at a reasonable time after the sale.[2]

Scope of rule. See Note 1.

1. Irregularity in publishing and conducting sale of moveable property.—R. 77, ante provides that on payment of the purchase-money the sale of moveable property shall become absolute.[1] This rule provides that a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree cannot be set aside on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.[1-a] But it does not provide that a sale of moveable property shall in no case be set aside. Thus, if there is an express assertion in the proclamation of sale that the goods sold are the property of the judgment-debtor then the purchaser, if he has not got that for which he paid the price, is entitled to have the sale set aside and to recover the purchase-money from the hands of the Sheriff or the execution creditor.[2] Where a judgment-debtor died after the issue of the sale proclamation and before sale and the sale was held without bringing on record his legal representatives it was held that it was not a case of mere irregularity but that the sale was void and could be set aside under S. 47.[3]

In a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree, there is no warranty of title and all that is sold is the right, title and interest of the

2. Person injured may, however, sue for compensation.—Any person sustaining any injury by reason of an irregularity in conducting or publishing the sale may sue the person by whom the injury was caused, for compensation.[1]

Though this rule would enable a judgment-debtor also to sue for compensation, it must be read with S. 47 which bars a separate suit regarding any question arising between the parties in execution.[2]

3. Money decree is not moveable property.—A money decree is not moveable property within the meaning of this rule and therefore where such a decree is sold contrary to the procedure laid down in R. 53, ante, the sale can be set aside on the ground of irregularities in the conduct of the sale.[1]

1. Delivery of debts.—Where a debt is sold, the method of delivery is, as provided in sub-R. 3, by a prohibitory order of the Court resembling that made on attachment and the purchaser cannot apply for possession under R. 95, infra.[1]

2. Shares.—Similarly in the case of sale of shares in a company, when an order is issued under sub-R. 3 there is nothing further to be done by the transferee or by the Court and the company also cannot permit the transfer of the shares to anybody else.[1]

What passes to the purchaser of shares at a Court sale is the right to the property and not an absolute right to have the transfers registered. Therefore the company has still a discretion to recognise such purchasers or not, as in the case of private purchasers.[2]

1. Legislative changes.—

(1) The words "save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set-off such money under the provisions of Rule 72" in the first proviso to sub-Rule (2) have been newly added. See also similar saving clauses in Rules 84, sub-Rule (2) and 85, infra.

(2) Sub-Rule (3) is new. See Note 10, infra.

2. Postponement of sale.—A Court has to exercise its discretion in making an order for postponement of the sale to enable the judgment-debtor to raise money by private alienations.[1] It will not be exercising its discretion properly in making an order for postponement, where the judgment-debtor has had sufficient time to pay the decree-amount,[1-a] or where there is no sufficient reason to believe that the amount due under the decree could be raised by any of the methods mentioned in the rule.[2] Where the sale has taken place in execution of the decree, the executing Court has no power to grant an application under this rule and is bound to confirm the sale subject to the provisions of rule 92, infra.[3]

This rule only authorises the Court to grant time to the judgment-debtor and does not give any authority to the Court to grant a lease or mortgage.[4]

This rule and Rr. 84 to 88 (inclusive) are applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act[5] but not to proceedings under the following Acts.[6]

3. "For such period as it thinks proper".—The postponement of the sale should be for a reasonable period and not unreasonably long.[1]

4. Shall grant a certificate.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that a private sale by a judgment-debtor to whom a certificate under sub-R. 2 has not been granted does not convey such a title to the vendee as to entitle him to successfully maintain a suit for possession of the property against another similar purchaser.[1]

5. Shall be paid into Court.—Payment to the decree-holder's pleader under the orders of the Court is payment into Court, the pleader in such a case becoming the agent of the Court.[1]

6. Effect of private sale.—This rule qualifies the prohibition in S. 64 and on compliance with the conditions of this rule, a private alienation, notwithstanding S. 64 becomes absolute even against all claims enforceable under the attachment.[1] Thus, where on January 15, 1911, a Court granted a certificate to a judgment-debtor under this rule for private sale of his properties, and on January 1924 the properties were attached in execution of another decree, and on the 31st of January the Court confirmed the sale, the purchaser gets an absolute title and the subsequent attachment is of no avail.[2]

In authorising a sale under this rule, a Court cannot empower a judgment-debtor to transfer any higher interest than he has and bind the interests of others in the property.[3] A private alienation made after obtaining the sanction of the Court cannot affect a prior encumbrance already existing on the properties.[4]

O.21, R.83, Notes 6—9.

An alienation effected by a judgment-debtor by virtue of a certificate granted under this rule is a private alienation, even though it does not become absolute unless it is confirmed by the Court and therefore it cannot be said that it is not liable to pre-emption under the provisions of the Punjab Pre-Emption Act (Act I of 1913).[5]

7. Confirmation of sale by Court.—If a sale under this rule is not confirmed and made absolute, it would not be operative against claims enforceable under the attachment, but would be defeasible to that extent.[1] Where the sanction for private sale has been granted by two Courts executing different decrees, it is enough if the sale is confirmed by one Court.[2]

It is not necessary that any formal application should be made for the purpose of obtaining the Court's confirmation of a private transfer, nor is there any provision under which a formal order declaring such confirmation should be recorded.[3] It has been held in the undermentioned case[4] that it is extremely doubtful whether a private sale under this rule comes within the purview of R. 92, infra and that, even if R. 92 governs this rule, there is no legal bar to the confirmation of a sale before the expiry of thirty days from the date of sale.

Where the approval of the Court has been obtained by mis-representation or by the withholding of the material information, the Court will treat such misrepresentation or withholding of information as a fraud and will refuse to give effect to the private transfer as against claims enforceable under the attachment.[5]

8. Permission under S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act.—Where the judgment-debtor is a minor for whom a guardian has been appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act 1890 the certificate of the executing Court is not sufficient to validate a transfer under this rule; it is also necessary that he should obtain the sanction of the Court that appointed him as guardian.[1] The reason is that the matter for inquiry under this rule is the protection of the execution-creditor, while under S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act the matter to be considered is the benefit of the Minor and therefore compliance with this rule should not render unnecessary the fulfilment of the requirements of S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

9. Rateable distribution.—Money paid into Court under sub-R. (2) is money-paid under a pending execution application and is therefore liable to rateable distribution under S. 73 ante.[1] Where property is attached at the instance of several decree-holders, permission should not be granted under this rule to satisfy one of the decrees.[2] O.21, R.83, Notes 9—11.

10. Mortgage decree—Sub-R. 3.—This rule does not apply to cases in which property is directed to be sold in execution of decree on a mortgage.[1] The reason is that the creditor's right of sale rests on the mortgage decree, and not on the attachment in execution. The undermentioned cases[2] under the old Code holding that S. 305 corresponding to this rule, applied to mortgage decrees also are no longer law under this Code, in view of the specific enactment of sub-R. 3.

11. Appeal and revision.—No appeal lies against an order under this rule postponing or refusing to postpone a sale.[1] But the High Court may interfere in revision under S. 115 if the conditions of that section are satisfied.[2]

1. "Declared to be purchaser."—The person to be declared purchaser under this rule is the bidder whose bid has been accepted.[1] There is no sale till the bid has been accepted by the competent authority.[1-a]

A bidder can withdraw his bid at any time before the property is knocked down to him.[2] A bid lapses by a higher bid being made[3] or by extraordinary delay in accepting it.[4] As to whether the acceptance is to be by the Court or the officer conducting the sale, see Note 2, infra.

A person declared to be purchaser under this rule has, even before the confirmation of sale in his favour, sufficient interest in the property to prevent a forfeiture or preserve the title from destruction. Thus, where the property sold is the right of the judgment-debtor to obtain a re-conveyance of certain properties on paying a certain sum by a certain date, the person declared to be the purchaser under R. 84 can make a valid tender of such sum so as to prevent a forfeiture under the Clause.[5]

2. Acceptance by Court if necessary for completion of sale.—There is a conflict of opinion on this question and three different views have been expressed:—

(a) A Court sale is not complete till the highest bid is accepted by the Court, though the officer conducting the sale may have knocked down the property in favour of a particular person as being the highest bidder.[1]

(b) The sale is complete as soon as the property is knocked down to the highest bidder by the officer conducting the sale.[2] O.21, R.84, Notes 2—4.

(c) The Court has a quasi revisional jurisdiction in the matter.[3] According to this view the sale is complete as against the purchaser as soon as the property is knocked down to him, and he cannot withdraw his bid thereafter, although the Court may, in its discretion, refuse to accept his bid and order a re-sale.

3. Deposit, payment of.—The payment of deposit under this rule cannot be insisted on before the property has been knocked down to the bidder.[1] But the officer conducting the sale may, if the circumstances justify such a course and in order to satisfy himself that he is a bona fide bidder, ask any bidder if he has the deposit money ready.[2] The deposit under this rule should be paid though no demand is made for it.[3]

4. Non-payment of deposit—Effect of.—The deposit under this rule must be made immediately after the purchaser is declared and must cover 25 per cent. of the purchase-money.[1] The officer conducting the sale has no authority to extend the time for the payment of the deposit.[2]

The failure to pay the deposit immediately as required by the rule, does not render the sale void but only amounts to irregularity within O. 21, R. 90.[3] But a Court has no power to sell a property to a purchaser who does not pay for it. Thus, where a decree-holder-purchaser does not pay the balance of the purchase-money after deducting the decretal amount, the sale to him is void even though it may be confirmed by the Court.[4]

O.21, R.84, Notes 4—6.

An auction-purchaser who had not paid the deposit under the rule at all, professed to transfer the property to another and on the latter paying the purchase-money the Court confirmed the sale in his favour. It was held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh that the Court had no power to recognise the transferee from an auction-purchaser who had not paid the deposit at all.[5]

It is also submitted that the remark in the undermentioned case[6] that the date of sale is the date of deposit is not correct. The date of sale is the date on which the bid is accepted by the proper authority. See Notes 1 and 2, supra.

5. Re-sale.—On the failure of a purchaser to deposit 25 per cent. of the purchase-money under this rule, the property should be re-sold.[1] The re-sale should be held "forthwith"[2] otherwise the defaulting purchaser will not be liable under R. 71, ante for the deficiency in price that may occur on such re-sale.[3] In a recent Full Bench case, the Madras High Court has held that "forthwith" in this rule means "as expeditiously as circumstances permit".[4] Rule 87, infra does not apply to a re-sale under this rule and a fresh proclamation is not necessary for such re-sale.[5] But, if in the circumstances of a particular case, the issue of a fresh sale proclamation is to the advantage of the defaulting purchaser, the fact that such proclamation was issued does not make the re-sale one not held "forthwith" within the meaning of this rule.[6]

The officer conducting the re-sale is not bound to commence it from the next highest bid below that made by the defaulter.[7] As to the procedure to be followed when objection is taken to the re-sale on the ground that the deposit was tendered but refused by the sale officer, see the undermentioned case.[8]

6. Sub-R. (2).—Sub-R. 2 is new.[1] It provides for the exemption of the decree-holder-purchaser with the Court's permission from making the deposit under this rule. The decree-holder-purchaser is not exempt in every case from making the deposit; the rule only gives the Court the power to office, it will not be sufficient compliance with this rule if it does not reach the Court in time, for the post office is not an agent of the Court.[3]

Where a purchaser tendered the balance of the purchase-money on the last day with the chalan to the officer of the Court for the signature of the judge and the chalan was returned only the next day when the amount was duly paid, it was held that it was sufficient compliance with the provisions of this rule.[4]

3. Where Court or office is closed on the fifteenth day.—If the Court and the office are closed on the fifteenth day from the sale on account of holiday, the purchaser can deposit the balance of purchase-money on the next re-opening day.[1]

4. Proviso.—Where a decree-holder is given permission to bid at the sale and set-off the amount towards his decree, then if the amount of the bid minus the poundage is less than the decree-amount, the whole of the amount must be deemed to have been received co-instanti the sale is made, and there is no necessity for the purchaser to pay into Court any amount.[1] But if the amount of the bid is greater than the decree-amount, he may be excused from depositing the twenty-five per cent. on the date of sale, but will have to deposit the balance within fifteen days from the sale.[2] Where a decree-holder is permitted to bid subject to certain conditions and those conditions are not fulfilled, the Court can, either under R. 86, infra or under its inherent powers, refuse to confirm the sale and may order a re-sale.[3]

5. Extension of time for payment—Material irregularity.—The time for the payment of the balance of the purchase money under this rule can be extended with the consent of all the parties concerned.[1] In the absence of such consent, the Court ought not to extend the time or accept a deposit made beyond time. But where the Court does so extend the time, it is only an irregularity within the meaning of R. 90, infra and does not render the sale a nullity.[2] And if, in such a case, the sale is confirmed and the money is drawn by the decree-holder without objection, the judgment-debtor must be taken to have waived the irregularity, and, the sale cannot be set aside by reason of such irregularity.[3]

R. 86. [S. 308.] In default of payment within the period mentioned in the last preceding rule, the deposit may, if the Court thinks fit, after defraying the expenses of the sale, be forfeited to the Government, and the property shall be re-sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold.

Synopsis.

1. Scope of the rule.
2. Forfeiture of deposit.
3. Deficiency in re-sale.
4. Appeal.

1. Scope of the rule.—Where the auction-purchaser fails to pay into Court the balance of purchase-money as required by R. 85 it is the imperative duty of the Court to have the property re-sold.[1] Anyone who is interested in having the property re-sold may move the Court to do so; there is nothing to justify the view that the decree-holder alone can move the Court in the matter.[2]

The provisions of this rule do not apply to sales held in execution of decrees passed by the High Court of Calcutta in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, inasmuch as that Court has framed rules, under S. 129, regulating its own procedure.[3]

2. Forfeiture of deposit.—Under S. 308 of the old Code it was held that that section was imperative and that on default by the purchaser at a Court sale to deposit the purchase-money within fifteen days from the sale, the deposit made on the date of sale must be forfeited.[1] The word 'shall'' in the old section has been replaced by the words ''may, if the Court thinks fit''. Therefore, under this rule, the Court has got a discretion whether to forfeit the initial deposit or not.[2]

Where an auction-purchaser deposits a sum in excess of the twenty-five per cent. on the date of sale, the Court has got jurisdiction to forfeit only the twenty-five per cent.[3]

O.21, R.88, Notes 1—4.

1. Scope and object of the rule.—The object of this rule is to enable co-sharers in undivided immoveable property to keep out strangers if they so desire.[1] The rule provides, in substance, that a co-sharer of the immoveable property of which a share is sold, is entitled to pre-empt that share when the highest bid is made by a person who is not a co-sharer.[2]

This rule does not apply where the property sold is not a share of undivided immoveable property, but the right and interest of a mortgagee in such a share.[3] Nor does it apply to land sold in execution of the decree of a Revenue Court.[4]

This rule is applicable to sales under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, see R. 83. Notes, and is unaffected by the Agra Pre-emption Act (II of 1922, see S. 6), or by the Punjab Pre-emption Act [I of 1913, see S. 2 (2)].

2. Co-sharer.—There is no right of pre-emption in the case of involuntary sales except as provided in this rule and therefore a usufructuary mortgagee, not being a co-sharer, is not entitled to claim the benefit of this rule.[1] A defeasible, title to a share in immoveable property acquired by a person does not give him the right to pre-empt another share in the same property as a co-sharer.[2]

3. Bid the same sum.—In order to enable a co-sharer to claim the benefit of this rule, it is not enough if he merely asserts his claim and offers to pay, at the time the sale is knocked down, the sum equal to that bid by the stranger-purchaser: but he must make a distinct bid in the ordinary manner of offering bids.[1]

4. Duty of officer conducting the sale.—It is the duty of the officer conducting the sale to take notice of a claim of pre-emption made by a co-sharer under this rule and to receive the purchase-money, subject of course to any question which may be raised by any party interested in the sale as to the claimant's title to advance the claim.[1]

Where the claimant has deposited the purchase-money and fulfilled the conditions of sale so far as he is concerned, the sale is not defeasible by reason of the failure of the bidder to complete the deposit of the purchase-money.[2]

5. Suit for pre-emption.—Where a claim to preference is made under this rule by a co-sharer as against a stranger and the Court declares one of them to be the purchaser and confirms the sale, a suit by the person against whom the order is made to set it aside will, it is conceived, be barred by general principles of res judicata. The High Court of Allahabad seems to be of the opinion that a confirmation of an execution sale could be made only under R. 92, that therefore, a confirmation of the sale under this rule is also one under R. 92, and that a suit would consequently be barred by sub-R. 3 of that rule.[1]

6. Appeal.—No appeal lies against an order under this rule confirming the sale in favour of a co-sharer.[1]

R. 89. [S. 310-A.] (1) Where immoveable property has been sold in execution of a decree[3] any person,[10] either owning such property or holding an interest therein[12] by virtue of a title acquired before such sale,[11] may apply [17] to have the sale set aside on his depositing[16] in Court[9]:—

Application to set aside sale on deposit.

(a) for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per cent.[21] of the purchase-money, and

(b) for payment to the decree-holder[23] the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount[22] which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree-holder.

(2) Where a person applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale of his immoveable property, he shall not, unless he withdraws his application, be entitled to make or prosecute an application under this rule.[24]

(3) Nothing in this rule shall relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale.

1. Legislative changes.—

(1) The words "sold in execution of a decree" in sub-Rule (1) have been substituted for the words "sold under this Chapter". See Note 3, infra.

(2) The words "any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale", in sub-Rule (1) have been substituted for the words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold under this chapter". See Notes 10 to 15, infra.

(3) The words "unless he withdraws his application" and the words "or prosecute" in sub-Rule (2) are new. See Note 24, infra.

S. 310-A was introduced in the old Code for the first time by Act V of 1894. It was held in the undermentioned cases[1] that S. 310-A was applicable to execution proceedings pending on the date the Act V of 1894 came into force.

2. Scope and object of the rule.—The provisions of this rule are in the nature of an indulgence to the judgment-debtor; it gives him a last chance of getting the sale set aside before confirmation upon the terms of satisfying the decretal debt and of paying compensation to the auction-purchaser for the loss of bargain.[1] The object of the rule is "not merely or not specifically to preserve the immoveable property in the hands of the judgment-debtor, but to ensure, so far as may be possible, that immoveable properties shall not, at Court sales, be sold at inadequate prices".[2]

It has been already mentioned in Note 2 to O. 21, R. 2 that once a Court sale has been duly effected in favour of third person, it is not competent to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor to get rid of it by merely asserting that the decree has been adjusted or satisfied out of Court. The only means by which the sale can be avoided is by an application under this Rule accompanied by the required deposit in Court; where no such application is made within the time limited, it is obligatory on the Court under R. 92, infra to pass an order confirming the sale, notwithstanding the circumstance that the decree-holder had admitted satisfaction of the decree.[3] But if the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser agree and the decree is otherwise adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the Court can set aside the sale under its inherent powers notwithstanding that the procedure prescribed by this Rule has not been followed.[4] This rule has no application to a sale under O. 21, R. 32 to compensate a decree-holder for the disobedience by the judgment-debtor of a decree against him for restitution of conjugal rights.[5]

3. Applicability of this rule to sales under mortgage decrees.—The words "sold under this chapter" in S. 310-A of the old Code gave rise to a conflict of opinion on the question whether that section was applicable to sales under mortgage decrees. The High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay and Madras and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh held that though the mortgaged properties were sold by virtue of a power given by the Transfer of Property Act, still the properties were sold under Chapter XIX (Execution of decrees) of the Code and that S. 310-A therefore applied to such sales.[1] The High Court of Calcutta, however, held a contrary view.[2] This conflict has now been set at rest by the substitution of the words "sold in execution of a decree" for the words "sold under this chapter" and by the incorporation, in the Code, of the provisions relating to mortgage decrees. It is now clear that that the rule applies to sales in execution of mortgage decrees also.[3]

The High Court of Calcutta has held that this Rule applies to sales in execution of mortgage decree passed on the original side of the High Court.[4]

4. Sales under decrees on award.—Where an award in a pending suit directs the sale of certain immoveable properties, and a decree is passed in terms of the award, this Rule applies to a sale held in pursuance of the terms of such award.[1] The reason is that the sale is one in execution of the decree.

5. Sales by receiver.—A sale by the Official Receiver is not governed by this Rule.[1] Nor does this Rule apply to a sale, by the Official Referee in a partnership suit, for the purpose of realising the assets of the partnership.[2]

6. Sales under rent acts.—This Rule does not apply to sales under the Bengal Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (VIII of 1869)[1] or to sales under the Public Demands Recovery Act[2] or to proceeding under the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908) (S. 192-A).

The Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) contains a provision in S. 174 almost similar to this Rule prescribing the procedure for setting aside sales in cases where a tenure or holding has been sold for arrears of rent. Under that Section, as it originally stood, the judgment-debtor alone was entitled to apply. Therefore, it was held that the application of a person other than the judgment-debtor came under the scope of this rule, provided he was otherwise entitled to apply under this Rule.[3] This Act was amended by the Bengal Legislative Council by Act I of 1907, S. 54 which provided that S. 310-A of the Code of 1882 (corresponding to this section) shall not apply to sales under the Bengal Tenancy Act.[4] It has been further amended by the Bengal Council in 1928, providing that the judgment-debtor or any person whose interests are affected by the sale may apply. The Legislative Council of Eastern Bengal and Assam, to which territory also the Bengal Tenancy Act applies, has not amended this Act. Therefore, in cases arising in that province the application of a person other than the judgment-debtor is governed by this Rule.[5]

It was held that S. 310-A applied to sales under the Landlord and Tenant Act (Bengal Act X of 1859).[6]

Similar provision is made in respect of sales of a Tenure or holding for an arrear of rent under the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913) (S. 228).

7. Applicability of O. 9 to proceedings under this rule.—An application to set aside a sale under this Rule is a proceeding in execution and consequently the provisions of O. 9 do not apply to it.[1] In the undermentioned case[2] a second application to set aside the sale after the dismissal for default of the first application, was treated as one for review.

8. Immoveable property (see also S. 16 ante).—A simple mortgage bond[1] or a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage[2] is not immoveable property within the meaning of this Rule. But the interest of a mortgagee in a usufructuary mortgage is immoveable property for the purposes of this Rule.[3] See also Notes to O. 21, R. 54, ante.

Where a judgment-debtor was the owner of a house and of the land on which it stood, and the superstructure alone was sold in execution of a decree, it was held that it was immoveable property and that, therefore, an application would lie under this Rule to set aside the sale.[4]

9. Court—Meaning of.—The "Court" mentioned in this Rule is the Civil Court and not the Court of the Collector or of the Mamlatdar to which execution has been transferred under S. 68, ante. Therefore, a deposit made in such Court is not a valid deposit.[1] But where an applicant deposits the amount required in the office of the Collector who had sold the property, and intimation is sent to the Civil Court that the money had been transferred to the Civil Court account within thirty days of the date of the sale, the deposit is good and the provisions of this Rule are complied with.[2]

The High Court of Bombay has, by virtue of its rule-making powers, framed a new R. 91-A which provides that where a decree has been sent for execution to a collector and the sale has been held by him or his subordinate, an application and a deposit made under this Rule, if made to the Collector or his subordinate must be deemed to have been made to or in the 'Court' within the meaning of this Rule, and that the sale can be set aside on the basis of such an application and deposit.[3]

10. Who may apply under this rule.—Where an application is made by a person to set aside a sale under this rule on the allegation that he is a person entitled to apply and such allegation is challenged by the opposite party, the question must be determined by the Court.[1]

O.21, R.89, Notes 10—12.

Under S. 310-A of the old Code "any person whose immoveable property had been sold" was entitled to apply. The amending words in this rule, "any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale", have widened the scope of this rule by allowing persons who are not parties to the suit to apply to have a sale set aside.[2]

As to persons who are entitled to apply under this rule, see Notes 11 to 15, infra.

11. "By virtue of a title acquired before such sale."—The words "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale" apply to the words "owning such property" as well as to the words "holding an interest therein".[1]

12. "Any person owning such property or holding an interest therein.—A judgment-debtor who has not sold his property is clearly entitled to apply under this rule for setting aside the sale of his property. A purchaser from a mortgagor-judgment-debtor, who is bound by the decree is also entitled to apply under this rule.[1] An Interim Receiver appointed under S. 20 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) after the execution sale of the insolvent's properties has no power to apply under this rule, as he cannot be said to be the owner "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale".[2]

A mortgagee of the property sold in execution of a decree is a person who has an interest therein by virtue of which he is competent to apply.[3] Under the old Code it was held that he was not a person whose immoveable property has been sold, as his interest in the mortgaged property could not pass by the sale.[4] Under this rule, the word 'property' means tangible property (whether or not persons other than the judgment-debtor have any interest in it), and does not mean merely the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor alone.[5] Therefore, a mortgagee or lessee whose interests are not affected by the sale is also entitled to apply.[6]

Can a person who has purchased the property from the judgment-debtor before attachment or a person who claims by a title paramount to that of the judgment-debtor, apply to set aside a sale? It was held under the old Code that he could not, on the ground that the property was not sold as his.[7] Under the present Code there is a conflict of opinion, some cases holding that he can apply,[8] while others, that he cannot.[9] It is submitted that the latter view unduly restricts the scope of this rule. O.21, R.89, Notes 12—14.

13. Transferee before Court sale.—A transferee from the judgment-debtor, of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree for money, after the attachment but before the Court sale, is the owner of the property and can apply to set aside the sale.[1] Though, under S. 64, ante the transfer may be void as against the claim under the attachment, that section does not invalidate the transfer for all purposes. Under the old Code it was held that a judgment-debtor who has sold the property after attachment was also entitled to apply to set aside the sale.[2]

14. Transferee after Court sale.—Where the judgment debtor transfers his property to a third person after the execution sale, but before confirmation thereof, the transferee is not a person who holds an interest in such property "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale". He is, therefore, not entitled to apply under this rule to set aside the sale of such property in execution of a decree.[1] But can the judgment-debtor in such cases apply under this rule? Where the transfer is by way of a mortgage it is, of course, clear that the judgment-debtor would still be the owner of the equity of redemption and, therefore, will be entitled to apply.[2] Even where the transfer is by way of an absolute sale, it has been held by all the Courts except the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh that he can apply.[3] The reason is that, in such cases, the judgment-debtor must be deemed to own the property for the purpose of the proceedings under this rule. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh has, however, held that he is not so entitled to apply.[4] It is submitted that this view is not correct. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned case[5] that where, after the Court sale, the judgment-debtor executes a mortgage of the properties and the mortgagee and the judgment-debtor apply to set aside the sale, each depositing a portion of the amount, the two applications may be treated as one made by the judgment-debtor, notwithstanding that the mortgagee was not independently entitled to apply.

15. Other persons interested.—Apart from the class of persons already mentioned in Notes 11 to 14, ante, the following persons are also entitled to apply under this rule:—

(1) A beneficial owner, in cases where the property has been sold in execution of a decree against his Benamidar.[1]

(2) A Benamidar transferee from the judgment-debtor.[2]

(3) A co-sharer in the property sold.[3]

(4) Where the share of a member of a joint Hindu family is sold, the other members having an interest in the properties.[4]

(5) Where property is sold in execution of a decree against a Hindu widow, the reversioner to the estate.[5] It is not necessary to have an interest de praesenti.

The following persons are not entitled to apply under this rule:—

(1) The holder of a money decree who has attached the property sold, is not a person who has an interest in the property by virtue of a title acquired before such sale.[10]

(2) A person having no title to the property and not in possession thereof, is not entitled to apply.[11] But a trespasser who has entered into possession before the Court sale, holds an interest therein by a virtue of a title acquired before such sale, even though his title has not been perfected or completed by prescription.[12]

(3) A person in whose favour there is merely an agreement to sell the property cannot apply to have the sale set aside.[13]

16. Deposit in Court.—The deposit made under this rule by an applicant must be of such a nature as to be payable at once to the parties. Therefore a deposit, in order to be valid, must be in cash and not by Government promissory notes or cheque.[1] A tender by a person who is neither an Attorney nor a Vakil nor a Muktear for the applicant, does not comply with the provisions of this rule and is consequently invalid.[2] But if the lodgment schedule was signed by the proper person, the fact that the actual payment into the treasury is not made by his recognised agent, is immaterial.[3]

As to time for deposit, see Note 28, infra.

17. Deposit and application.—An application for setting aside a sale is necessary before the Court can be called upon to act under this rule.[1] A mere deposit of the amount without an application in time, is not enough, and the sale cannot be set aside.[2] A mere lodgment schedule cannot be treated as an application within the meaning of this rule.[3] It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case[4] that where a judgment-debtor paid the requisite amount by a challan and prayed that the execution may be closed, a separate application is not essential and that the challan which set out the purpose was a sufficient compliance with this rule.

The application may be oral or written.[5] It will not be rendered invalid by the absence of a formal prayer for setting aside the sale.[6] Where the application does not disclose the nature of the interest of the applicant, the Court should not reject the application, but should direct the applicant to supply the necessary particulars.[7]

18. Failure to deposit full amount.—It has been already mentioned in Note 2 ante that this rule is in the nature of a concession shown to the judgment-debtor. The applicant must, therefore, strictly comply with the requirements thereof and a sale will not be set aside unless the entire amount specified in sub-Rule (1), is deposited within 30 days from the date of the sale.[1] Thus a part payment coupled with an undertaking to pay the balance cannot be considered as a valid deposit.[2] But if the conditions of this rule are complied with, the failure to pay an additional amount to cover the poundage fee is a mere irregularity which will not prevent the Court from entertaining the application.[3]

O.21, R.89, Notes 18—20.

An execution sale cannot be set aside under this rule on deposit of a part of the amount specified in the proclamation of sale even though the decree-holder consents not to claim any further sum so far as that execution application was concerned.[4] Where, however, the amount mentioned in the proclamation of sale is deposited, the fact that the proclamation of sale was incorrectly drawn up and did not specify the full amount for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, will not render the deposit invalid.[5]

The sub-R. (3) does not mean that the applicant should deposit also costs and interests not covered by the proclamation and a Court cannot refuse to set aside a sale merely because such costs and interest are not also deposited within time.[6]

19. Mistake in calculating the amount to be deposited.—Where the original deposit is deficient and it appears that the deficiency is due to a wrong calculation made by an officer of the Court and the applicant makes good the deficiency as soon as it is pointed out, though after thirty days have elapsed, is the deposit valid? It has been held that if the mistake is the act of the prescribed officer acting in accordance with the prescribed rules of the Court, then it will not affect the party.[1] Otherwise no relief can be given to a party even though he is misled by an officer of the Court.[2]

20. Conditional deposit.—In order that a deposit under this rule may be valid, it must be unconditional.[1] If the applicant prevents the money from being available to the decree-holder forthwith and unconditionally, the deposit is bad and will not entitle him to have the sale set aside.[2] Since this rule is inconsistent with the notion that a payment into Court may be made under protest or subject to conditions, the Court has no power to order that the decree-holder should draw out the money only on his executing a security bond.[3] If, as soon as an objection to the conditional deposit is taken, the applicant withdraws his condition, the money becomes available for payment to the decree-holder before he has made any attempt to withdraw it and therefore the deposit is not invalid.[4]

Where a deposit is properly made under this rule, but subsequently an application is made that the money may be retained in Court pending the result of an application under O. 9, R. 13, the subsequent condition cannot invalidate the deposit which was originally good.[5]

21. A sum equal to 5 per cent.—Sub-R. 1, Cl. (a) provides that the deposit should include a sum equal to five per cent. of the purchase-money for payment to the purchaser, and a sale cannot be set aside unless the 5 per cent. is also deposited.[1] That amount is intended partly as a solatium to the purchaser for the loss of that which is, perhaps a good bargain.[2] A decree-holder-purchaser is as much entitled to that solatium as an outside purchaser.[3] To hold otherwise would be to read into the rule after the word 'purchaser' the words 'if such purchaser be not the decree-holder'.[4]

Where, out of two joint decree-holders one of them obtains permission to bid for himself alone and not on behalf of the other, and purchases the property and thereafter the sale is set aside under this rule, the compensation amount of five per cent. should go exclusively to him and not to the other decree-holder.[5]

22. Less any amount received.—If, after the proclamation of sale is drawn up, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor adjust the decree in full or in part, the adjustment is tantamount to a receipt of the amount by the decree-holder and it is not necessary that that amount should be deposited when applying to set aside a sale under this rule.[1] The expression "any amount which may have been received by the decree-holder" in sub-R. 1, clause (b) means money actually received by the decree-holder and does not include payment of the sale proceeds into Court.[2]

The judgment-debtor paid into Court Rs. 452-13-0 and applied to have the sale of lot B set aside. It was held that as the decree-holder had not actually received the sum of Rs. 420 the deposit was not full and the sale could not be set aside.[3]

O.21, R.89, Notes 22—23.

On the same principle a judgment-debtor is not entitled to take advantage of any deposit made by his co-judgment-debtor which was made not conjointly with him, but independently of him.[4]

Where a sale proclamation specified the entire amount due under the decree and also contained a direction that certain items were to be sold for only a part of the decree amount and after sale the persons interested in such items applied to set aside the sale on their depositing the amount for which their property was sold together with the five per cent. due to the purchaser, it was held that the deposit was valid.[5] The reason is that in such a case the words "amount specified in the sale proclamation can only mean the amount which is to be realised by the sale of the particular properties."

23. "For payment to the decree-holder".—The words 'decree-holder' in this rule means the decree-holder for the satisfaction of whose decree the sale was ordered and does not include other decree-holders who may be entitled to claim rateable distribution under S. 73. Therefore, it is not necessary for the applicant to deposit into Court the amounts due to the other decree-holders claiming rateable distribution.[1] As the payment under this rule is made for a specific purpose, viz., for payment to the decree-holder, other persons who have obtained decrees against the judgment-debtor are not entitled to claim rateably in the amount deposited by an applicant under this rule.[2] See also Note 4 to S. 73. Where a decree is attached by two persons who are both substituted for the decree-holder-defendant and a sale held in execution of the attached decree at the instance of one of them is set aside under this rule, both of them will be regarded as the "decree-holder" and will be entitled to the amount deposited.[3] Where the property of a judgment-debtor is attached in execution of several decrees and a sale in execution of one of the decrees is set aside by a deposit, the sale does not put an end to the attachment made at the instance of the other decree-holders.[4]

Where, in a mortgage suit, a decree for sale in favour of the plaintiff was passed subject to the payment of a certain prior charge in favour of a defendant out of the sale proceeds, and the sale in execution was set aside under this rule by one of the subsequent mortgagees, the decree-holder was held entitled to draw the whole amount without any deduction being made on account of the prior charge.[5] The reason is that there were no sale proceeds out of which the prior charge was to be paid, as the sale was set aside.

Upon a sale being set aside under this rule the decree-holder is not entitled to claim interest from the date of sale till the date of deposit.[6]

24. Sub-R. 2.—The object of this sub-rule is to prevent a person who intends to impeach a sale under R. 90 from, at the same time, obtaining the benefit of the concession granted by this rule.[1] Where applications under Rr. 89 and 90 made by the same person are pending, the Court ought to call upon the applicant to make his election as to which application he will prosecute.[2] The fact that an applicant makes an application under R. 90 is not a permanent disqualification and therefore he may carry on the application under this rule, if the other application has been withdrawn.[3] A person whose application under R. 90 is dismissed is also not disqualified from subsequently applying under this rule.[4] An application made by a person under this rule is not barred by the pendency of an application under R. 90 by another person.[5]

Sub-R. 2 will not apply if the application to set aside the sale does not come within the scope of R. 90 but comes within the scope of S. 47, ante.[6] Irregularity in the conduct of or in publishing the sale cannot be taken as a plea in an application under this rule.[7]

There is no provision converse to this sub-rule and therefore there is nothing to prevent an application being made under R. 90 where an application under this rule has been made and withdrawn or dismissed.[8]

28. Limitation.—An application under this rule to set aside a sale is governed by Art. 166 of the Limitation Act and must be made on or before thirty days from the date of the sale.[1] The starting point of limitation for such an application is the date on which the sale is completed, that is, the day on which the highest bid is accepted and the twenty-five per cent. of the purchase money is deposited[2] and not the date on which the sale is confirmed.[3] The provisions of S. 14 of the Limitation Act are not applicable to an application under this rule.[4]

As to the effect of the failure to implead the auction purchaser and to issue notice to him within thirty days, see Notes to O. 21, R. 92.

Sub-R. (2) of R. 92, infra and the words "may apply . . . on his depositing" in this rule show that not only the application, but the deposit also must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale.[5] If the deposit is not made in time, the Court has no power to extend the time either under S. 148 of this Code or under S. 5 of the Limitation Act.[6] But, where the applicant, without any fault of his own, is not able to deposit the money into Court, on account of the fact that the challan was not signed by the Judge and returned to him in time or on account of some other act of the Court, the deposit made on the next day will be a valid deposit on the principle expressed by the maxim "actus curiae neminem gravabit" an act of Court prejudices no man.[7] Where the Court is closed on the last day for making the deposit it may be made on the next re-opening day by virtue of the provisions of S. 10 of the General Clauses Act.[8]

The provisions of S. 7 of the Limitation Act do not apply to the period of 30 days for making a deposit under this rule, as that period is not fixed by any provision of the Limitation Act, but by a provision in this Code, namely, R. 92, infra. Consequently a minor is not entitled, by reason of his disability to an extension of the period under S. 7 of the Limitation Act.[9]

29. Appeal.—There was no provision in the old Code for an appeal against an order under S. 310-A. Being, however, a decision on a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree it was held that such an order would be appealable if the decree-holder was the purchaser inasmuch as the question was one between the parties to the suit.[1] But where the auction purchaser was a stranger there was a conflict of opinion as to the appealability of the order.[2] See also Note 18 to S. 47 for a fuller discussion.

Under this Code an order setting aside a sale or refusing to set aside a sale under R. 92, infra is appealable as an order under O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (j).[3] An appeal will lie even in a case where the sale is in execution of a small cause decree, transferred to the original side for execution against immoveable property.[4] The forum of appeal depends upon the value for jurisdiction stated in the suit in which the decree has been passed.[5] No second appeal will lie from an order under this rule read with R. 92, by virtue of the provisions of S. 104.[6]

Even though the matter may fall under S. 47 (in cases where the decree-holder is the purchaser) the order will not be appealable as a decree under this Code, as the definition of decree in S. 2 excludes even an order under S. 47 if it is appealable as an order. See Note 2 to S. 2, sub-S. 2. O.21, R.89, Notes 29—30.

In cases under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act an appeal lies as from a decree where the decree-holder is the purchaser,[7] but not where such purchaser is a stranger.[8] But the Bengal Legislature has in 1928 amended S. 174 of that Act by adding a clause providing for an appeal under that section in such cases.

When an application under this rule has been dismissed for default and an application for restoration thereof has been unsuccessful, no appeal lies against the order refusing to restore the application.[9]

30. Revision.—Where a Court refuses to entertain an application under this rule of a person who is entitled to apply, on the ground that the applicant has no locus standi to apply or allows the application of a person who has not the legal character specified in this rule, is the order revisable by the High Court? It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta,[1] Madras,[2] and Patna[3] and by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[4] that the High Court can interfere, on the ground that, in such cases, the Court either refuses to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law or exercises a jurisdiction not vested in it by law. The High Court of Allahabad[5] has, however, taken a contrary view that the Court has jurisdiction to decide whether he is entitled to apply and that a decision arrived at in the exercise of such jurisdiction, even though erroneous cannot be interfered with by the High Court in revision.

Where an applicant has complied with the terms of this rule and his application is nevertheless rejected,[6] or where a sale is set aside even though the applicant does not conform to the provisions of this rule,[7] the order is open to revision by the High Court.

See also the undermentioned cases.[8]

31. Deposit—Suit for refund and contribution.—Where property belonging to A is sold in execution of a decree against B and A has the sale set aside on depositing the amount under this rule can he sue the decree-holder for the recovery of such amount? It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta and Patna that he is not so entitled to recover.[1] They proceed upon the view that the payment under this rule must be taken to have been deposited for payment to the decree-holder voluntarily and unconditionally. But the High Court of Madras has held that A is entitled to recover the amount under S. 72 of the Indian Contract Act, as money paid under coercion.[2]

Where the deposit is made by one of several judgment-debtors or by a person entitled to apply under this rule and the sale is set aside in consequence, the person making the deposit is entitled to sue the other persons liable to pay the decree-amount for contribution or for re-imbursement as the case may be.[3] The High Court of Madras has held in the undermen-

1. Legislative changes.—

1. The words "or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets" after the word "decree-holder" have been newly added. See Note 7, infra.

2. The words "or whose interests are affected by the sale" have been substituted for the words "or any person whose immoveable property has been sold". See Notes 6 and 8, infra.

3. The words "or fraud" have been newly added after the word "irregularity". See Notes 37 and 50, infra.

4 The words "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied" have been substituted for the words "unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court". See Note 40, infra.

Under the second proviso added to this rule by the High Court of Rangoon, it has been held that the purchase-money deposited by the auction-purchaser and standing to the credit of the decree-holder may be treated as the deposit required by the proviso, when the applicant is the decree-holder.[1]

2. Scope and applicability of the rule.– The rule provides for the setting aside of sales in execution, on the ground of material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting them. The auction purchaser at an execution sale has no absolute right to its being confirmed when there is an irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it; if the irregularity or fraud is a material one and has caused substantial injury to any party, the sale will be set aside at the instance of that party[1] even though the purchaser be a stranger.[2]

Before, however, a sale can be so set aside, the following conditions must be satisfied, viz.:—

(1) There must be an application for the purpose.[3] The Court cannot set aside the sale under its inherent powers[4] especially when it is barred by limitation.[5] But the application need not be accompanied by a deposit as is necessary for an application under R. 89.[5-a]

(2) The application must be one under this rule. A sale cannot be set aside under this rule on an application made under R. 89.[6]

(3) The application must be by one or other of the persons specified in the rule.[7]

(4) The application must be made to the Court executing the decree; thus it cannot be made to the Collector to whom the decree has been transferred for execution.[8]

(5) The application must be based on an irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale.[9]

Thus the following objections are outside the scope of the rule, viz.:—

(i) An objection that the sale is illegal and therefore null and void.[10]

(ii) An objection that the Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree or sell the property.[11]

judgment-debtor and the decree-holder cannot, by a compromise between themselves, have the sale set aside behind the back of the auction-purchaser.[22]

An execution sale vitiated by irregularity or fraud should ordinarily be set aside in its entirety[23] except when the sale is by separate lots[24] in which case only the sale of the lots so vitiated, will be set aside.[25]

The effect of setting aside a sale under the rule is to restore the parties to the position which they occupied immediately before the sale.[26] If the purchaser has got into possession before the sale, the judgment-debtor can be put back in possession by way of restitution.[27] In proper cases he can be awarded compensation for the loss of profits during the period he was out of possession.[28] Conversely, the purchaser can recover from the judgment-debtor any money which he might have paid bona fide in order to save and preserve the property;[29] and if there was no irregularity or fraud for which he was responsible, he can also be awarded interest on the purchase money deposited by him.[30]

The rule applies also to sales in execution of mortgage decrees.[31] The principle of the rule is also applicable to the following sales, viz.:—

(1) Sales by Receivers appointed by Court.[32]

(2) Sales under the Bengal Tenancy Act.[33]

(3) Sales under the Madras Rent Recovery Act VIII of 1865.[34]

The rule does not apply to sales held by the Official Receiver under the Provincial Insolvency Act.[35] It has also been held to be inapplicable to sales under the Madras Estates Land Act.[36]

As to whether an application under this rule can be filed after confirmation of the sale, see the undermentioned case.[37]

3. Immoveable property.—See also S. 16, Note 4 and O. 21, R. 54. A house attached to land is "immoveable property".[1] A debt secured by a mortgagee of immoveable property or a decree thereon is only moveable property and this rule does not apply to a sale thereof in execution.[2]

4. Sale will not be set aside unless application is made under this rule. —See Note 2 above.

5. Who may apply under the rule.—Under the old Code the right to apply under the corresponding section was limited to the decree-holder and to persons whose property had been sold.[1-a] Under the present rule, however, the right is conceded to:—

(1) the decree-holder;

(2) any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of the assets; and

(3) any person whose interests are affected by the sale.

Where A who holds a decree against B, attaches a decree held by B against C, and as attaching creditor executes B's decree, and C's properties are sold in such execution, B will be considered to be a decree-holder entitled to apply under the rule.[1]

Where after an application under the rule the applicant dies, his legal representative can continue the proceedings.[2]

6. Auction-purchaser.—Under the old Code an auction-purchaser could not apply under this rule as he was neither a decree-holder nor a person whose immoveable property has been sold.[1] In the present rule the expression "or any person whose interests are affected by the sale" has been newly introduced Does this expression include an auction-purchaser? Yes, according to the High Courts of Madras and Allahabad, the reason being that the words "interests" are not confined to interest prior to the sale but include "interest" created by the sale itself.[2] The High Courts of Calcutta,[3] Lahore[4] and Patna[5] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind[6] have, on the other hand, held that the "interests" referred to in the rule are interests independent of the sale and not such as come into existence as a result of the sale.

The decisions of the High Court of Rangoon[7] and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[8] are conflicting on the point.

7. Persons entitled to rateable distribution.—Although a person entitled to rateable distribution had not been specified in Section 311 of the old Code as a person entitled to apply thereunder, such right had been conceded to him on the ground that he was a "decree-holder".[1] The present rule specifically includes such persons.[2]

Persons entitled to dividends under the Provincial Insolvency Act are not persons entitled to rateable distribution within the meaning of the rule, and cannot therefore apply to set aside execution sales.[3]

8. "Any person whose interests are affected by the sale."—The expression "any persons whose immoveable property has been sold", in the old S. 311 was interpreted by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court to mean "any person whose interests are affected by the sale".[1] The present rule gives effect to this view.

O.21, R.90, Note 8.

The word 'interest' need not necessarily be a proprietary or a possessory interest; it may be a pecuniary or other interest.[2] Thus, an attaching creditor in whose favour a decree has been passed is a person 'whose interests are affected by the sale' within the meaning of this Rule.[3] Similarly where a mortgage decree was passed against A and B, and the sale of the properties of A, was postponed until the sale of the properties of B, and the properties of B were sold for an inadequate price it was held that A was a person whose interests were affected by the sale.[3-a] But a person who has merely obtained an attachment before judgment cannot be said to be a person having any such interest.[4] It is not necessary that the interest need be a present interest; a reversioner to a Hindu widow's estate[5] or a person who is entitled to specific performance of a contract to sell the property[6] can apply under this rule.

The following persons have been held entitled to apply as being persons 'whose interests are affected by the sale:—

(1) A real owner of property sold in execution of a decree against his benamidar.[7]

(2) A judgment-debtor who has sold away his property.[8]

(3) The legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor.[9]

(4) Where the judgment-debtor is a minor, his guardian.[10]

(5) Where the judgment-debtor is a ward of Court, the Court of wards.[11]

A sale which is illegal and void is not within the contemplation of this rule. Such a sale need not in fact be set aside at all and can be ignored.[3] Nor need any injury be shown to have been sustained by reason of such sale.[4] O.21, R.90 Notes 10--12.

In determining what is illegal and what is irregular it may be remarked that the distinction is one of degree.[5] As a general rule, in order to establish an illegality there must be shown some disregard of a positive prohibition of the law.[6]

See Note 12 to Section 115 for a fuller discussion on this point.

11. Material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.—The term "irregularity" means "not being in conformity to some recognised rule" and in the present context it means "not being in conformity to the rules prescribed for regulating execution sales".[1] The expression "publishing or conducting the sale" refers respectively to the proclamation of sale under R. 66 and to the action of the sale officer.[2] The words "conducting the sale" does not refer to anything done before the sale or any proceedings unconnected with the actual carrying out of the sale.[3] The material irregularity complained of must be one on the part of the Court or its officer.[4]

12. Omission to attach property and irregularity in attaching property before sale.—It was originally held by the High Court of Allahabad that a regularly perfected attachment was an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple money-decrees and that where there was no such attachment the sale was void and not merely voidable.[1] In view of the decision of the Privy Council in Tassaduk v. Ahmad, I.L.R. 21, Cal. 66 it has now been held by the said High Court that the absence of attachment is only a material irregularity which would not render the sale ipso facto void.[2] The same view has been held by all the other Courts except the High Court of Bombay.[3]

O.21, R.90, Notes 12—14.

The High Court of Bombay has held in the case cited below[3-a] that a sale without attachment is invalid and can be set aside in a proceeding under S. 47.

The question next arises whether, in cases in which it has been held that the absence of attachment is only a material irregularity, it is an irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule. According to the High Courts of Calcutta and Rangoon, it is not.[4] The reason, it is conceived, is, that such an irregularity is one which is antecedent to the publishing and conducting of the sale and, therefore, will be a ground for a proceeding only under S. 47. The High Courts of Allahabad, Lahore and Madras have, on the other hand, held, that it is an irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale.[5] The publication of the attachment is . . . . . a step leading up to the publication of the sale, the actual proclamation of sale being a notice to the public that the sale is to take place upon a particular date. The absence of attachment may, therefore, be deemed to be a material irregularity in the publishing of the sale".[6]

Where there has been an attachment an error in the warrant of such attachment[7] or the absence of notice of the attachment to the judgment-debtor[8] would only be mere irregularities which will not vitiate the sale.

13. Omission to make an order for sale.—The omission to pass an order absolute for sale under S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act in a mortgage decree was held in the undermentioned case[1] to be not an irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale but one antecedent to it and that, it, therefore, did not fall within this rule.

14. Omission to issue notice.—An omission to issue notice under R. 22 is an irregularity in proceedings which are anterior to the publishing or the conduct of the sale.[1] It also goes to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree and renders the sale illegal and void.[2] It is therefore not a matter coming under this rule.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the non-service of notice under R. 66 will be a ground for setting aside a sale under this rule. According to the High Court of Madras the irregularity is not one relating to the publication or the conduct of the sale and that the question can be considered only under S. 47.[3] The Chief Court of Lower Burma has held that the absence of such a notice is more than an irregularity and renders the sale void.[4] The High Courts of Calcutta and Lahore and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur have held that it is an irregularity in publishing the sale.[5]

Where no notice under R. 66 is required to be given, as where, a fresh proclamation is ordered to issue under R. 69, the non-issue of notice is no ground for setting aside a sale under this rule.[6]

Non-publication of the notices prescribed by Regulation VIII of 1819 in cases of putni sales has been held to be a material irregularity.[7]

See also Note 61 to S. 47 and O. 21, R. 66, Notes 5 and 16.

15. Irregularities in publishing the sale—Omission to publish or irregularity in publishing sale proclamation.—The failure to publish the sale proclamation is an irregularity within this rule.[1] So is an irregularity in the preparation and service thereof.[2] As has been seen in the Note to R. 67, ante, the proclamation should be published on the spot[3] and a copy of the proclamation should be affixed to a conspicuous portion of the property[4] and a failure to do the one or the other will be an irregularity within this rule. If the properties are situated in several villages or are distinct, the failure to proclaim the sale at each village or property will be an irregularity.[5] If, however, the properties are sold in lots and they are sufficiently separated from each other, the affixture of the proclamation on one of such lots may be enough.[6] The failure to affix a copy of the sale proclamation in the Collector's office as required by R. 54 has also been held to be an irregularity under this rule [7]: but not the failure to direct an advertisement of sale in the Gazette.[8]

16. Misdescription of property.—A mere misdescription of property in the sale proclamation where the parties concerned knew what had been attached and sold is a mere irregularity which would not necessarily invalidate a sale.[1] But a fundamental misdescription of the property which has misled the purchaser will be a ground for setting aside the sale.[2] The principle of caveat emptor cannot apply to such cases.[3]

The non-specification of the share of the judgment-debtor in the property sold is also a material irregularity.[4]

17. Omission or mis-statement of the value of the property.—A mere omission to state in the proclamation of sale the estimated value of the property to be sold will not be a material irregularity under the rule.[1] But in particular cases it may be, necessary to give the value in order to enable the bidders to judge the value of the property; the omission in such cases, may amount to a material irregularity.[2] bidding at all is a material irregularity.[3] If it results in substantial injury, the sale will be set aside but not otherwise.[4] O.21, R.90, Notes 17—20.

18. Omission to state the revenue or rent payable on the land.—The omission in the sale proclamation of the government revenue payable on the land is a material irregularity under the rule[1] as also a materially incorrect statement of such revenue.[2] But the omission to state the income of the property has been held not to be a material irregularity.[3]

19. Omission or mis-statement of the encumbrances over the property.—An omission to state or a mis-statement of the encumbrances on the property will be a material irregularity under this rule.[1]

20. Other mistakes in the sale proclamation.—Where the sale proclamation advertised the sale of property in satisfaction of the whole decree amount but as a matter of fact part of the decree had been satisfied it was held in the case cited below[1] that it was only an irregularity and does not render the sale a nullity.

21. Omission to beat drum.—Omission to have the drum beaten at the time of the proclamation of sale as required by O. 21, Rr. 54 and 57 is a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule.[1] But an omission to have the drum beaten at the time of the sale is not such an irregularity.[2]

22. Postponement of sale and issue of fresh proclamation.—The executing Court can postpone a sale by seven days of its own motion and for a longer period with the consent of parties. (See Note 25, infra.)

Where, a sale is adjourned under R. 69 by more than seven days a fresh proclamation is necessary, unless the same has been waived.[1] A sale held without such a fresh proclamation is liable to be set aside on the ground of material irregularity.[2]

23. Irregularities in conducting the sale—Sale within thirty days of the proclamation.—A sale held within thirty days of the date of the publication of the proclamation at the place where the property is situate, or within thirty days of the affixture of the proclamation in the Court house is vitiated by a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule; but it does not become ipso facto null and void.[1]

24. Sale on a holiday.—To hold a sale on a holiday is neither an illegality nor an irregularity within the meaning of this rule.[1]

25. Omission to hold sale at stated time and place.—As to the effect of a sale held on a day different from that on which it was notified to be held, and of which judgment-debtor could have had no notice, see Note 12 to R. 69. Where the Court ordered the sale to be held at a particular place but it was notified to be held and was actually sold at a different place, it was held that the sale was illegal.[1]

A Court is entitled to postpone a sale for a period of not more than seven days for sufficient reasons.[2] Such reasons must however, be recorded in writing; otherwise the postponement will constitute a material irregularity.[3] Where a sale is adjourned for a period of more than seven days it will be a material irregularity to hold the sale without a fresh proclamation.[4] It has also been held that where a re-sale is ordered or a sale is adjourned, the omission to fix the date and hour of the sale is a material irregularity.[5] As to whether the holding of sale at an earlier or later hour than that specified is an irregularity see Note 6 to R. 66 and the undermentioned cases.[6] See the same note and the following cases[7] as to the effect of the omission to state the place of sale, or of holding the sale at a place different from that notified.

26. Sale of property in one lot though advertised for sale in separate lots.—Where property has been ordered and advertised to be sold in separate lots, it will be a material irregularity to sell it in one lot.[1] But if there was no order for sale in separate lots though the sale proclamation described the property in several lots, it is not a material irregularity to sell all the property in one lot.[2] Again where property has been advertised for sale in one lot it is not an irregularity to sell it in separate lots.[3]

27. Irregularities regarding the order of sale of lots.—Where the decree itself directs the sale of properties in a particular order, a sale held in any other order will be vitiated by a material irregularity.[1] Where a mortgage decree does not give any direction as to the order in which the mortgaged properties are to be sold but there are a number of judgment-debtors with rights of contribution, they can apply to the executing Court to look into the equities inter se and direct a sale in consonance therewith. A failure to do so is a material irregularity.[2] In the absence of any direction in the decree, a particular course followed by the Court in selling the properties, cannot be said to constitute a gross irregularity merely because a better way of carrying out the sale was possible.[3]

Where, in the absence of a direction in the decree the executing Court fixes the order in which the properties are to be sold, any change in the order so specified will be a material irregularity unless the change is notified in time to the bidders.[4]

In the absence of a direction by the executing Court for the sale of the properties in a particular order, the sale of the items in an order different from that specified in the sale list will not be irregular.[5]

28. Other cases where the sale is not in terms of the proclamation.—It is a material irregularity for a decree-holder to cause the sale officer to announce at the time of the sale an encumbrance not stated in the proclamation and an application to notify which, had been rejected by the Court.[1] It will be equally an irregularity if without notice the property is sold free of encumbrance, when the sale proclamation advertised the sale subject to encumbrances.[2]

Where an entire interest in a property has been proclaimed and brought to sale but on the date of sale, a portion only of such property is sold without fresh proclamation does it amount to an irregularity? According to the High Courts of Allahabad, Madras and Patna it is not.[3] But according to the High Courts of Calcutta and Lahore it is a material irregularity rendering the sale liable to be set aside.[4]

29. Purchase by decree-holder without permission to bid.—See Note 7 to R. 72 ante.

30. Irregularities in the grant of permission to bid.—Where after the decree-holder had been given leave to bid and without notice to him the Court imposed a limit below which the decree-holder should not bid and the property was sold at an undervalue, it was held that the sale can be set aside for irregularity.[1] The fact that no affidavit was filed in support of an application for permission to bid will not be an irregularity.[2]

31. Sale after satisfaction of the decree.—Where after a decree has been satisfied and the satisfaction has been recorded, a sale is held in execution of the decree, the sale is a nullity[1] and therefore the matter does not fall within this rule. See Note 71 to S. 47.

If the satisfaction has not been recorded and the period for certification has expired, the Court cannot go into the question at all and an application to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree was satisfied cannot be maintained under this rule.[2] Even if the ninety days have not elapsed, there is no irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale and the matter will not fall under this rule but only under S. 47.[3]

32. Sale after an order of postponement.—A sale held after an order of postponement passed by the executing Court is a nullity whether the order was or was not communicated to the selling officer before the sale.[1]

As to the effect of sales held in contravention of a stay order see Notes 66 to S. 47 and O. 41, R. 5.

Where an order of injunction restraining the sale has been obtained but the sale is held before the order is communicated, it is a material irregularity according to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur[2] but not, according to the High Court of Allahabad.[3] Where the sale is held after the order of injunction was communicated, it is a nullity.[4]

33. Sale after attachment under R. 53.—A sale held in contravention of an attachment of the decree effected under Rule 53 is invalid as being without jurisdiction and is not a mere irregularity.[1]

34. Omission to make the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor or decree-holder parties to sale proceedings.—Where an execution is taken against a wrong representative,[1] or where the judgment-debtor dies after attachment and the properties are sold without impleading his legal representatives[2] the sale is not a nullity though it may amount to a material irregularity.

A sale held during the lifetime of the judgment-debtor but confirmed after his death without impleading his legal representatives on the record is not void.[3]

Where properties had been attached during the lifetime of the decree-holder but the sale was held after his death without impleading his legal representatives it was held that there was no irregularity.[4]

35. Non-representation of minor.—A sale held in execution of a decree against a minor is not void for the reason that no guardian had been appointed for him in the execution proceedings.[1] It will, however, be a material irregularity under this rule.[2]

Where subsequent to the decree but prior to the sale in execution the judgment-debtor had been adjudged insane and no guardian was appointed for him in the execution proceedings, it was held to constitute a material irregularity under this rule.[3]

36. Other instances of material irregularity.—The following have been held to constitute material irregularity within the meaning of this rule viz:—

(1) Collusion between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.[1]

O.21, R.90, Notes 36—37.

The following circumstances have been held to constitute no irregularity:—

(1) Omission to make an application for sale as required by R. 66.[9]

(2) Holding a sale for a sum larger than what is really due.[10]

(3) Knocking down the sale to the highest bidder for a price which is subsequently found to be too low.[11]

(4) Knocking down the sale to a lower bidder when the higher bidders are not bona fide and have no money to deposit as required.[12]

(5) Sale held without notice to a receiver who is not in possession of the property sold.[13]

Where the same property has been notified for sale in execution of two decrees, it is quite proper and regular to hold one sale in respect of both of them.[14] In the undermentioned case[15] the High Court had directed stay of sale on the judgment-debtor furnishing security. He did not furnish security, but on the day of sale offered a security which was rejected by the officer conducting the sale. Thereupon the sale was held. It was held that the sale could not be set aside on the ground that there was an impression that the sale had been postponed and consequently few bidders attended the sale.

37. Fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.—S. 311 of the old Code provided only for cases of material irregularity as a ground for setting aside a sale and did not include fraud in publishing and conducting a sale as a ground of attack. It was held under that Code that such an application came within the scope of S. 244 (now S. 47).[1] The fact that S. 312 of the old Code provided that the sale shall be confirmed in the absence of an application under S. 311 on the ground of material irregularity, was held not to deprive the Court of the power to refuse to confirm the sale where it had been brought about by fraud.[2] The present rule has been framed so as to include fraud as well, so that an application can now be made under this rule to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.[3] The effect of including fraud in this rule is to take the applications setting up fraud in publishing and conducting the sale out of the scope of S. 47 and to bring them under this rule.[4] See also Note 55 to S. 47.

The word "fraud" in this rule means "that which is dishonest and morally wrong" and does not include an irregularity.[5] The burden of proving fraud rests upon the applicant and must be proved by clear and definite evidence.[6] General and vague allegations of fraud[7] and mere proof of suspicious circumstances are not enough.[8] But it is open to a Court to make an inference of fraud from established facts taken together as a whole.[9] In order to enable an applicant to succeed, it is not necessary that the auction-purchaser should also have been a party to the fraud; the fraud of the decree-holder would be sufficient.[10] The reason is that the applicant claims relief not against the purchaser alone but also against the decree-holder. The view expressed in the undermentioned cases[11] that it must be proved that the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud is, it is submitted, not correct.

A mere under-valuation of property will not amount to fraud within the meaning of this rule.[12] But a wilful misstatement of value in the sale proclamation evidencing a deliberate design to get the property sold for a low price will amount to fraud.[13] Similarly any other wilful misstatement in the sale proclamation calculated to affect the price of the property may amount to fraud.[14] The fact that a decree-holder purchaser dissuaded others from bidding at a Court sale and thus caused the property to be sold at a low price is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a sale.[15] But if he deterred persons by threats and intimidation from attending the sale, who would otherwise have attended and bid, it would amount to fraud.[16]

See also the undermentioned cases[17] as to particular instances of fraud. See the undermentioned cases[18] for circumstances which were held not to amount to fraud.

38. Combination among bidders.—There is nothing necessarily unlawful in two or more persons agreeing not to bid against one another at an auction sale.[1] Therefore, a charge against a bidder or decree-holder that he and other bidders who have acted in concert with him have acted in such a manner as to prevent the best price from being obtained does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud, nor will proof of such concert invalidate the sale.[2] There is a distinction between an honest combination among intending purchasers and a dishonest concert for the suppression of all competition. If the object be to obtain the property at a sacrifice by artifice, the combination is fraudulent; if the object be to make a fair bargain or even to divide the property for the accommodation of the purchasers, the combination cannot be said to be fraudulent.[3]
